Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, whose chairman has advised me that the information requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of families or individuals currently registered as homeless with each district office of the maintenance section of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, whose chairman has advised me that the executive does not maintain a register of homeless persons. However, at 19 November 1990, the number of households living in temporary accommodation, secured for them under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1988, by each district office and the housing advice centre of the Housing Executive, is as follows:

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total number of dwellings owned by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each year since 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, whose chairman has advised me that the information at 31 March in each year is as follows:

	Number
1986	181,717
1987	179,910
1988	176,832

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tenants bought their dwellings from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each district in each year since 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, whose chairman has advised me that the information is not available in the precise form requested. However, figures are available for the total number of dwellings sold by the executive in each district since 1985. These comprise mainly sales to tenants, but also include a number of vacant properties sold to non-tenants in areas where housing need has been met, sales under the executive's homesteading scheme and sales to housing associations. The figures are as follows:

Housing Associations

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the financial support given to housing associations in Northern Ireland for the provision of new dwellings.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on capital funding to housing associations in Northern Ireland is not available on a basis which distinguishes between new build and rehabilitation. However, it is estimated that in 1989-90 expenditure by housing associations on new build for rent was some £19 million out of a total of over £29 million.

Civil Servants

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants from the Republic of Ireland are currently working in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: Civil servants from the Republic of Ireland are employed on the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat. The number of civil servants so employed is a matter for the Irish Government.

ENVIRONMENT

Community Charge (Hostages)

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has given to local authorities in relation to the community charge where a member of the family is a hostage in Iraq or Kuwait.

Mr. Portillo: The circumstances of British citizens held in the Gulf against their will can affect their liability to one of the community charges in a number of ways. To help local authorities reach consistent treatment my Department's advice is:

> Those who are normally resident in Kuwait or Iraq and are not registered for a personal community charge will obviously, continue without liability.
> Those who are normally resident in Britain but now detained in the Gulf should be removed from the register and have no liability for personal charge from the date of their detention if that detention lasts for more than six months.
> Those whose sole or main residence in Britain becomes unoccupied for more than six months due to their detention should not become liable to a standard community charge.

Some of this advice was included in a circular issued by my Department to all charging authorities on 5 November. The circular also gave guidance on the treatment of armed forces serving abroad. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Anti-competitive Behaviour

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 12 November, Official Report, columns 42-43, whether his Department investigates all complaints of alleged anti-competitive behaviour which it receives; and if he will indicate the stages of investigation his officials pursue when responding to allegations of anti-competitive behaviour.

Mr. Portillo: My Department investigates all complaints which appear to reveal breaches of the requirements of part I of the Local Government Act 1988. In all cases where a case is being investigated, my Department writes to the authority concerned and considers its reply. Subsequent handling of the investigation depends on the circumstances of each case.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what channels direct services organisations and direct labour organisations have open to them to allege anti-competitive behaviour on the part of local authorities; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what channels private citizens have open to them to allege anti-competitive behaviour on the part of local authorities; and if he will make a statement;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 12 November, Official Report, column 43, if he will publish his Department's guidelines or procedures for complaining of alleged anti-competitive behaviour on the part of local authorities under the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: A direct services organisation or direct labour organisation would not have an identity separate from its parent authority. It is, however, open to any organisation or individual to write to my Department if they believe that a local authority has failed to comply with the requirements of part I of the Local Government Act 1988. Those include the requirement, contained in section 7(7) of the Act, that an authority, in reaching the decision that they should carry out work subject to the requirements of the Act and in doing anything else in connection with such work before reaching such a decision, should not act in a manner having the effect or intended or likely to have the effect of restricting, distorting or preventing competition.

It would also be open to an organisation or an individual to take civil action if they believed that a local authority had contravened the provisions of the legislation.

The way in which organisations or individuals may raise matters with my Department is not the subject of any special guidelines or procedures.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many complaints his Department has received alleging anti-competitive behaviour on the part of local authorities under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Department is currently investigating complaints of alleged anti-competitive behaviour under part I of the Local Government Act 1988 in the case of 48 local authorities. The number of complaints is greater, since some individual authorities are the subject of several complaints. The Department has notified all 48 local authorities of its investigations.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many members of staff in his Department process and monitor complaints of alleged anti-competitive behaviour on the part of local authorities under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: My Department's concern with the implementation of part I of the Local Government Act 1988 goes wider than processing and maintaining complaints of alleged anti-competitive behaviour, and includes a range of other important aspects, such as responding to queries from local authorities and considering the annual reports which local authorities are required to submit under section 11 of the 1988 Act. Six departmental officials are employed full time on all aspects of the implementation of the 1988 Act. In addition, five other departmental officials are employed on this work for a significant proportion of their time.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many complaints of alleged anti-competitive behaviour, under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988, his Department is currently investigating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: This question could be answered only at disproportionate expense, since it would require information to be compiled covering a period of at least two years.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department keeps a record of complaints received alleging anti-competitive behaviour on the part of local authorities, under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Department maintains full documentation of those complaints alleging anti-competitive behaviour under part I of the Local Government Act 1988 which it investigates.

Bathing Waters

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer of 14 November, Official Report, column 164, on the quality of bathing water, if he will list all the improvement schemes for which additional treatment will be provided.

Mr. Trippier: The improvement schemes referred to in my right hon. Friend's answer of 14 November which will include additional treatment are:

Mr. Trippier: The list was included in DoE news No. 638 of 14 November 1990.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State Environment what progress has been made with th of the best practical environmental option for the of sewage sludge, which the Government, in their r to the third report of the Environment Cor published in June 1988, asked Her Majesty's insp of pollution to commission.

Mr. Trippier: I have today published the repo Practicable Environmental Option (BPEO) Disposal of Sewage Sludge" produced by the Research Centre for Her Majesty's inspecto pollution. Copies have also been placed in the Lib the House.

The report is in two parts. The first descri methodology for identifying the BPEO for sewag treatment and disposal. The second part consist extensive review of actual sludge treatment and techniques.

I would hope that this report will be of interest to the water industry in relation to sewage sludge but also in a wider context to all those faced with of examining BPEOs.

Archaeology and Planning

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State Environment when the guidance on archaeolo planning, issued for consultation in February, published.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secr State has today issued a planning policy guidance archaeology and planning. We have been most in by, and grateful for, the thought that has gone into the comments we have received in response to the consultation document issued in February. There have been more than 200 responses, coming from a wide range of representative organisations including developers, local authorities, archaeologists, conservation and amenity bodies and museums, as well as individuals.

We have taken the many comments into account in preparing the final guidance and we believe that we now have a well balance document which clearly sets out the importance of archaeology and how it should be handled in the planning process. It should go a long way to ensuring that the desirability of preserving archaeological remains is fully considered before planning decisions are made.

ENERGY

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy which copyright lawyers were consulted before authorising payment of a licence fee to MCA Merchandising for the use of the Herman Munster copyright to cover the Frank N. Stein advertising campaign.

Mr. Baldry: The Government consulted Slaughter and May, their legal advisers. Other legal advice sought by WCRS is a matter for that company.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what supplementary fees have been, or are to be paid to WCRS, the advertising agency responsible for the Frank N. Stein advertising campaign for the flotation of the electricity distribution companies, as compensation for its costs in settling the claim for breach of the Herman Munster copyright by the MCA Merchandising subsidiary of Universal Studios, Hollywood, USA.

Mr. Baldry: No supplementary fees have been paid, or are to be paid to WCRS in respect of any aspect of the claim for alleged breach of copyright by MCA Merchandising. A total of £6,000 was paid by the Government as a contribution to the licence fee, which is normal in such circumstances.

Energy Efficiency

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many people are employed in the energy efficiency office to give advice on energy efficiency for domestic hereditaments.

Mr. Baldry: The Energy Efficiency Office provides advice and information to householders through its domestic literature, which is also available through its regional offices. In addition, the EEO's new home energy efficiency scheme will provide grants for insulation and for advice on energy to eligible householders.

South Wales Small Mines Association

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (i) when he anticipates receiving the decision of the competition directorate of the European Commission, regarding the complaint about discriminatory coal purchase pricing brought by the South Wales Small Mines Association;

(2) what is the deadline of the competition directorate of the European Commission to determine the complaint from the South Wales Small Mines Association regarding National Power's alleged discriminatory coal purchase pricing under article 85 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Baldry: It is for the competition directorate of the European Commission to reach a decision, and make an announcement, about the complaint made by the South Wales Small Mines Association.

Multiple Share Applications

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received regarding the funding of further computer runs relating to fuzzy matching techniques for the discovery of multiple share applications for British Gas shares in 1986.

Mr. Wakeham: Investigations into multiple share applications for British Gas shares are continuing.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what will be the cost of the detection of multiple share allocations for the flotation of the electricity distribution companies by (a) fuzzy matching and (b) other computerised techniques; and how it will be funded.

Mr. Baldry: The precise programme of work in this area has not been decided at this stage. The cost will depend on the scope of the work and also on the number of people applying for shares.

Piper Alpha

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department carried out its own research into the fire and explosion on Piper Alpha on 24 March 1984.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department carried out its own investigation into this dangerous occurrence, making use of all available information.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy why his Department did not seek to institute legal proceedings following the explosion and fire in the gas conservation module on Piper Alpha on 24 March 1984.

Mr. Wakeham: Successful prosecutions require a significant commitment of resources, on the part of the relevant legal authorities as well as the Department. Prosecution is therefore a sanction to be applied with discretion, with regard to the likelihood of successful action and with regard to the value of the prosecution. The Department's approach to these issues was developed in collaboration with the procurator fiscal, who would alone be responsible for any decision to initiate proceedings. The dangerous occurrence on Piper Alpha on 24 March 1984 was ascribed to a design fault, probably attributable to the work of non-United Kingdom resident bodies. Also, prompt corrective action had voluntarily been taken by the operator, Occidental. In all the circumstances, the view was taken that a prosecution would have been uncertain, expensive and of little benefit.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what aspects of safety on Piper Alpha were covered in his Department's inspection of (a) February and (b) March 1984.

Mr. Wakeham: The inspection of the installation on 21 February 1984 was a standard inspection of the installation, covering the normal range of operational activities. The visit by inspectors on 25 and 26 March 1984 was an investigation of the explosion in the gas compression module on 24 March.

North Sea Installations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what were the numbers of fatal accidents on oil platforms and other installations in the North sea in each year since 1978;

(2) how many workers on North sea oil and gas installations were killed and seriously injured, respectively, in each year since 1978;

(3) how many serious accidents, excluding fatal accidents, occurred on North sea oil and gas installations in each year since 1978.

Mr. Wakeham: The number of fatalities and serious accidents—injuries to persons—on or near to offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf reported to my Department from 1978 to 1989 are as follows:

1978	4	40

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what was the complement of full-time inspectors for North sea safety duties in his Department in each year since 1978; and what was the level of vacancies;

(2) how many professional inspectors are employed by his Department on North sea oil and gas installation inspections; and what was the equivalent figure in each year since 1978;

(3) how many full-time field inspectors are now engaged in offshore installations; and what was the equivalent figure in each year since 1978.

Mr. Wakeham: The number of full-time professional inspectors employed in my Department's safety directorate, together with the complement and the number of vacancies is set out in the table.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Ene how many prohibitions or improvement notices under Health and Safety at Work etc. Act have been issued si 1978 to operators of North sea oil and gas installatio

Mr. Wakeham: Thirteen prohibition and improvem notices under the Health and Safety at Work etc Act h been served on offshore operators since 1978. inspectors have additional powers under the Mine Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 to prohibit activity or the use of equipment or to requ improvements to be made. These powers have b designed specifically for offshore operations and are u extensively.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Ene when his Department first considered the installation sub-sea emergency shut-off valves on oil and gas pipeli in the North sea.

Mr. Wakeham: Following development of sub- valve technology in the early 1980s, amendments w introduced in 1986 to the Institute of Petroleum pipel safety code on the advice of a committee on which pipelines inspectorate was represented. These amendme recommended that risk assessment should be undertal for new large inventory trunk and interfield pipelines assess the need for sub-sea valves. In August 1988 director of safety wrote to all pipeline operators ask them to re-evaluate immediately the need for sub- isolation systems on all existing pipelines.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Ene what percentage of serious and fatal accidents on No sea oil and gas installations were investigated by Department in each year since 1978.

Mr. Wakeham: It is the policy of my safety director to investigate all fatal accidents on offshore installatio The percentage of serious accidents investigated since 1 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Achievements

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Ene if he will list the achievements of his Department si June 1987.

Mr. Wakeham: Legislation has been passed provid for the reorganisation and privatisation of the electri supply industry in England and Wales. Flotation of the regional electricity companies is going ahead according plan and preparations are well advanced for the flotat of the two generating companies in February 1991.

Government policies on taxation and licensing h ensured continued successful exploitation of the Uni Kingdom continental shelf. My Department has f accepted the conclusions and recommendations of L Cullen's inquiry into the Piper Alpha accident. Offshore Supplies Office has continued to suppo United Kingdom offshore supplies industry on the Un Kingdom continental shelf and in international mark

The Energy Efficiency Office has continued to prom energy efficiency. Its programmes have secured recurr annual savings now worth over £500 million per yea has introduced the best practice programme to advance and spread good practice in energy efficiency, and developed the home energy efficiency scheme to provide grants for insulation measures and advice for low-income households.

My Department has facilitated British Coal's continued restructuring of their business in response to changing market circumstances. In particular the Coal Industry Act 1990 introduced deficiency grant, eliminating British Coal's accumulated group deficit of £6 billion at 31 March 1990 and enabling outstanding borrowings to be reduced by over £4 billion.

In the nuclear field, following the decision to retain nuclear power in public ownership, a new company, Nuclear Electric plc, has been set up to own those reactors previously owned by the CEGB. The restructuring of the Atomic Energy Authority has continued in light of current and future business prospects.

On renewable sources of energy, my Department has published a 10-year forward development strategy as Energy Paper 55, doubled Government expenditure on Research and Development and introduced the first renewables order under the non-fossil fuel obligation of the Electricity Act 1989.

As part of the United Kingdom's contribution to the international discussions on climate change my Department prepared a report which evaluated energy-related greenhouse gas emissions and measures to ameliorate them—Energy Paper 58.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish a table showing the percentage increase in rank order since April 1979 in average weekly earnings in real terms for full-time adult male manual workers, including overtime and excluding absence, in mechanical engineering, motor-vehicle and parts industries, clothing, textiles, footwear, domestic electrical applicances, banking and finance, estate agency and property dealing, building societies, insurance business services, water, gas, telecommunications, petroleum tanker-drivers, underground coal-miners, national health service ancillary staff, national health service maintenance staff, hospital porters, ambulance men, hospital ward orderlies and primary teachers.

Mr. Jackson: Information on the average gross weekly earnings of full-time adult male manual employees is published by agreement, by industry and by occupation in part A of the annual new earnings survey reports for the years in question. Information is not available for manual workers in all the categories specified, nor do all the job descriptions specified precisely match the recognised standard classifications used in the survey. Information on the retail prices index (all items), to convert the figures to 1990 prices, is published for April 1990 in table 6·4 of the latest Employment Gazette, and in table 26 of the annual supplement to Economic Trends for April of earlier years. Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

George Kenyon

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has received any representations regarding the death of George Kenyon at David Holt Plastics, Haslingden, Rossendale, on 24 May 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I have received several letters from hon. Members about this case. Some enclosed copies of letters from the public urging me to reopen the manslaughter case against Mr. David Holt. However, that is a question for my right hon. Friend the Attorney-General, who is well aware of the circumstances of the case.

Following an investigation by HSE inspectors, legal proceedings under the Health and Safety at Work Etc. Act 1974 and the Factories Act 1961 were instituted against the two directors of David Holt Plastics Ltd. The company and the two directors received fines totalling £47,000.

In addition, the Crown Prosecution Service also brought charges of manslaughter against the directors. Norman Holt pleaded guilty and received a year's prison sentence suspended for two years. David Holt's plea of not guilty to manslaughter was accepted by the prosecution, although the judge ordered the case to remain on file.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has received any reports from the Health and Safety Executive regarding the death of George Kenyon at David Holt Plastics, Haslingden, Rossendale, on 24 May 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The HSE has kept me informed of the details of the case, but has not produced a formal report. Following an investigation by HSE inspectors, legal proceedings under the Health and Safety at Work Etc. Act 1974 and the Factories Act 1961 were instituted against the two directors of David Holt Plastics Ltd. The company and the two directors received fines totalling £47,000. In addition, the Crown Prosecution Service also brought charges of manslaughter against the directors. Norman Holt pleaded guilty and received a year's prison sentence suspended for two years. David Holt's plea of not guilty to manslaughter was accepted by the prosecution, although the judge ordered the case to remain on file.

Disability

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration is being given to enacting anti-discrimination legislation to make unlawful discrimination against disabled people in employment and other areas modelled on the recent American Disabilities Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The consultative document "Employment and Training for People with Disabilities", which was published on 29 June, sets out various options for encouraging the employment of people with disabilities. What action to take will be considered in the light of the comments we receive.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of Stat Employment what is being done to ensure that the cent. quota for the employment of disabled people is met.

Mr. Jackson: A number of specific steps are tak the Employment Service which include:

—an annual postal inquiry, into the extent to employers within the scope of the scheme (those with more workers) are employing registered disabled p —employers revealed by the inquiry to be employi than the 3 per cent. quota are informed of their duti obligations under the scheme, including the need to permits before engaging other than registered di people; —authorised officers conduct a continuing program inspections of the record which employers who are scope of the scheme are obliged to keep;

—wide distribution of the booklet "Disabled P (Employment) Acts 1944 and 1958. Employers tions: Notes for Guidance", and of the Emplo Service's code of good practice on the employm disabled people.

However, the main thrust of the Department's effo this area is through disablement resettlement offi actively helping the resettlement of people disabilities; and by disablement advisory service tea promoting constructive employment policies to people with disabilities.

Health and Safety at Work, ect. Act

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of Sta Employment whether the Health and Safety at Wor Act applies to Crown premises; and if it is enfor against such premises.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety at Work, et 1974 is enforceable against persons not premises. Th does apply to the Crown, but it cannot be enforced a the Crown in the courts or by the use of enforc notices. In practice, the Health and Safety Executi agreed with the Crown to seek compliance with healt safety standards through a system of Crown notices. notices either require the Crown to make improve within a specified time limit (Crown improvement n or to stop work immediately (Crown prohibition n

Youth Training

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of Stat Employment whether he has made any assessment financial contribution made by employers to the c youth training.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the a given to him on 2 July 1990 at column 472.

New Businesses

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of Stat Employment what is the net number of new busi being created each week so far in 1990.

Mr. Forth: During 1989, the latest period for figures have been published by my Departmen number of businesses registered for VAT increas nearly 1,700 a week on average. Early indications data collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise there continues to be a substantial surplus of registr over deregistrations.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Bellotti: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he has taken to ensure that every training and enterprise council makes provision within its area for those with special needs.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 20 November 1990]: Each training and enterprise council (TEC) is required to set out in its corporate and business plans how it intends to meet the requirements of people with special needs. In approving plans my Department will ensure that appropriate proposals showing how the TEC will address this issue are set out. TECs are bound by their contract with my Department to implement the provision of their plans.

SCOTLAND

Owner-occupation

19. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the level of owner-occupation in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Over 50 per cent. of the total housing stock in Scotland is now owner occupied, compared to 35 per cent. in 1979.

Uplands Afforestation

20. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Forestry Commission to discuss the environmental consequences of afforestation in the uplands.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend met the Director General of the Forestry Commission in September when they discussed a wide range of forestry matters.

Constitutional Reform

21. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on Scottish opinion concerning constitutional reform in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The 1979 referendum demonstrated that, when faced with the full implications of constitutional reform, the Scottish electorate had no enthusiasm for it. Opinion polls have repeatedly indicated that the voters do not regard constitutional change as a priority issue.

Steel Plant Closures

22. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of British Steel to discuss plant closures.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the Chairman of British Steel on 7 November.

Redundancies

23. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with firms in Renfrew district about impending redundancies; and what practical assistance his Department has been able to offer.

Mr. Lang: My Department is in close touch with companies in Renfrew district that have announced redundancies and has ensured that they are aware of the assistance available, through regional selective assistance, towards capital expenditure designed to create or safeguard jobs. Decisions on such investment are matters for the companies themselves.

Steel Industry

24. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met trade union representatives from the steel industry to discuss future steel production in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend last met representatives of the steel trade unions on 14 November, when he met representatives of the Clydesdale unions. The discussion covered prospects for that plant.

26. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet the chairman of British Steel to discuss the scottish steel industry.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend met the Chairman of British Steel on 7 November. No further meetings are planned at present.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many reports of potential Japanese or German purchasers of British Steel plants in Lanarkshire his Department has received and investigated.

Mr. Lang: Two reports of Japanese interest have been investigated. I am not aware of any reports of potential German purchasers of British Steel plants in Scotland.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report statements made about the Scottish steel industry by the Scottish Industry Minister over the period 8 to 12 November.

Mr. Lang: Over the period in question my only statements about the Scottish steel industry were made in response to the press and to the Young Conservative conference. Official records are not available for either of these occasions.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has given to Locate in Scotland and British embassies about British Steel's willingness as sellers of its plants in Lanarkshire.

Mr. Lang: No specific information has been passed regarding British Steel's willingness to sell its plants.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the dates over the past 12 months when he has met the chairman or other senior executives of British Steel; and when he next expects to meet them.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend met the chairman of British Steel and his chief executive on 15 May, 16 October and 7 November this year. He would expect to meet the chairman of British Steel again whenever appropriate.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had or intends to have with British Steel about its future policy with regard to retaining or abandoning Glasgow as its price basing point.

Mr. Lang: Policy on price-basing points has not arisen during discussions between my right hon. and learned Friend and the chairman of British Steel.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what instructions he has given to Locate in Scotland and British embassies about advertising the possible availability for sale of British Steel assets in Scotland; and when these instructions were first sent.

Mr. Lang: The assets belong to the company, not to the Government; therefore it is not for the Government to advertise the assets for sale.

Law Centres

25. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision is being made in introducing additional law centres into Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no plans to introduce additional law centres in Scotland from centrally provided funds.

Local Government Finance

27. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of local government income in Scotland comes from (a) the charge payer, (b) the business rate payer and (c) revenue support grant.

Mr. Lang: On the basis of local authorities' budget estimates for 1990-91: 22 per cent. of local authority income will come from their community chargepayers; 23·4 per cent. from their business ratepayers; and 54·6 per cent. from revenue support grant and specific grants.

36. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the unpaid community charge in Tayside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations about unpaid community charges from people living in Tayside region, including those who are concerned about the effect this may have on community charge levels next year. Local authorities have a number of powers available to them to enable them to collect arrears of community charge and they have a duty to make rigorous use of these to collect the charges due to them. It would be grossly unfair for any authority to increase next year's bills to cover non-payment and, instead, authorities should take account of any shortfall in income by adjusting their expenditure plans.

32. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on representations which have been made to him for the reform or abolition of the poll tax.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations about different aspects of the community charge arrangements. We are always prepared to consider any suggestions for making the present arrangements more effective, and to take action where appropriate.

Scottish Homes

28. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet the chairman of Scottish Homes concerning the provision of more housing.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I regularly meet Sir James Mellon, the chairman of Scottish Homes. Our last meeting took place on 23 October, when discussion covered a range of strategic issues, including the provision of housing. No date has yet been set for our next meeting.

Strathclyde Schools

29. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of Strathclyde regional council's education committee, to discuss the quality of education in schools in Strathclyde; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has not recently had any such meeting. He met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on 6 July to discuss financial support for local authority services including education, and will do so again on 26 November.

Pittenweem Harbour

30. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if it is his intention to meet representatives of the fishing industry in north-east Fife to discuss the development of Pittenweem harbour.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Such a meeting was held in the hon. and learned Gentleman's constituency last week.

Integrated Transport System

31. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to ensure that Scotland has an integrated transport system by the year 2000; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As my right hon. and learned Friend told the House on 17 October 1990, the Government believe in a balanced transport policy, providing users with as much choice as possible between competing forms of transport.

Manufacturing Employment

33. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs in manufacturing have been lost since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The net job losses in manufacturing in Scotland between 1979 and 1989 totalled 210,700. This figure should be regarded as provisional, as it may change when more data become available.

The table shows a components of change analysis of jobs in the manufacturing industry in Scotland between 1979 and 1989. The net loss of 210,700 includes 187,000 due to plant closures; 124,800 due to plant contraction; 58,400 new jobs due to plant openings; and 42,700 due to plant expansions.

Scotch Whisky Association

34. Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next meet representatives of the Scotch Whisky Association.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to meet representatives of the Scotch Whisky Association.

Renfrewshire Economy

35. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans his Department has to improve the condition of the economy and manufacturing industry in Renfrewshire.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office continues to support economic development in Renfrewshire through the provision of financial assistance towards capital investment which creates or maintains employment, through the attraction of inward investment to the area, through its involvement in the Ferguslie Park partnership and through its support, through the SDA, for the Inverclyde initiative and a number of other local initiatives. In addition, Inverclyde benefits from enterprise zone status. For the future, the Renfrewshire local enterprise company will pursue economic development and training proposals within the framework of Scottish Enterprise.

GATT Talks

37. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to defend Scotland's agricultural interests and rural areas; and what representations he has made regarding the general agreement on tariffs and trade talks which are taking place.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The arable and dairy sectors in Scotland have generally experienced a favourable year in 1990.

In the livestock sector, however, farm incomes are expected to fall again this year. The Government have already acted, by intervention in the beef sector, by raising the suckler cow premium in the less-favoured areas to the maximum sum payable, and by bringing forward the two advance payments of the sheep annual premium. The circumstances of livestock farmers in the hills and uplands in Scotland are currently being considered in the annual hill farming review.

My right hon. and learned Friend contributes fully to the Government's policy towards the general agreement on tariffs and trade.

Steel Mills

38. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met shop stewards from the Ravenscraig strip mill and Dalzell plate mill to discuss the future of the mills.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend met representatives of the Ravenscraig unions, covering the strip mill, on 10 October. I met representatives of the Dalzell trade unions on 15 October.

Earnings

39. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to improve the gathering of average earnings statistics for the regions of Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: The Employment Department has no plans to change the new earnings survey sampling arrangements at present.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the level of average earnings is in the Borders region.

Mr. Rifkind: The new earnings survey is the only source of information on average earnings for areas within Scotland. It is not possible to provide an estimate of average earnings for the Borders region because the new earnings survey sample does not give sufficiently reliable estimates for this region.

Roads

40. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the rate of progress of upgrading Scottish roads.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The upgrading of the Scottish road network is progressing well. Particularly rapid progress continues to be made on our 1987 manifesto commitment to upgrade the A74 to motorway standard. Three sections of the route are now under construction and further sections will follow as resources and completion of statutory procedures allow.

Another of our priorities is the early completion of the central Scotland motorway network. Further extensions to the existing M74, M8 and M80 are planned over the next few years. Indeed, advance works are soon to commence on the northward extension of the existing M74 towards Glasgow with main works following on next year.

As well as these important additions to Scotland's motorway network, improvements will continue to be made on strategic trunk routes as well as other localised but worthwhile projects.

The significant increase in motorway and trunk road funding in recent years is evidence of the Government's commitment to the provision of the best possible trunk road network to serve Scotland in the latter half of the nineties and into the next century.

Nature Conservation

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what replies he has sent to the Scottish Sports Council's letter of 28 September about the organisation of nature conservation and countryside matters.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Sports Council letter of 28 September was in fact a response to the consultation paper on Scotland's Natural Heritage and the views expressed in it were taken into account along with all other such expressions of views as part of the consultation process. A specific reply would not therefore normally be issued but an acknowledgement was sent on 9 October. As the council published its response and it was also raised with me by the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell), I have responded to the Chairman on 20 November and released my reply to the media. A copy has also been sent to the hon. Member for Linlithgow. It makes clear the Government's view that the access and recreation functions of the Countryside Commission for Scotland are most appropriately transferred to the new body, Scottish Natural Heritage, which will be best placed to offer advice on all issues affecting the natural heritage.

Private Detectives

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what authority the Central Legal Office used private detectives to monitor the behaviour of Carol Campbell.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Central Legal Office was acting on the instructions of Dumfries and Galloway health board which took the decision to use private detectives in this case in the light of legal advice from senior counsel and the Central Legal Office.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's policy on the use of private detectives by the Central Legal Office.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This is a matter for individual health boards in the light of legal advice.

Conservation

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all those sites which have been (a) designated and (b) proposed for designation as (i) special protection areas under the European Community directive on the Conservation of Wild Birds or (ii) Ramsar sites under the convention on Wetlands of International Importance.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for designated sites is set out in the table. Sites are designated by my right hon. and learned Friend on the recommendation of the Nature Conservancy Council. Those sites for which NCC has already made, or intends to make, a recommendation for designation are listed at table 3.1 of the Council's publication "Protecting Internationally Important Birds Sites", which is lodged in the Library.

Cancer Screening

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects a computerised call and recall system will be set up in order to allow all Scottish women to have regular cervical screening in whichever health board area they live.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Fully computerised call and recall systems are in operation in all health board areas except Highland and Lothian which have partially computerised systems. These boards expect to have full systems soon, Highland this financial year, and Lothian next financial year. In addition around 600 general practitioners now use GPASS—general practice administration system for Scotland—which also provides a computerised call and recall for cervical cytology.

Pelagic Fishermen

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish Pelagic Fishermen's Association on the withdrawal of the Export Credits Guarantee Department cover on trade with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My noble Friend the Minister for Fisheries in Scotland has discussed the matter with the Scottish Pelagic Fishermen's Association, and is aware of the concerns of others in the pelagic industry in Scotland, regarding changes in the ECGD's arrangements covering trade with the USSR. My noble Friend is looking into the matter on their behalf and will write to the hon. Member when he has completed his inquiries.

Wild Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total annual expenditure incurred by the Forestry Commission in controlling the numbers of the wild fox population.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) on 1 November at column 723.

Forests

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans the Government have with regard to continued public access to forests being disposed of by the Forestry Commission.

Mr. Rifkind: The Forestry Commission welcomes the public on foot to all its woodlands, provided that this does not conflict with forestry operations and that there is no legal or other constraint on public access.

In answer to a question from my hon. Friend on 16 June 1989, Official Report, columns 544-45, I made a statement on the Forestry Commission's disposals programme. In this I expressed the Government's concern that the general public should continue to enjoy access to those forests to be disposed of by the Commission in a way which is compatible with management for forestry and other purposes.

My right hon. Friends and I have given careful consideration to ways of achieving this objective. In doing so, we have had regard to the nature of access enjoyed by the public at present and the need to ensure that any measures which we adopt are effective, avoid needless bureaucracy and achieve a proper balance between public enjoyment and the ability of the new owner to manage his woodland.

We have concluded that it would not be appropriate to proceed by way of new legislation, since this could not be framed in a sufficiently flexible way to cover the widely differing circumstances affecting woodlands throughout Great Britain. The option of imposing access conditions on sale has also had to be ruled out on the basis of legal advice that these would be of doubtful effect against subsequent owners.

Instead, we have decided that the best way forward will be for the Government to ask the Forestry Commission to give advance notice to local authorities in England, Scotland and Wales of intended disposals of woodlands under its management, and to offer to enter into legal agreements with them which will provide for continued public access to the woodlands after sale. Such agreements will be compatible with the management of the woodlands for forestry and other purposes and will be binding on subsequent owners. These arrangements will apply to those woodlands where there are no existing legal or other constraints on public access to the land, and it will, of course, be up to individual local authorities to decide whether they wish to enter into an agreement with the Forestry Commission for any particular woodland prior to sale.

We see a number of advantages in these procedures. They can be introduced quickly. They will be tailored to suit local circumstances. Most importantly, the elected representatives of local people will be fully involved in the process, so reflecting the value that we attach to continued public use of the woodlands concerned.

The Forestry Commission, with the co-operation of the Countryside Commission and the Countryside Commission for Scotland, will publish Guidelines setting out the details of these arrangements, after consulting with appropriate public and private bodies concerned with public access to the countryside, forestry and land management.

We intend that the new arrangements will be introduced as soon as possible. In the meantime, the Forestry Commission will defer the sale of woodlands which are particularly sensitive in relation to public access.

By taking this initiative, we are demonstrating the Government's firm commitment to maintaining and improving public access to the countryside.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of staff the Greater Glasgow health board has in its public relations departments; what is the annual budget and running cost of this department and what is the value of the contract awarded by the board to an outside public relations consultancy to advise the board as to how it might improve its communications with the public and staff.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 19 November 1990]: The public relations department of Greater Glasgow health board employs three officers and a secretary; expenditure for 1989-90 was £100,000 per annum. The value of any contracts placed with outside consultants is a matter of commercial confidence.

CIVIL SERVICE

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what progress has been made towards achieving equality of opportunity for women in the civil service.

Mr. Mellor: A report giving full details of progress made in 1989 has today been published by HMSO. I have arranged for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgage Repayments

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average increase in repayments per week on the average mortgage in each region between 1 June 1988 and now.

Mr. Maples: Information for an average new mortgage is in the table. Details of average amounts outstanding on all mortgages by region are not available.

Tanzania and Uganda

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the estimated cash flow saving per year to Tanzania and Uganda if all official bilateral creditors were to implement Trinidad terms for their debt.

Mr. Maples: Tanzania and Uganda owe bilateral official creditors about $2·7 billion and $0·5 billion respectively. Annual interest payments required in order to prevent these debt stocks from continuing to rise would be about $150 million for Tanzania, and $15 million for Uganda. These estimates take account of the different mix of concessional/non-concessional loans outstanding to the two countries. In order to repay the full stock of debt, average future total payments would have to be even higher. The application of Trinidad terms by all bilateral official creditors would mean no payments would be made for five years, with amounts paid rising steadily thereafter, so that the one third of the stock of debt remaining after the write-off would have been repaid after 25 years.

Premium Bonds

Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will supply figures for the numbers of individuals purchasing premium bonds for each year from 1979 to date.

Mr. Maples: The numbers of individuals purchasing premium bonds is not available. The number of purchases of premium bonds for each calendar year from 1979 to date has been as follows:

	Thousands
1979	4,463·1
1980	4,103·1
1981	3,674·1
1982	3,298·3

1988	2,036·7
1989	1,418·0
1990	[1]541·8

[1] January to October: provisional.

Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to reduce the level of the minimum premium bond investment from £100.

Mr. Maples: No.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the proposed amendment to the international monetary fund's articles of agreement.

Mr. Maples: The third amendment to the articles of agreement of the IMF empowers the fund to suspend the voting and related rights of members who do not fulfil their obligations under the fund's articles. This power is intended, in particular, to enable suspension of members in protracted arrears to the fund. The Government support the amendment. A Command Paper on the amendment is now available from the Vote Office.

TRANSPORT

Coach Speed Limiters

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to change the present annual testing arangements for public service vehicle coach speed limiters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: We are planning to incorporate a check of speed limiters into the annual PSV roadworthiness test as a statutory test item from 1 April 1991 and we shall be consulting on detailed proposals shortly. Once this change has been made any vehicle which is found to be in breach of the relevant regulations will fail the test. Until that time we shall be continuing to run the special campaign to check speed limiters during the PSV roadworthiness test. If vehicles which fall within the category to be tested are found not to have a speed limiter fitted, enforcement action will be taken.

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the policy towards the obligation to fit a speed limiter to a public service vehicle coach be dependent on the owner or operator's declaration that vehicle is capable of achieving 70 mph.

Mr. Chope: It is the legal responsibility of the operat of a coach to determine whether or not any partic vehicle needs to have a speed limiter fitted. It would impracticable for the Department to road test ev vehicle to determine its maximum speed capability, but are well aware which makes of coach are likely to req speed limiters.

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State Transport if he will make a statement on the level of pu service vehicle coach speed limiter fitment as it aff vehicles first registered between 1 April 1984 and 31 Ma 1989.

Mr. Chope: All coaches which have a maximum sp capability in excess of 70 mph, and which were first u since 1 April 1984 must now have speed limiters fit Operators with coaches which were first used betwee April 1974 and 31 March 1984 have until 31 March 1 to comply. Any operators found in breach of regulations risk tough punitive action as part of our spe enforcement campaign.

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State Transport how many civil servants are currently emplo (a) full time and (b) part time by his Department on c defence; what the total costs of employing staff on c defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staf be transferred to work on other duties.

Mr. Freeman: The information required is as follo

My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary announced on 16 October that he had initiated a review of the options for the future of civil defence arrangements in the light of east-west relations. Future levels of expenditure on civil defence will depend upon the outcome of that review.

Wheel Clamping

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider legislation to regulate car-clamping activities, other than those carried out by the police or their express agents.

Mr. Chope: I am keeping the matter under review.

Motor Cyclists (Training)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what facilities will be available by 1 December within (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland for the basic training necessary for obtaining a provisional motor cycle driving licence after 1 December.

Mr. Chope: Sites for use for basic training have b approved at Kirkwall in Orkney, and at Lerwick Shetland. I expect the operators of both these sites to offering basic training courses from 1 December. Un the regulations, all residents of the islands surrounding mainlands of Orkney and Shetland are exempt from requirement to undergo an approved basic training cou before riding on the road unaccompanied. They are a exempt from the need to produce a certificate completion of an approved training course in order to t an "L" test with the Driving Standards Agency. T follows the precedent of the exemptions for the exist part I motor cycle test which basic training will superse

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that ther adequate provision for the compulsory basic training learner motor cyclists living in remote rural areas.

Mr. Chope: Since July my officials have been work closely with motor cycle training organisations, retail road safety officers and ACPO in a joint action group ensure that the whole of Great Britain is well covered training sites, and training organisations. I expect almost the whole of Great Britain to be within 30 miles of a site operated by an approved training body. I welcome the fact that in the Highland region, the regional council has let a contract for the supply of training at 11 sites that might not be commercially viable.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will consider the introduction of a fixed period exemption for learner motor cyclists through the issue of a provisional licence for the duration of the training period to those living in remote areas not served by public transport.

Mr. Chope: Compulsory basic training is designed to improve the safety of all new learner motor cycle and moped riders on our roads. There is no road safety benefit in allowing some riders to avoid the training that others are required to take and after consultation I am satisfied that there will be adequate coverage of facilities except in the smaller islands where a total exemption applies.

Tactile Surfaces

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what research his Department is carrying out into tactile surfaces to warn the blind, and advise as to safe routes and information points; when the results of the research will be published and advice notes circulated to highway authorities; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what action he intends to take to ensure standardisation of tactile paving and similar initiatives across the country as a whole.

Mr. Freeman: Advice was issued to all local authorities by my Department in 1986 on the use of a specific tactile surface in conjunction with dropped kerbs at controlled crossings. Similar advice will shortly be issued to local authorities on the use of the same tactile surface at uncontrolled crossings and side streets.

My Department has also commissioned research into the usefulness of a range of other tactile surfaces to provide guidance and warning for blind and partially sighted pedestrians. Trials with those surfaces are currently under way and we will issue advice early in 1991 to local authorities on the appropriate use of each surface in the pedestrian environment.

Public Transport

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many licensed public transport vehicles have operated within the United Kingdom on an annual basis from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Chope: The information for the end of December each year is as follows:

Licensed public transport vehicles with nine or more seats: United Kingdom

Leighton Linslade Bypass

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether, during the construction of the Leighton Linslade southern bypass by Bedfordshire county council, he will agree to an access from the Totternhoe Lime and Stone Company to the bypass; whether such an access is permitted within the existing guidelines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Leighton Linslade southern bypass will ultimately form part of the east-west route referred to in the White Paper "Roads for Prosperity". This will be a major strategic route from the M40 to the east coast ports.

The Secretary of State would not wish to see a direct access from the Totternhoe Lime and Stone Company on to the bypass for reasons of safety and because it would restrict the free flow of traffic.

Existing guidelines indicate that such accesses should be restricted in the interests of traffic and safety.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of staff employed by his Department; and under what headings they are employed.

Mr. Freeman: A total of 16,675 staff are currently employed by the Department of Transport, including its executive agencies, under the following main headings:

	Percentage of total staff
Department of Transport Central including—	43
Public transport
Highways safety and traffic
Aviation, shipping and international work
Personnel management and finance
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	35
Driving Standards Agency	13

Cyclists

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of consultation his Department has with cycling organisations; and what action is taken to encourage local highway authorities to similarly consult with cyclists over matters concerning access and safety.

Mr. Chope: We have regular discussion with cycling organisations on local, regional and national issues affecting cycling. We consult the main organisations representing cycling on our proposed publications and statutory regulations in the traffic and signing field. Individual schemes affecting trunk roads can be discussed at regional office level.

It is for local highway authorities to decide for themselves how to consult local cycling interests on issues affecting their roads. We are aware that many authorities have established helpful relationships in their areas.

North Sea Installations (Inspections)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many inspectors have been deployed full time on the inspection of North sea oil and gas installations in each year since 1978; and what was the establishment in each year.

Mr. McLoughlin: Marine surveyors in my Department undertake the examination of fire-fighting arrangements and life-saving appliances on offshore installations on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy. Work on offshore activities is integrated with other duties of marine surveyors and is estimated to account for about eight man years in 1978 rising to 12 man years in 1987, where it has remained. There is no established complement of surveyors for these duties and surveyors are made available whenever they are required.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions have been mounted in each year since 1978 following inspections by his staff of North sea oil and gas installations.

Mr. McLoughlin: None. The enforcement of safety legislation for offshore installations is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy.

Drink-Driving

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total number of road accidents, injuries and fatalities which took place when the driver was found to be over the legal alcohol limit; and if he will show injuries and fatalities separately for children aged under five years, for the years 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Chope: It is estimated that in 1988 there were 14,600 injury accidents in which at least one driver or rider involved was over the legal alcohol limit. It is estimated that 840 people were killed in those accidents, 5,650 were seriously injured and 16,200 were slightly injured. Figures for 1989 are not final, as returns from coroners are not yet complete, but current indications suggest that the final outturn will be very similar to the 1988 levels.

Children under five years of age make up only a small proportion of casualties in drink-drive accidents. In 1988 there were four children under five killed, 23 seriously injured and 123 slightly injured in accidents where it was established beyond doubt that at least one driver or rider was over the legal alcohol limit. In 1989 the corresponding figures so far are three killed, 25 seriously injured and 108 slightly injured.

Community Transport

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which local authorities and passenger transport authorities financially support community transport initiatives in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Freeman: The passenger transport executives and many councils support special needs transport for the elderly or mobility handicapped. We do not however have comprehensive information about local authority support for community transport initiatives.

HOME DEPARTMENT

PC Surinder Singh

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State Home Department how much it cost the Nottingh police authority to defend the case of racial discrin brought by PC Surinder Singh; and how much it Commission for Racial Equality to prosecute the

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand that the total cost case for both Nottinghamshire police authority Commission for Racial Equality have yet determined. I will write to the hon. Member as soo information is available.

Police Cells

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State Home Department what guidelines are provided Department on the use of wicket gates in police c

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Home Office guidance on th cell door service hatches (known as "wicket specifies that where cell doors are fitted with a dro service hatch, the hatch should not be left open w cell is occupied by a prisoner.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State Home Department how many prisoners were being police cells at the latest date for which inform available.

Mrs. Rumbold: On Wednesday 21 Novemb prisoners were held in police cells.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State Home Department what his Department's guidel on the care of suicidal people in police stations; an that information is contained.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Home Office has iss guidelines on the care of persons in police custo suicidal tendencies. The codes of practice iss accordance with section 66 of the Police and C Evidence Act 1984 require custody officers to sur force medical examiner if any detainee appears to medical attention, which would include a perso known suicidal tendencies. It is for chief police of issue any instructions necessary to ensure th requirements of the codes are met.

Police Complaints System

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State Home Department (1) if his Department will b collect and monitor data on the ethnic ori complainants in the statistics they gather from th forces in the United Kingdom in order to ass effectiveness of the police complaints system;

(2) what is his policy in respect of the case for th Complaints Authority to gather data on the ethnic of complainants in cases that it has dealt with.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No central data are currently c on complainants since they are not always the ag party and sometimes have no direct involvement complaint. Complaints of racially discriminatory viour accounted for less than 1 per cent. of all con made against the police in 1989, both in the Metro police district and elsewhere in England and Wal

The Police Complaints Authority does not seek personal data of any kind from police forces for statistical purposes, nor has it specific powers to do so. I understand, however, that the authority intends to start publishing details of the number of complaints of racially discriminatory behaviour in its annual report for 1990.

Distress Warrants

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of distress warrants issued by magistrates courts in 1989.

Mr. John Patten: Around 590,000 distress warrants in respect of fine and fee accounts and maintenance accounts were issued by magistrates courts in 1989.

Gaming

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the regulation of the promotion of gaming by radio advertising.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: One reflection of our well-established policy that demand for gambling should not be encouraged unduly is that neither gaming nor betting may be advertised by broadcast. Subject to that, we are considering advice from the Gaming Board for Great Britain on proposals by the Bingo Association of Great Britain that the current prohibition on the advertising in any medium of specific licensed bingo clubs as places where gaming takes place, under the Gaming Act 1968, should be revised so as to allow the advertising of bingo clubs as such both in print and by radio.

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants are currently employed (a) full time and (b) part time by his Department on civil defence; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staff to be transferred to work on other duties.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is as follows:

Number of full-time staff employed on 16 November 1990	Number of part-time staff employed on 16 November 1990	Total cost 1989-90 £	Estimated total cost 1990-91 £

My right hon. and learned Friend announced in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 16 October at column 773 that he had initiated a review of the options for the future of civil defence arrangements in the light of east-west relations. Future levels of expenditure on civil defence will depend on the outcome of that review.

Malicious Communications

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish data for 1989 relating to prosecutions under the Malicious Communications Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1989" and its five supplementary volumes were published on 16 November 1990. Copies are available in the Library.

Information on the Malicious Communications Act 1988 is given in the table.

Michael Hickey

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response has been given by the governor of Long Lartin to the request that the psychiatrist Dr. McKeith be permitted to examine Michael Hickey.

Mrs. Rumbold: A request for a visit by Dr. McKeith was made in a letter from Mr. Hickey's solicitors on 13 November 1990. There are no objections to Dr. McKeith examining Mr. Hickey.

Birmingham Public Inquiry Office

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he plans to open the proposed Birmingham public inquiry office; and whether he has yet identified premises for its location.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We intend to open the office when the necessary funding can be made available. The location will be the immigration office at Birmingham airport.

Alcohol Consumption (Public Places)

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the advice on new byelaws prohibiting the drinking of alcohol in public places to be issued to local authorities.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Details of the new model byelaw prohibiting the consumption of intoxicating liquor in designated public places were issued to district and borough councils in England and Wales in Home Office circular No 88/1990 on 29 October. A copy of the circular is available in the Library.

ENERGY

Piper Alpha

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if any of Lord Cullen's report was not included in the two published volumes;

(2) why his departmental press office advised the press that the Cullen report was over 800 pages.

Mr. Wakeham: Lord Cullen's report, as received by me on 22 October, ran to over 900 pages in typescript. My departmental press office, when approached, advised the press prior to publication that the report was a "substantial" document. The report as printed by HMSO was proof-read by a team under the supervision of Lord Cullen himself. The printed version, as the hon. Member will be aware, is about 500 pages long.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will review the proposed timetable for privatisation of PowerGen following the resignation of its chairman.

Mr. Wakeham: No. It remains the Government's firm intention, subject to market conditions, to offer shares in National Power and PowerGen for sale to the public in February 1991.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what percentage fees are to be paid to the companies underwriting the flotation of the electricity distribution companies.

Mr. Wakeham: The commission rates to be paid to the underwriters of the sale of the regional electricity companies, subject to the terms of the underwriting agreements, will be

United Kingdom primary underwriting	0·1700
United Kingdom sub-underwriting	1·2500
Overseas underwriting	1·2448

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the firms underwriting the flotation of the electricity distribution companies.

Mr. Wakeham: The names of the firms underwriting the offers for sale of the regional electricity companies are set out in the prospectus.

PowerGen

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) when he last met Sir Graham Day or spoke to him on the telephone prior to Friday 16 November;

(2) when he was informed of the imminent resignation of Robert Malpas as chairman of PowerGen;

(3) if he will give the dates of his last six meetings with Robert Malpas as chairman of PowerGen.

Mr. Wakeham: I have meetings and consultations with the directors of PowerGen, as of other companies in the electricity supply industry, whenever necessary. Such meetings and consultations are confidential.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State f
(1) whether he has discussed with Robert Mal chairman of PowerGen the use of the least-cost to electricity industry investment;

(2) whether he has had discussions with Robe as the chairman of PowerGen about the need conservation.

Mr. Wakeham: The details of my discussions
Malpas, in his capacity as the chairman of Powe confidential.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State f

Home Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State f
(1) what criteria were applied by him and his agency in drawing up the regional allocations home energy efficiency scheme;

(2) if he will give a regional breakdow allocations under the home energy efficienc

Clean Coal Technology

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what action is proposed by his Department on clean coal technology.

Mr. Baldry: The Government attach great importance to developing clean coal technologies and technologies aimed at maximising the economically recoverable coal from indigenous coal reserves.

We are, therefore, carrying out a major review of our coal research programme and plan to publish a new strategy as an energy paper early next summer. To help us develop this new strategy my Department has established a new advisory body—the coal task force. The task force held its first meeting this morning. Over the next few months it will examine all aspects of coal research, including extraction, coal preparation, utilisation and conversion.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Special Educational Needs

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what was the total number of hours of home tuition provided each week to children with a statement of special educational needs by each local education authority for each of the last five years;

(2) what was the average number of hours of home tuition received per week by each child with a statement of special educational needs in each local education authority for each of the last five years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not collected centrally.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children with a statement of special needs have been (a) excluded from attending school and (b) unable to attend school in each local education authority for each of the last five years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not available centrally.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the statutory requirements on local education authorities to provide home tuition for children with a statement of special needs who (a) have been excluded from school and (b) are unable to attend school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Section 7(2) of the Education Act 1981 provides that, in any case where a local education authority maintains a statement of special educational needs for a child, it is the duty of the authority to arrange that the special educational provision specified in the statement is made for him or her unless the parent has made suitable arrangements.

University Salaries

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the average salary of vice-chancellors in United Kingdom universities, together with the average percentage increase in their salaries, for each year since 1980, as recorded for all institutions which supply a return in box 1 of the university statistical record annual return.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is not available to the Department. It is for each university to set the salary of its vice-chancellor.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the number of professors in United Kingdom universities with salaries in each £1,000 band from £27,000 upwards.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information in the form requested is not readily available. However, the table sets out details of professorial salaries in broad salary bands. The data relate to universities in the United Kingdom at December 1989.

Professorial Salary Bands

£	Number
26,250—27,819	537
27,820—28,704	479
28,705—29,609	452
29,610—30,549	554
30,550—31,549	430
31,550—32,589	311
32,590—33,654	220
33,655—34,669	123

In addition, 184 university professors receive salaries over £34,670 pa.

All figures apply to non-clinical academic professors who are wholly university funded.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list (a) the numbers of men and women who have received awards from the 1 per cent. of academic and related pay set aside for allocation on merit or market criteria since 1 April 1989, (b) the proportions which the above represent of all men and women academic staff and (c) the proportions of the 1 per cent. funds that have been received by men and women since 1 April 1989.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information is not available in the form requested. Information supplied by the UFC in June 1990 indicates that, at that time, it was intended that about 6,000 academics would receive payments from the 1 per cent. of the pay bill set aside to reward individual merit and to help counter staffing difficulties. This figure excludes returns from two universities for which data were not then available. The actual number to benefit from the scheme will be known later; the UFC has been asked to supply us with full details of the implementation of the schemes by 31 December 1990. The figure of 6,000 represents approximately 20 per cent. of all wholly university-funded full-time and part-time academic staff*.

*Based on USR statistics, 1988-89.

Research Councils

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much money has been paid out by each of the research councils in respect of 1 per cent. awards and what proportion this represents of each research council's total university funding.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The SERC has so far paid out £47,473 in respect of 1 per cent. pay additions arising from the 1989 university pay settlement. This represents 0·032 per cent. of the SERC's total research grant funding to higher education institutions in 1989-90. Further claims are expected.

The AFRC has so far paid out £10,000 in respect of 1 per cent. pay additions. The per annum figure rate of payment is currently £7,000, which represents 0·047 per cent. of the AFRC's total research grant funding to higher education institutions in 1989-90.

The other three research councils do not keep figures centrally, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Academic Posts

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state (a) the total amount of funding made available under the academic "new blood" scheme and the total amount taken up, (b) the total amount of funding made available under the new academic appointments scheme and the total amount taken up, (c) the numbers of men and women academics appointed under each of the two schemes and (d) the numbers of men and women appointed under each of the two schemes who are still in post.

Mr. Alan Howarth: (a) The total funding allocated by the University Grants Committee between academic years 1983-84 and 1985-86 under the "new blood" scheme and for new posts in information technology was £40·9 million. All allocated funding was taken up by universities.

(b) The amount allocated by the Universities Funding Council under the new academic appointments scheme in academic year 1989-90 was £13·4 million. It is estimated that all allocated funding was taken up by universities.

(c) Information about the total number of men and women academics appointed under the schemes is not readily available.

(d) Of the total of 792 academics appointed under the "new blood" scheme, 739 were in post in March 1989. A further 46 posts had been replaced through new appointments. Comparable figures are not yet available for the new academic appointments scheme.

Student Awards

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much financial assistance was offered to students by local authority intermediate awards in the last financial year.

Mr. Eggar: The latest data available are for the academic year 1988-89. LEA expenditure on discretionary (section 2) awards granted at less than the mandatory rate was £94·4 million split as follows:

80-99	27·1
below 50	53·5

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what financial assistance is available for further education students, with parents on low incomes or in receipt of benefits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Under section 2 of the Education Act 1962, LEAs have discretionary power to bestow awards on persons who have left school in respect of courses which do not attract mandatory awards. Since S further education access fund has given funds to support full-time students ag further education courses.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secre Education and Science how much finan awarded to students by local au maintenance allowances in the last fin

Mr. Eggar: The latest available academic year 1988-89. The financial to students by local authority educ allowances was £11·2 million in that y

School Grants

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of S and Science if he will publish a tab amounts of capital allocations for cou controlled schools for 1991-92 for education authority in England has bid capital grant for voluntary aided sch which each local education authority Department and (c) (a) and (b) for e authority and with totals in respect of England, and for each region.

Mr. Fallon: The information reque the table. The figures are taken from t 1991-92 submitted by each local educati Department. I will provide a regional information shortly.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Educati and Science if he will publish a table giving the amoun for England of capital allocations for (a) county a voluntary controlled schools, (b) voluntary aided schoo and (c) the totals of (a) and (b) for each financial ye from and including 1978-79 to 1990-91 expressed in current prices, (ii) constant prices and (iii) an index of where 1978-79 = 100, together with such estimates f expenditure in 1991-92 on a comparable basis as a already available from the autumn statement.

Mr. Fallon: Not all the information is available in t form requested. The table shows figures from 1981-8 Prior to 1981-82, local education authorities did n receive block allocations, but were notified annually, in t context of a rolling programme, of a limit on the value building starts in the following year.

From 1981-82 to 1989-90 allocations for spending c capital works were made to local education authorities f schools and colleges of further and higher education, accordance with the Local Government, Planning an Land Act 1980. It was for each local education authori to decide how to use its allocation, including apportio ment between schools and colleges, and the extent which it wished to supplement it through the use of capit receipts and other sources of revenue.

Figures for 1990-91 and 1991-92 (in the table) are n comparable with previous years. Following the Loc Government and Housing Act 1989, the Departme issues an annual capital guideline to each local educatio authority, which is one element in the calculation of eac local authority's basic credit approval announced by th Department of the Environment.

Notes to the table

1. All figures are in £ million. All figures are rounded.
2. Constant prices are calculated at 1981-82 prices using the latest GDP deflators. The index for 1981-82 is set at 100.
3. The Department provides grant aid at a rate of 85 per cent. on governors' capital expenditure at voluntary aided and special agreement schools.
4. Capital grant figures for the voluntary aided sector for the year 1981-82 are not separately identifiable from a single building grant figure which includes repairs and maintenance. The capital figures shown for this year are based on an apportionment of the building grant figure using the average ratio between capital and repairs during 1982-83 and 1985-86.
5. Prior to 1981-82 local authorities did not receive block allocation, but were notified annually in the context of a rolling programme of a limit on the value of the building starts in the following year.
6. Local authority allocations for 1989-90 and ACGs for 1990-91 and 1991-92 exclude institutions which were transferred to the PCFC sector in 1989-90.

Students

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many persons between the ages of 18 and 30 years entered full-time further education in the last financial year.

Mr. Eggar: In 1989-90, there were 76,000 full-time first-year students aged 18-30 studying on further education courses in England.

Mature Students (Housing Benefit)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what study he is making of the impact of the withdrawal of housing benefit on the numbers of mature students following courses in further education.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The annual further education statistical records monitor the number of mature students in further education. Mature students with dependants, those who are disabled and part-time students will, of course, retain entitlement to benefits.

ENVIRONMENT

Metropolitan Water Board "B" Shares

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information was available to the Government about the liabilities of the Metropolitan Water Board to the holders of "B" stock at the time of flotation of Thames Water.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: At the time of the flotation of Thames Water in 1989 the Government were aware of a possibility of outstanding liabilities in respect of such stocks, and this was reflected in a note on contingent liabilities in the privatisation prospectus.

Archery

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what implications COM(90) 453 has for the sport of archery.

Mr. Atkins: Although COM(90) 453 concerns the control of the acquisition and possession of weapons, I now understand that it will not have any effect on the sport of archery.

Mineral Workings

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give full details of the research project he has recently commissioned into the environmental effects of mineral workings; who has been awarded the contract in each case; and when he expects the findings to be published.

Mr. Atkins: Roy Waller Associates was commissioned last year to review and examine the environmental impacts of surface mineral extraction and how they can be controlled most effectively. This is a broad-based project looking at the major problems of traffic, blasting, noise, dust, visual and landscape effects. The final report will propose a number of steps to ameliorate the environmental impact of mineral working. Areas for further research will also be identified. Publication of the final report is expected in spring 1991.

The findings of a more detailed research project carried out by W. S. Atkins Engineering Sciences Ltd. on "The Control of Noise at Surface Mineral Workings" have recently been published by HMSO and copies are already lodged in the House of Commons Library.

Lead Pipes

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what grants are available to assist domestic consumers to replace old lead feeder pipes from the water mains into their homes.

Mr. Key: Both mandatory and discretionary renovation grants under part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 are available towards the cost of replacing lead water supply pipes on land owned by the grant applicant, subject to a test of the applicant's financial resources.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish tables showing for each local authority either the planned use of balances to support revenue expenditure in 1990-91 or the amount to be used to replenish balances as appropriate.

Mr. Portillo: I have today arranged for the available information to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain a copy of "Local Government Finance, the 1990 reforms", by Michael Ridge and Stephen Smith, published in Fiscal Studies August 1990 (Vol. 11, No. 3), for his Department's library.

Mr. Key: The Department's library already has a copy of the journal in which this article appears.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress in collection of the community charge in England and Wales.

Mr. Key [holding answer 21 November 1990]: Information from regular quarterly returns supplied by local authorities confirms that around nine out of 10 charge payers had begun paying their charges by the end of September. In many areas this figure is already approaching 100 per cent. and I look to all authorities to achieve figures close to this during the balance of this financial year. Collection of the community charge in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Keynsham Chew Valley Inquiry

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the result of the Keynsham Chew valley local plan inquiry, held in December 1989 and January 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The inspector has now completed his report to the local planning authority, Wansdyke district council, following this complex inquiry. It will be sent to the council shortly: publication is a matter for it.

Housing Associations

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the rate of take-up of funds allocated by the Housing Corporation to housing associations in the different regions of the country; and if he will make a statement on whether the funds taken up by housing associations in the different regions of England have been expended by them in total.

Mr. Key: This is a matter for the Housing Corporation. I have therefore asked the corporation to respond to my hon. Friend direct.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis he will continue to contribute to neighbourhood care and repair schemes run by housing associations.

Mr. Key: As I announced on 19 October, from 1 April 1991, 50 per cent. of the running costs of approved home improvement agencies, including those run by housing associations, will be met by Government grant. Local housing authorities are responsible for the co-ordination and submission of such bids by the end of the month.

Disability

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment under the new provisions for house adaptations for people with disabilities, how many people have been denied grants or been given reduced grants to make adaptations to their homes because they do not meet the means test.

Mr. Key: The information requested is not yet available. The impact of the new house renovation grant system is, however, being monitored closely.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government will introduce legislation to amend the Town and Country Planning Act to make it unlawful to erect or adapt buildings without approved access facilities for disabled people, and to provide for all existing buildings to be adapted in the same way with cash grants available from central Government for the owners of such buildings, with such adaptations subject to checks annually by the disablement advisory service.

Mr. Key: There is already a requirement in the Building Regulations 1985 that reasonable provision must be made to enable disabled people to gain access to new offices and shops, and to the principal entrance storey of new factories, educational buildings covered by the regulations, and other premises to which the public are admitted. Consultation proposals have been issued recently which would have the effect of extending this requirement to all floors of all new non-domestic buildings and to certain alterations and extensions to existing buildings. Research is being carried out into the technical problems involved in extending such a requirement to other alterations and extensions of non-domestic buildings.

Under the adaptations to premises and equipment scheme, administered by the Department of Employment through the disablement advisory service, a grant of up to £6,000 may be awarded to an employer, towards the cost of adapting premises and equipment for an existing disabled employee or a disabled new recruit. Employers are expected to contribute and to undertake to recruit a disabled person with similar needs as a replacement in the event of the original employee leaving. Grants are most commonly provided for adaptations to toilets and improved access to a building. An evaluation of the Department of Employment special schemes was published by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment on 2 November 1990 and comments invited by 2 February 1991.

Peat

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue guidance to planning authorities which would highlight the importance of refusal of planning permission for the extraction of peat from sites of special scientific interest.

Mr. Atkins: Local authorities have to reach decisions on individual planning applications on their merits, having due regard to all relevant material considerations. "Material considerations" include relevant national policies, such as the protection of designated sites of special scientific interest. The Department of the Environment's existing guidance in circular 27/87 "Nature Conservation" and minerals planning guidance note 2 requires that proposals for the extraction of peat and other minerals from SSSIs should be subject to the most rigorous examination, in which the need for the mineral has to be balanced against environmental considerations. The Government are giving further consideration to the issues raised by peat extraction and nature conservation, and this includes whether there is a need for further advice.

I also welcome the agreement reached recently between the Nature Conservancy Council and the Peat Producers Association whereby, pending an agreed peatland strategy, members of the association will not make any planning applications to work existing or proposed peatland SSSIs without the prior agreement of the NCC.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure other means of disposal of sewage sludge presently dumped in the North sea.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked the water companies concerned to submit to him by the end of November their detailed plans and programmes of work phasing out disposal of sludge to sea. The main disposal options are to agricultural land, landfill and incineration.

Single People (Accommodation)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to ensure the provision of adequate single persons' accommodation in both the public and private rented sectors at prices which young single persons can afford.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have taken a number of measures that will help young single people find accommodation including, in particular, the deregulation of new lettings in the private rented sector. Allocation of subsidised rented housing is mainly a matter for local authorities and housing associations; local authorities' duties under the homelessness legislation cover vulnerable single people; and we have recently announced a special programme, costing £100 million over four years, to help people sleeping rough in London.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been carried out by his Department into single persons' accommodation needs.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department has published four reports on single persons' accommodation needs. These are:

Housing Single People 1: how they live at present. Design Bulletin 23, HMSO 1790.

Housing Single People 2: A design guide with a description of a scheme at Leicester. Design Bulletin 29, HMSO 1974.

Housing Initiatives for Single People of Working Age. DoE, 1982.

The Department will shortly let a research contract on single homeless people including their accommodation needs and preferences.

Mortgage Arrears

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment if he will take steps to require lo authorities, building societies and other mortgage lend to submit regular returns of the number of borrowers arrears with their payments and the number of proper repossessed.

Mr. Key: Local authorities already make returns to Department of their mortgage arrears and possessio Building societies make returns on arrears and possessi to the Building Societies Commission. In addition, Council of Mortgage Lenders has collected data on arre and possessions from a number of major mortg lenders. In view of the information already provided lenders, I do not consider it appropriate for Department of the Environment to require returns fr private sector lenders.

Housing and Independent Living

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment if his Department was represented at housing and independent living'conference organised Shelter, the King's Fund community development liv team, the British Council of Organisations of Disab People and the living options project on 12 and November; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 16 Novem 1990]: No.

WALES

European Court

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wa what policy considerations led him to send a member of legal department to observe the preliminary hearing of Leybucht bay case in the European Court of Justice Luxembourg on 16 October.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Under-Secreta of State for the Environment on 19 November, at colum 41-42. A member of the Welsh Office's legal divisi attended because of the relevance of the issues to We Office circular 52/87 "Nature Conservation".

Mr. Rod Richards

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what basis the salary to be paid to Mr. Rod Richar his personal ministerial adviser, has been calculated;

(2) what salary will be paid to Mr. Rod Richards as personal ministerial adviser.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to reply given to him on 19 November by my hon. Friend Paymaster General and to the reply my right hon. Frie gave on 13 November to the hon. Member for Cardi South and Penarth (Mr. Michael).

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wal further to his reply of 13 November, Official Repo column 106, if he will give specific details of the knowled and experience of Mr. Rod Richards in respect of private sector which will be relevant to his work as spec adviser.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has nothing to add to the answer he gave the hon. Gentleman on 13 November.

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many civil servants are currently employed (a) full time and (b) part time by his Department on civil defence; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staff to be transferred to work on other duties.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Department has no full-time or part-time staff engaged exclusively on civil defence, but such work is estimated to account for the equivalent of six full-time posts across the Department as a whole. The total cost was £156,000 in 1989-90 and is estimated to be £161,000 in 1990-91.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary announced on 16 October 1990 that he had initiated a review of the options for the future of civil defence arrangements in the light of east-west relations. Future levels of expenditure on civil defence will depend on the outcome of that review.

Music Teachers

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many peripatetic music teachers are currently employed by each local education authority in Wales; and what is the average amount of instrument tuition time per week offered by schools in each local education authority.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information on the number of peripatetic music teachers and the amount of tuition time is not collected centrally.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in negotiations on proposals for a reduction in hours worked by junior doctors in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The Department is represented on the working group established by my hon. Friend the Minister for Health which is currently engaged on a detailed examination of the issues involved. A considerable amount of ground has already been covered and all parties are aiming to reach broad agreement in principle on specific changes by the end of the year.

Self-governing Hospitals

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the latest position in respect of hospitals becoming self-governing in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Pembrokeshire district health authority has submitted an expression of interest in applying for NHS trust status which is currently under consideration.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state for the last available year (a) the amount of toxic waste imported through Welsh ports in total, and by port and (b) the country of origin and destination of toxic waste imports by port, together with the nature of toxic waste in each case.

Mr. Grist: The information for the year to 31 March 1990 is shown in the following table.

Soundproofing, Skewen

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to representations from householders in Skewen about the proposals for window soundproofing from the current motorway development.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have given the representations careful consideration and will be writing shortly to the right hon. and learned Gentleman in response to his recent correspondence.

Waiting Lists, West Glamorgan

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what are the current waiting lists to see national health service consultants in the West Glamorgan area for first appointments;

(2) what are the present waiting lists for hospital admissions in the West Glamorgan area.

Mr. Grist: The information requested, which relates to 31 March 1990, is as follows:

	Number waiting
First out-patient appointment	14,462
Hospital in-patient admission	6,949

Residential and Nursing Homes (Agents)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take measures to stop touting for business on health authority property by agents for residential and nursing homes.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the district health authority, which deplores the action reported to have taken place in Maelor hospital, Wrexham, by representatives of private nursing homes. I am assured that the district health authority is taking appropriate steps to ensure that incidents of this kind do not occur again.

Disabled Staff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the percentages of disabled staff employed in his Department in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Grist: The information is as follows:

	Percentage
1980	2·3
1981	2·3
1982	2·3
1983	2·1
1984	1·8
1985	1·4
1986	1·5
1987	1·4
1988	1·3
1990	1·4

Retail Sales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on retail sales in Wales and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The latest provisional information for 1988, previously unpublished, appears in the following table:

Wales

	Retail outlets (number)[2]	Turnover (£ million)[1]
Food retailer	6,711	2,000
Drink, confectionery and tobacco retailers	3,379	529
Clothing, footwear and leather goods retailers	2,891	411
Household goods retailers	3,357	825
Other non-food businesses	1,787	339
Mixed retail businesses	452	567
Hire and repair businesses	240	65

[2] The figures in this table include retail outlets and retail turnover of non-retail businesses.

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 November to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside on teacher vacancies, what was the definition of teacher vacancy used in each survey.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The advice given to local education authorities on the definition of a teacher vacancy for the January survey was:

"Returns are only required in respect of current vacancies (at 18 January 1990) for full-time permanent appointments or full-time appointments for at least one term's duration which have been advertised but not filled. Resignations which have occurred too recently for the vacancy to have been advertised should not be included in the return. A post which has been filled by a temporary appointment pending the finding of a more permanent appointee should be regarded as a vacancy for this purpose but a post which is filled by an appointee whom it is desired to replace by somebody more suitably qualified should not be regarded as a vacancy for that reason alone."

For the September survey LEAs were asked for information on vacancies for full-time permanent appointments or full-time appointments of at least one term's duration which have been externally advertised. LEAs were told that a post which had been filled by a temporary appointment of a term or more should be regarded as filled for this purpose, even if a permanent appointee is still actively being sought. Posts which there was no intention to fill in September 1990 were to be excluded.

Bathing Waters

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce the results of the 1990 survey of bathing water quality in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 14 November by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and to the press notice, No. 638, issued on the same day. This included a list of Welsh bathing waters and indicated which had complied in 1990 with the coliform parameters set in the EC directive. A copy of the press notice was placed in the Library.

Roads

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date the Welsh Office publication, "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s", was first published; and if there were any changes, amendments, additions or deletions to this programme between that date and 31 October.

Sir Wyn Roberts: "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s" was published in April 1989. Since then the following schemes have been added to the programme:

A5	Holyhead improvement
A5	Cefni Bridge—Llanfair PG
A5	Stanley Embankment—Cefni Bridge
A470	Blaenau Ffestiniog—Betws y Coed improvements
A487	Penygroes—Llanllyfni bypass
A550	Woodbank—Deeside Park (joint DTp/WO scheme)

Information on these schemes and updated information on the schemes listed in "Roads in Wales" will be included in a supplement to be published in the new year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Broadcasting (Direct Feed)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Lord President of the Council what representations he has received from commercial companies requesting a direct feed of the House proceedings subscriber service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I know of no such recent representations either to me or to my predecessor. Under the present arrangements, organisations wishing to take a clean feed from the Chamber must first approach House of Commons Broadcasting Unit Ltd., the company formed by the main broadcasters which has been licensed by the House to produce and distribute the signal. Those wishing to take coverage of Select or Standing Committees apply to Commons Committee Television, the company contracted for that purpose by the broadcasters. In either case the Select Committee on Broadcasting stands ready to arbitrate in any possible dispute over the terms on which access is granted to the signals. So far the Committee's intervention has not been required. If however, my hon. Friend has a particular case in mind, perhaps he would let me know.

HEALTH

Young Offenders

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on funding arrangements for secure units for young offenders;

(2) how many secure units for young offenders are funded directly by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are currently 33 approved secure units run by local authorities and two secure youth treatment centres run direct by the Department of Health. All these facilities are available for children in care who meet the admissions criteria. (Some will be offenders or alleged offenders). The costs of these placements are met by the placing authority. Certain children who have been convicted of grave crimes under section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 may also be placed in these facilities on behalf of the Home Office by the Department of Health. The cost of these placements is borne by central Government. In addition, grants may be made by the Department of Health to local authorities towards the capital costs of providing such accommodation.

Ring-fenced Funding

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any plans to issue guidance to local authorities on the distribution of moneys to local authorities which are ring-fenced specifically for drug, alcohol and mental health projects under the National Health Service and Community Care Act;

(2) if moneys ring-fenced specifically for funding drug, alcohol and mental health projects under the National Health Service and Community Care Act are awarded to local authorities on the basis of existing services;

(3) if he will take steps to ensure that local authorities pass on to existing drug, alcohol and mental health projects moneys ring-fenced for those purposes under the provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Mr. Dorrell: Guidance on the alcohol and drugs services specific grant was issued last week, and on the mental illness specific grant in September (circulars LAC(90)11 and LAC(90)10 respectively, copies of which are available in the Library).

Gulf Forces (Injuries)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which hospitals in the West Midlands regional health authority area have been asked to prepare contingency plans for possible receipt of injured service personnel from the Gulf; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what contingency plans are being studied to utilise the specialist units at the Queen Victoria hospital, East Grinstead, in the event of hostilities in the Gulf; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Dunfermline, West (Mr. Douglas) on 16 November at column 248. In drawing up their contingency plans, regional health authorities are expected to take account of the services that could be made available by both general and specialist units.

Salmonellosis and Listeriosis

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths occurred from (a) salmonellosis and (b) listeriosis in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 November 1990]: The number of deaths registered in England and Wales in 1989 with salmonella[1] as the underlying cause of death was 61.

In the same period 16 deaths were registered with listeria[2] as the underlying cause. In addition, a further 14 deaths of those aged under 28 days—for which no underlying cause is assigned—contained a mention on the certificate of listeria including congenital or maternal listeria.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid Target

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when overseas aid will reach the United Nations aid target of 0·7 per cent. of gross national product.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government have accepted the UN target for official development assistance of 0·7 per cent. of GNP in principle but, like previous Administrations and many other donors, have not set a timetable to achieve it. Progress towards it must depend upon economic circumstances and other calls on Government resources.

Aid Programme

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the level of the aid programme in real terms in 1979 and in the latest available year.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1989 gross public expenditure on aid was £1,788 million compared with £1,940 million in 1979 at 1989 prices.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Anti-Jewish Literature

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General if he w the criteria used to assess whether the public inte served by the prosecution of those alleged to published or distributed anti-Jewish literature.

The Attorney-General: An assessment concerni public interest is relevant only whenever it is cons that there is a realistic prospect of securing a convict an offence.

The general considerations applicable to the interest aspect of the decision whether to prosecute out at paragraphs 7 to 9 of the code for prosecutors. This guidance is necessarily in genera because individual cases have to be considered o own merits. Factors likely to be of particular releva cases of the nature referred to in the hon. and l Member's question are the prevalence of the condu its seriousness. In this context the Director of Prosecutions and I have made plain our view t regard the publication and distribution of material offends against the provisions of part III of the Order Act 1986 as a serious matter.

The criteria set out in the code are founded observations of the right hon. and noble Lord Shawcross, a former Attorney-General, which are in the code, who said that regard must be had to "the effect which the prosecution, successful or unsu as the case may be, would have upon public morale and and with any other considerations affecting public

"Holocaust Myths"

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General consideration has been given by the Director of Prosecutions to initiating proceedings in respect publication entitled "Holocaust Myths", distribu the Association of British Ex-Servicemen.

The Attorney-General: A police report has referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions conc a leaflet entitled "Question: how long can th perpetrate the holocaust myth" and other publi allegedly distributed by the Association of Ex-Servicemen.

The police have been requested to forward evidence resulting from their inquiries and on rec this a decision will be taken concerning the institu proceedings.

PRIME MINISTER

Homelessness

Q8. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister wha she has to meet representatives of the homeless in L

The Prime Minister: I have no such plans. M hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Enviro and his ministerial colleagues have regular meetin voluntary groups working with the homeless, an local authorities in London and their associations

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will set out the responsibility for forestry of each of the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food Secretary of State for Wales, Secretary of State for Scotland and Secretary of State for Northern Ireland; and when the respective responsibilities were last changed.

The Prime Minister: The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Secretary of State for Wales and the Secretary of State for Scotland have individual territorial responsibility for forestry matters in England, Wales and Scotland respectively. They act jointly on forestry policy questions affecting Great Britain as a whole, with the Secretary of State for Scotland taking the lead. The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has responsibility for all forestry questions in Northern Ireland.

These arrangements are of long standing and were last changed in 1979 when the Secretary of State for Scotland assumed lead responsibility for policy questions in Great Britain.

Conservative Leadership Contest

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what steps were taken to ensure that no member of her press department was involved in briefing the media on the Conservative leadership contest; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My press office is aware of its responsibilities.

Mr. Charles Powell

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if she will set out the full duties carried out by Mr. Charles Powell;

(2) how long Mr. Charles Powell has been employed in her office; and how long she intends him to be employed in his current position.

The Prime Minister: Mr. Powell serves as my private secretary for foreign affairs and will serve in my office until it is time for him to leave.

Correspondence

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if she will place in the Library a copy of the letter received from the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Baghdad and a copy of her reply; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 20 November 1990]: No. It is not my normal practice to do so.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Hostages (Lebanon)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent initiatives have been taken by the Government to ensure the release of the British hostages held in the Lebanon.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State's answer to him of 15 October, Vol. 177, c. 752.

Single European Act

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date or dates and on what occasions a representative of the Crown signed the Single European Act treaty; and who was the representative.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Single European Act treaty was signed at plenipotentiary meetings in Luxembourg on 17 February 1986 and in The Hague on 28 February 1986. On both occasions the Government were represented by my right hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker), the then Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Baltic States

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the request by the three Baltic states to be given observer status at the forthcoming CSCE conference in Paris.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We welcomed the decision of the French Government to invite representatives of the Baltic states to attend the CSCE summit as "distinguished guests". We look forward to a time when it will be possible for the Baltic states to participate in the CSCE process as full members. However, membership and observer status are open only to states internationally recognised as such. The Baltic states are not recognised as independent states.

Soviet Union

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department intends to take steps to provide any urgent economic assistance for the Soviet Union to counteract shortages of food and consumer goods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are already offering the Soviet Union assistance in introducing economic reform, in particular through our know-how fund. We have not yet received a specific request for humanitarian assistance from the Soviet Union. We shall continue to pay very close attention to the Soviet Union's economic difficulties, and are sure that the EC would consider any justified request for humanitarian aid urgently and sympathetically.

Romania

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Romania concerning claims that political prisoners, confined to mental institutions by the late President Ceausescu, have not yet been released.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are aware of a recent television report to this effect, but the British embassy in Bucharest has not been able to provide further information. If the hon. Member will share with us any evidence he may have, we shall consider it with a view to taking up the matter with the Romanian authorities.

Iraq (Hostages)

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy towards the sending of gifts by friends and relatives to hostages in Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are in touch with the British Red Cross Society, which hopes to arrange for Red Cross parcels to be sent by families in the United Kingdom to the detainees in Iraq. Our embassy in Baghdad has been sending local comfort parcels to detainees in Iraq and these are beginning to get through. The United Kingdom has suspended postal services to Iraq in order to implement sanctions imposed by UN Security Council resolution 661.

SCOTLAND

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants are currently employed (a) full time and (b) part time by his Department on civil defence; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staff to be transferred to work on other duties.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on manpower and employment costs is set out in the table:

Dyslexia

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department accepts dyslexia as a condition requiring specialist education; which regional education departments recognise dyslexia as a condition requiring specialist education; which regional education departments provide in-house specialised education for dyslexic children; which regional education departments send children to private schools specialising in education for dyslexic children; and which specialist private schools are registered with his Department as establishments which provide specialist dyslexic education.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The term dyslexia denotes specific learning difficulties which may cause a child to have special educational needs. It is the responsibility of education authorities to provide for such needs, which they may do in mainstream schools, special units or special schools, including independent special schools. The other information requested is not available.

Property Law

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he anticipates receiving the report of the Scottish Law Commission following its review of property law in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The preparation of the Scottish Law Commission's report on land tenure reform will be preceded during the course of 1991 by a discussion paper and subsequent public consultation.

Student Unions

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on what grounds the press release on student unions issued by his Department on Friday 16 November was withdrawn;

(2) who instructed the withdrawal of the press release on student unions issued by his Department on Friday 16 November;

(3) what were the differences between the press releases on student unions issued on Friday 16 November and Sunday 18 November.

Mr. Rifkind: A news release about consultation on student unions, the text of which was still under consideration, was issued prematurely on Friday 16 November. It was withdrawn under established procedure as soon as the error became apparent, and the final version was issued on Sunday 18 November.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to introduce legislation following the consultation on student unions.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make available the responses to his first series of consultations about student unions in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A copy of the publication "Student Union Survey: Analysis" was placed in the House Library last year.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the consultation proposed on student unions includes discussion on freedom of speech.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The scope of the proposed consultation has yet to be decided.

Public Sector Tenants (Property Purchases)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which housing authorities and housing associations operate a Government-assisted financial incentive scheme to encourage tenants to buy homes in the private sector in order to release rented accommodation for other people; and if he will give details of any such schemes and the legislation under which they operate.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Section 66 of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988 makes provision for local authorities to draw up schemes, for the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend, to offer payments to assist tenants to obtain accommodation in the private sector. This releases council housing for letting to homeless or others in housing need. There is no requirement on local authorities to draw up such schemes.

Bearsden and Milngavie district council is the first local authority in Scotland to receive approval to operate a cash incentive scheme. The council has allocated £100,000 towards the scheme which commenced on 1 September 1990 and will offer qualifying tenants up to £10,000 towards the purchase of alternative property. A further three authorities have submitted proposals to operate such schemes and these are currently under consideration.

The tenants' incentive scheme available to housing associations is operated by Scottish Homes under section 2(2) of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988. I have asked the chairman of Scottish Homes to write direct to the hon. Member giving details of the scheme.

Territorial Army

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary Defence what proposals have been made re amalgamation of the Territorial Army district

Wales with the north-west of England, and who he will consult before further consideration is given to this proposal.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have no plans to reorganise the Territorial Army regions. Regarding the review of the United Kingdom land forces district structure, I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Brecon and Radnor (Mr. Livsey) on 20 November at column 80.

Aldershot Military Hospital

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost of relocating the staff and facilities from the Aldershot military hospital to the field hospital at Jubayl in Saudi Arabia; and how many (a) surgeons and (b) anaesthetists have been relocated.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information on the costs of deploying staff and facilities from the Cambridge military hospital Aldershot to the field hospital at Jubayl in Saudi Arabia is not currently available. Five surgeons and five anaesthetists from the Cambridge military hospital Aldershot have been deployed to Jubayl.

Air-to-Surface Missile

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to decide between the various options for the tactical air-to-surface missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our consideration of the various options is continuing. The House will be informed as soon as a decision is taken.

Service Discipline

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will place in the Library copies of the most recently published leaflets which each of the three services makes available to those charged under the Service Discipline Acts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Copies of the most recently published leaflets which each of the three services makes available to those charged under the Service Discipline Acts have been placed in the Library of the House.

Training

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information is made available to service personnel who are due to leave the services regarding training opportunities available from non-Ministry of Defence organisations.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information about pre-release training in the form of external courses sponsored by the Ministry of Defence and attachments to outside organisations is available for resettlement officers; the service resettlement bulletins published about six times a year; a Defence Council instruction issued each year, giving details of the programme of briefings and courses for the following 12 months; and other internal newsletters and publications. Additionally a range of post-release training options is available to former service personnel, including Government-sponsored courses. Information about these is included in the Training Agency booklet "Employment Training for Ex-Regulars", copies of which are held by resettlement officers, who are responsible for making personnel aware of its contents. Finally, all personnel attending their final resettlement interview receive copies of the booklet "Employment in Civilian Life" and officers also receive a booklet entitled "Leaving the Services". These booklets, which are both published by the Employment Service, include chapters on occupational training.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken in the last year to include a more positive image of ethnic minorities in recruitment advertising to the services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have included more photographs of ethnic minority personnel in a wider diversity of circumstances in our recruitment advertising and given greater prominence to the fact that the armed forces are equal opportunity employers under the terms of the Race Relations Act.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional training has been given in the last year to recruitment officers to increase the number of applicants from ethnic minorities into the services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As part of the wide range of measures now being taken to attract more recruits from the ethnic minorities, the Army and RAF have in the course of this year introduced race relations and cultural awareness into the training syllabus for their recruiting staff. The Navy will introduce similar training in the new year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Single European Market

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives his Department is following to ensure that Northern Ireland industry is able to respond to the completion of the single European market in 1992.

Mr. Needham: The Department has a whole series of initiatives to assist Northern Ireland businesses compete in the single market.

Security

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further steps he proposes to improve the security situation in north Belfast.

Mr. Cope: The Secretary of State and I have regular and frequent meetings with our security advisers to discuss security not only in north Belfast but in Northern Ireland as a whole. New security measures are constantly being explored and where they are considered practical they are implemented.

Flags

20. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have received damages arising from the distress caused by (a) the flying of the Union flag at their place of work and (b) the flying of the Southern Irish tricolour at their place of work in each of the past three years.

Mr. Cope: I am not aware of any individual having received damages or claiming damages from distress as a result of flag flying at his workplace.

Planning

21. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to restore planning decisions to democratically elected representatives on district councils.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government have no plans at present to restore responsibility for planning decisions to district councils. However, we remain ready to consider any proposals for transferring political power, authority and responsibility to locally elected representatives in Northern Ireland on a basis which would be likely to prove widely acceptable.

Political Development

22. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of his consultations on political development.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Beverley (Mr. Cran).

Colin Wallace

23. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make it his policy to provide all information required by the Select Committee on Defence in the carrying out of its inquiries into the affairs of Colin Wallace.

Mr. Cope: We would naturally give all appropriate assistance to the Committee in response to any inquiries which it may make in connection with Colin Wallace.

Students

24. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Northern Ireland students were successful in obtaining places in (a) Queen's university and (b) the university of Ulster for the academic courses commencing 1990; and how many unsuccessful applicants have been accepted into courses in universities, polytechnics and so on, in Great Britain commencing in the current year.

Dr. Mawhinney: Provisional figures for the 1990-91 academic year show that the number of Northern Ireland students who obtained places in Northern Ireland universities was as follows:

Queen's University	3,600
University of Ulster	4,944

Information is not available on the destinations of applicants who were unsuccessful in gaining a place in Northern Ireland universities.

Armagh UDR

25. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secr Northern Ireland whether he has receiv tions in respect of the four Armag Regiment men.

Mr. Cope: Yes.

Equal Opportunities

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what steps he is taking to clarify employment rights and employment-related benefits to women who work between the ages of 60 and 65 years in view of the recent settlement by Barclays bank; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications for women in work between the ages of 60 and 65 years and their employers in view of the recent settlement by Barclays bank; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The Barclays bank case related to dismissal.

The Sex Discrimination Act 1975, as amended by the Sex Discrimination Act 1986, makes it unlawful for employers to set different compulsory retirement ages for men and women in comparable positions. It is for the courts to interpret the law as it applies to the facts of a particular case and we do not consider that any action is called for.

Subject to the law, terms and conditions of employment, including retirement age, are matters for agreement between employers and employees.

Disabled People

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the percentages of disabled staff employed in (a) his Department and (b) other Government Departments in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Jackson: The percentages of registered disabled staff in the civil service are set out in the table for the years for which records are available. In 1990 the Department of Employment group employed 3·2 per cent. registered disabled. The Office of the Minister for the Civil Service publishes these figures annually in "Independent" magazine, which is in the Library. Registration is voluntary and Departments employ people with disabilities who are not registered.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Security what the cost would be if the proposals maintenance of children were implemented but p solely dependent on benefit were allowed to keep (b) £10 or (c) £15 before income support was ded

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimated costs maintenance disregard in income support are in the Amount of disregard (£)	Total cost (£ million)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Security what changes he intends to introduce to in the levels of income support payable to 1 17-year-olds.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Benefit rates will be u from next April in the normal way. We are continu monitor the effects of the social security reforms make improvements where appropriate; for example July 1989 16 and 17-year-olds who have no option live independently have been entitled to the higher benefit normally paid to 18 to 24-year-olds.

Research into the operation of the income suppor for 16 and 17-year-olds has been commissioned results are expected around Easter 1991.

Pensions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to change the calculation for payment of the basic state pension from relating it to prices to that of earnings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Redundancies

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many redundancies are expected to be created by computerisation and the consolidation of local offices into local management units.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No compulsory redundancies will be needed as a result of the Department's computerisation programme (the operational strategy) provided staff co-operate in implementing the necessary personnel measures to achieve staff savings. Much of the reduction in staffing will be gained by natural wastage and, where this is not the case, the needs of staff will be taken into account as far as possible.

The management of the local office network is being restructured because changes in procedures as a result of the operational strategy and the setting up of the Contributions Agency meant that the existing offices no longer formed viable management units. There are no plans to reduce the number of outlets. This restructuring will result in a modest saving at managerial level. A voluntary redundancy scheme is in place for the staff.

Child Benefit

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost of sending out questionnaires to recipients of child benefit as a result of the benefit changes recently announced; and to what categories of recipients the questionnaires were sent.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To enable the increased amount of child benefit to be taken into account correctly in their assessment from uprating, letters will be sent, between 26 November and 1 March 1991, to all income support recipients, who are paid by the income support computer system, who receive child benefit. The cost of sending these out is about £150,000.

National Insurance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of people who have been paying the self-employed national insurance contribution during each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Scott: The United Kingdom figures of the number of individuals who paid class 2 (self-employed) national insurance contributions between April 1978 and April 1988 are set out in the table.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the effects of the planned changes in the future employment of the disabled that will result from the passage of the Statutory Sick Pay Bill.

Mr. Scott: The provisions of the Statutory Sick Pay Bill relating to employers' reimbursement arrangements for SSP will have no direct effect on employees. We do not believe that they will lead to any change in the pattern of employment of people with disabilities. Other factors are of far greater importance in determining job opportunity for disabled people, which a wide variety of policies are designed to promote.

Disabled Staff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the percentage of disabled staff employed in his Department in each of the past 10 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The figures for the Department of Social Security at June 1989 and June 1990 are as follows:

Separate figures are not held for this Department prior to June 1989. This does not include staff with disabilities who are not registered as disabled.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he intends making any changes to the social fund cold weather payments scheme for the forthcoming winter.

Mr. Scott: I am pleased to tell my hon. Friend that yesterday, Wednesday 21 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State laid before the House the Social Fund Cold Weather Payments (General) Amendment Regulations.

The effect of these changes will be to better ensure that conditions in different local areas are properly reflected in the scheme. Copies of the regulations are available in the Vote Office.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farmed Salmon

Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the presence of dichlorvos in farmed salmon.

Mr. Maclean: Following a recent newspaper report that a sample of farmed salmon had been found to contain dichlorvos, the Department's food safety directorate has carried out a further survey of salmon steaks. Forty-three samples were purchased between 12 and 15 November from a variety of retail outlets in East Anglia and London. No dichlorvos was detected in any of the samples.

An earlier survey of 92 salmon samples for dichlorvos was carried out between 1987 and 1989. Again, no residues were detected.

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many civil servants are currently employed (a) full time and (b) part time by his Ministry on civil defence; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staff to be transferred to work on other duties.

Mr. Curry: The number of man years allocated to civil defence work in the Department, including maintenance of the strategic food stockpile, was 55 in 1989-90 and cost £1·5 million. In 1990-91 the number of man years is expected to be 47 and the cost £1·3 million.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department announced on 16 October that he had initiated a review of the options for the future of civil defence arrangements and future levels of expenditure will depend on the outcome of that review.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give such figures as he has available for farm income by (a) farm type and (b) farm size for each of the last five years.

Mr. Curry: The most recent information on farm incomes for 1988-89 by type and size of farm is published in section 8 of "Agriculture in the United Kingdom: 1989" and in more detail in "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom 1990 Edition". Similar information for previous years is contained in previous editions of these publications and in the annual review of agriculture White Papers. These publications are available in the Library of the House.

Drift Net Fishing

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those countries which have banned drift net fishing in the Atlantic.

Mr. Curry: We are not aware of any country that has banned drift netting outright in the Atlantic. However, from information readily available several countries are known to have taken measures which restrict or prohibit drift netting in this area to some degree. These include Norway, Spain, South Africa, Japan, Taiwan, the USA and the UK. The international community is now addressing the issue of large-scale, oceanic drift netting in the light of a resolution adopted by the United Nations last year.

Salmon

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why the review of the Salmon Act 1986, due in January, has not yet taken place.

Mr. Curry: While there is no requirement to review the Salmon Act 1986 as such, section 39 of that Act calls on Ministers to undertake a review of the salmon net fisheries off the north-east coast of England and eastern Scotland and to present a report to Parliament as soon as practicable after 6 November 1989. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I hope to be ready to do this soon.

Salmonella

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is now his policy on the payment of compensation to owners of laying flocks slaughtered under the salmonella control regulations.

Mr. Gummer: This matter is currently under review and an announcement will be made as soon as possible.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Welsh Students

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the figures for the number of students in each university college in Wales who were normally resident in Wales for both 1989 and 1990; and if he will publish the figures in percentage form of the total number of students attending each college.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The numbers of students in academic year 1989-90 in each university college in Wales of Welsh domicile, and as expressed as percentages of the total numbers of students attending each college, are given in the table. The data cover all students whether full time, part time, undergraduate or postgraduate.

The numbers for 1990 are not yet available.

State Education

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will show the total expenditure on state education in actual and 1989 prices in 1960, 1970, 1980 and 1989, showing the percentage increase in 1989 prices, and also the amount spent on teachers' salaries and related costs in each case in actual and percentage terms.

Mr. Eggar: Data for 1960 are not readily available. The available data for subsequent years on total United Kingdom education spending, and on spending on school teachers' salaries in England, are as follows:

	Total education spending			Teachers' salaries
	Cash terms	1989-90 prices	Increase	Cash terms	1989-90 prices	Increase
	£ billion	£ billion	Per cent.	£ billion	£ billion	Per cent.

1989-90	24·1	24·1	3	n.a.	n.a.	—

Notes:

1. The total education spending figures are drawn from the relevant Public Expenditure White Papers.
2. The figures for spending on teachers' salaries are drawn from local authority spending returns. Data for 1989-90 are not yet available. Spending on teachers' salaries includes on-cost such as superannuation. No account is taken of changes in teacher numbers over the period shown.
3. The "increase" column shows the increase in spending at 1989-90 prices over the previous year shown.
4. The figures at 1989-90 prices have been calculated using latest GDP deflators.

Teachers

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state on the same basis as his reply of 12 November, Official Report, column 46, the actual number of pupils being educated by local education authorities in 1960, 1970, 1980, 1989 and 1990, together with the pupil-teacher ratio in each case, based on actual numbers, showing also the change between 1970 and 1989 in actual and percentage terms.

Mr. Fallon: The information requested for local education authority-maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools is given in the table.

January each year	Actual teacher numbers (thousands)	Actual pupil numbers (thousands)	Ratio of actual pupil numbers to actual teacher numbers
1960[1]	—	—	—
1970	347·8	7,537·2	21·7
1980	455·7	8,275·5	18·2
1989	421·0	6,900·5	16·4
1990[2]	424·6	—	—

[1] Not readily available.
[2] Data on pupil numbers are not yet available.

Teacher numbers increased by 73,200, or 21 per cent., between 1970 and 1989. Pupil numbers decreased by 636,700 or 8 per cent. and the ratio of actual pupil numbers to actual teacher numbers also decreased by 24 per cent. over the same period.

Council for National Academic Awards

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to be in a position to respond on behalf of the Government to the conclusions reached by the report of the review of the Council for National Academic Awards.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I cannot yet say. The Government recognise the support for some change revealed by the consultations on the report's recommendations. However, the right for institutions to award their own degrees cannot be taken as an issue on its own. The report also raises important questions about which institutions should have this right, and about the nature of future quality assurance arrangements. We need to consider these further.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will set out the criteria currently required of those who seek to qualify for Council for National Academic Awards status; and whether any changes are proposed in future;

(2) if he will make a statement as to how the estimated numbers likely to secure Council for National Academic Awards status as set out in paragraph 10.7 of his Department's review of the Council for National Academic Awards were arrived at;

(3) what representations he has received from those institutions which may be denied Council for National Academic Awards status as proposed by the conclusions of the committee reviewing the Council for National Academic Awards.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Any educational institution or training organisation may apply to the Council for National Academic Awards for validation of its courses. If successful it is granted "associated" status and may later seek "accredited" status. The departmental policy review of the CNAA recommended that associated status should be phased out over a period, and that associated institutions should either seek to become accredited or should look to other educational institutions to validate their courses. Around half the 80 responses to the review have been from institutions with associated status, or from bodies whose membership includes such institutions. The Government are still considering their response to the review in the light of the consultations.

The estimate in the policy review of the number of institutions which might neither want, nor qualify for, accredited status was a matter for the review team.

Illiteracy

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what current plans he has to combat illiteracy in adults.

Mr. Eggar: Local education authorities are the main providers of basic literacy tuition for adults; central Government support is provided to the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit, which acts as the central focus for adult literacy and basic skills work in England and Wales.

The Department will continue to work closely with the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit to promote improvements in adults' basic literacy skills. We are continuing to provide support through the education support grant programme to enable local education authorities to establish open learning centres and are encouraging the development of workplace tuition by employers. The training of tutors to teach adult literacy and related basic skills is currently a national priority area in the local education authority training grant programme. We will also continue to co-operate with the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit, the BBC and the Employment Department on the basic skills accreditation initiative.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what resources are being devoted to combat illiteracy among adults in the current financial year; and what increase is proposed for the next three years.

Mr. Eggar: The Department of Education and Science and the Welsh Office support the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit: the Department's grant for the curren financial year is £3,030,000. The Department is als supporting expenditure of £1·7 million this year in th education support grant programme to enable loca education authorities to establish open learning centre Training in adult literacy is a national priority area unde the local education authority training grants scheme an we are supporting expenditure of £700,000 this year.

Local education authorities are the main providers c adult literacy and other basic skills tuition. The Adu Literacy and Basic Skills Unit estimates that loca education authorities in England and Wales are spendin about £26·3 million a year on adult basic education. Th Employment Department funds training and enterpris councils, which provide training programmes takin account of local labour market needs, including th requirements of unemployed people with literac difficulties. The Home Office also makes provision fo those with inadequate literacy skills in prisons.

The Government are not yet in a position to announc what funds will be available in the next three years fo those programmes which it funds directly. The expenditu of local education authorities is for them to decide in th light of available resources.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State fo Education and Science how many teachers are current employed in the Government's efforts to tackle illiterac

Mr. Eggar: Comprehensive figures are not availabl Local education authorities provide annual returns to th Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit. These include th numbers of staff involved in teaching adult literacy an related basic skills. In November 1989, 751 full-time tuto and 8,514 part-time tutors were employed by loc education authorities. In addition, there were 3,9 volunteer tutors.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State f Education and Science if he will conduct a survey establish the extent of illiteracy in adults in the Unit Kingdom at the present time; and if he will make statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have no plans to conduct such a survey present. Our best estimate, based on evidence from t national child development study survey in 1981, sugge that about 13 per cent. of adults may have some proble with literacy and numeracy. I understand that a furth survey for this study is currently taking place.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State f Education and Science what agencies, voluntary a statutory, are involved in the Government's efforts tackle adult illiteracy.

Mr. Eggar: A number of voluntary sector provid have a substantial involvement in adult basic educatio for example, the National Association for the Care a Rehabilitation of Offenders, but a comprenhensive list not available. The main statutory agencies involved improving adult literacy and related basic skills include t following: the Department of Education and Science a the Welsh Office which support the Adult Literacy a Basic Skills Unit; the Employment Department throu its training, enterprise and education directorate; t Home Office; local education authorities; and oth organisations such as the BBC and the library service.

Refugees

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider making additional earmarked grants available to local education authorities for provision of English courses for refugees newly arrived in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Fallon: It is open to local education authorities in England and Wales to apply for grants paid under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 to meet the educational needs, including the need for English language teaching, of those who are for the time being resident in a camp or other accommodation or establishment provided for refugees or for displaced or similar persons. Provision for English language teaching for other refugees is a matter for the local education authority concerned. However, if the refugees are from the Commonwealth, local education authorities in England and Wales may apply for grant paid by the Home Office under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 to support the cost of English language teaching.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider making additional resources available to asylum seekers to meet the fees sought by British universities or colleges to which they may apply.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government do not regard it as appropriate to provide resources to meet the course fees of applicants for asylum, since there is no presumption that they will be allowed to remain in this country. Those granted asylum are eligible to apply for mandatory awards, or to pay fees at the home rate if they do not qualify for such an award.

Student Loans Company

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if non-executive directors will be appointed to the board of the Student Loans Company.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The board of the Student Loans Company met on 1 November and, with the approval of the then holder of my office and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, appointed Mr. Ralph Kanter as non-executive director. This appointment will bring additional commercial expertise to the board of a successful and efficient company.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Child Care Cases

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Attorney-General what steps have been taken by the Lord Chancellor to nominate members of the judiciary to deal with child care cases in the higher courts under the Children Act 1989; and whether the location at which these hearings will take place have been determined.

The Attorney-General: The Children Act 1989 is due to be implemented on 14 October 1991. Central to the philosophy of the Act is the principle that children's cases in the higher courts should be heard by judicary who, by reason of their experience and training, are specialists in family work.

Under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, the Lord Chancellor will have the power to nominate such judiciary, with the concurrence of the president of the family division. The nomination process is expected to extend over a period of months, but as a first step the Lord Chancellor has, with the approval of the right honourable Sir Stephen Brown, president of the family division, named 47 circuit judges who will be known as "designated family judges". This group of judges will be based at the network of county court "care centres" and will have the primary responsibility for hearing the child care cases transferred to those centres from the magistrates courts.

Each centre will also provide the focus for a local implementation committee which will be chaired by the designated family judge and which will play a major role in developing implementation plans based on local circumstances. It is envisaged that these committees will begin their work well before October 1991.

The location of the "care centres" which were announced on 2 August have been confirmed following widespread consultation with justices' clerks, local authorities and other interest groups. The 50 locations, together with the name of the designated family judge assigned to each one, are as follows:

The principal registry of the family division will act as the centre for child care cases in London. Mrs. Justice Bracewell, whose appointment as family division liaison judge for London was announced on 27 September, will be assigned special responsibility for this centre.

Drumcree Church Parade

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Attorney-General whether any proceedings have been taken against spectators of the church parade to Drumcree parish church, County Armagh, on 8 July, in respect of their threatening, abusive and insulting language or in respect of their display of flags and posters likely to provoke a breach of the peace.

Mr. Cope: I have been asked to reply.

This is a matter for the chief constable, but I understand that no arrests were made by police during the parade and no proceedings are pending.

ENVIRONMENT

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many civil servants are currently employed (a) full time and (b) part time by his Department on civil defence; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staff to be transferred to work on other duties.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information requested is as follows:

Nil	34	261K	230K

My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary announced on 16 October that he had initiated a review of the options for the future of civil defence arrangements in the light of east-west relations. Future levels of expenditure in civil defence will depend on the outcome of that review.

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State Environment what assessment his Department ha of the emission standard for carbon monoxide fo vehicles which would be necessary to achie environmental aims set out in his White Paper Common Inheritance".

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is our assessment t strict car exhaust emissions standards for which pressing within the European Community will enal achieve the Environmental White Paper aims for

Avian Pests

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State Environment what discussions he has had w European Commission concerning the birds di provisions for avian pest species.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There have been many m with the Commission in recent years, at both mi and official level, at which ways of accommodat control practices within the directive's pr framework for birds and their habitats ha discussed.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State Environment what proposals he intends to pu European Community for a control scheme for av species following his decision not to amend the and Countryside Act.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Only the E Commission may submit proposals to the Cou amending Community law. In the Governmen however, there is a case for amending the E directive so that where member states can sh control of avian pest species is necessary and w endanger the survival of those species, they may a appropriate measures without having to operate sary bureaucratic procedures. The Commission is the Government's views.

Smoke Controls

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of the Environment what support will be offered Department to implement the extension of Clean controls to areas of dense smoke.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Local authorities designate smoke control areas under the Clean are eligible for Exchequer grant of 40 per cent. o of adapting heating and cooking appliances to smokelessly. Since 1979-80, grants totalling m £15 million have been awarded to local auth England and Wales.

The Mall

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of Sta Environment why The Mall in London SW1 is traffic on Sundays.

Mr. Trippier: The Mall is closed on Su facilitate pedestrian access to St. James's par improve the amenity of the area for visitors.

Government Offices (Furnishing)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his assessment of the relative costs of furnishing Government offices (a) from Crown Suppliers and (b) from (i) German and (ii) other foreign suppliers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Since 1987 Government Departments have been individually responsible for purchasing furniture wherever value for money can be obtained. The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is (a) the Government assistance per head in the North Devon district council area and (b) the community charge in the same area.

Mr. Key: External support to the North Devon district council area is £470 per adult in 1990-91. External support consists of revenue support grant, receipts from the national non-domestic rate pool, receipts from the safety net and low rateable values grant. The average community charge in the area is £319.

Charge payers in the North Devon area also receive additional Government assistance through community charge benefits and the transitional relief scheme.

Nature Conservancy Council

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the reasons he gave the Nature Conservancy Council for not providing it with additional funding to assist in the purchase of fenns and whixhall mosses.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We expect the Council to make the safeguarding of important sites a top priority when disbursing the grant in aid it receives from my Department each year. Its grant in aid was increased by almost £4 million to £44·069 million this year and should have been more than sufficient for the purchase of the fenns and whixall mosses. We do not retain funds within the Department for site acquistion.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library the report commissioned by his Department to examine the feasibility of alternatives to reprocessing of nuclear waste.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to DOE report No. DOE RW89/089 entitled "Packing, storage and direct disposal of spent AGR fuel". The report was submitted to the Department in November 1989. A copy was also sent to the national lending library in Boston Spa, where it is available to the public on request. I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of the use of dry storage of nuclear waste from advanced gas-cooled reactors as an alternative to reprocessing or subterranean disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No such assessment has been made by my Department. The hon. Member is aware of the report commissioned by my Department on the feasibility of dry storage of spent fuel. Spent fuel is not nuclear waste unless it is designated for direct disposal. The storage of nuclear fuel is a matter for the nuclear industry.

County Hall (London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why the bid from the County Hall Development Group for county hall was formally rescinded by the London residuary body; and what the impact on capital receipts for the London boroughs will be.

Mr. Key: The County Hall Development Group failed to complete the purchase of county hall as required by the London residuary body. LRB notified London boroughs on 25 October that there would be no general distribution of Greater London capital receipts this year.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of county hall, London, SE1.

Mr. Key: My Department's letter of 24 July invited the London residuary body and the County Hall Development Group to submit amendments to the planning and associated applications that were the subject of a public inquiry in the autumn of 1989. Amendments were submitted by the London residuary body on 7 November and copies sent to all parties to the public inquiry. My Department has invited comments on the proposed amendments. I will be considering whether the inquiry should be reopened.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the £23·1 million deposit that appears on page 16 of the London residuary body accounts for 1989-90 relates to; and what has happened to this deposit.

Mr. Key: The sum of £23·1 million relates to the deposit on the purchase of county hall. It is now held by the London residuary body and reserved from distribution in 1990-91 in accordance with the terms of the 1990 London capital money order.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to appoint a Labour party nominee to membership of the London residuary body.

Mr. Key: No.

Spencer House

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what items were transferred from Kenwood to Spencer house; and what was the basis of the transfer.

Mr. Trippier: A suite of furniture comprising five chairs and two sofas, which had been on loan from Spencer house to Kenwood house since 1958, was returned to the painted room at the newly restored Spencer house when it was reopened on Monday 19 November. The furniture was purchased by the Victoria and Albert museum in 1977 and remained on loan to Kenwood house until its recent removal. This is consistent with the V and A's policy of reinstating furniture and works of art to their original locations wherever possible. The furniture will continue to be available for public view.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the basis of calculation that resulted in Wandsworth receiving the highest cash payment of inner London boroughs from the London residuary body in respect of capital receipts in 1989-90 and Barnet receiving the highest cash payment of the outer London boroughs.

Mr. Key: The distribution of capital receipts by the London residuary body is based on population. The London borough of Croydon received the largest cash payment of the outer London boroughs.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the recommendations in the report of the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux "Coping with the Community Charge".

Mr. Key [holding answer 22 November 1990]: Officials in my Department discussed with the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux the detail of the report last July. Substantial assistance has also been given to the association towards the creation of an office manual on the community charge for advice bureaux officers.

Langbaurgh District Council

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with representatives of Langbaurgh district council.

Mr. Key [holding answer 22 November 1990]: I met my hon. Friend the Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Holt) and representatives of the district council on 21 November. The delegation made a number of points about the proposals for the revenue support grant settlement which will be considered before final decisions are taken. They also raised the question of charge capping.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Water Projects, India

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when the water project in Orissa state will be going ahead; and if the Government will fund the training rig programme;

(2) what is the current position regarding talks between the Overseas Development Administration and (a) Save the Children, (b) UNICEF and (c) the People's Rural Education Movement in respect of the water projects in Orissa state, Uttar Pradesh, Rajastan and Gujarat, respectively.

Mrs. Chalker: We have submitted to the Government of India a detailed proposal for a mission to formulate an integrated rural water supply project in southern Orissa, to tackle engineering, health and social issues jointly. The organisations to be involved in the project, which may include those referred to by the hon. Lady, will depend on the mission's findings.

We have confirmed to UNICEF in writing our in funding British rigs for certain villages, in a nu Indian states, as part of its next five-year program have discussions with it next week. The need for a rig programme will depend on UNICEF's respon

Mentally Ill People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of S Health what plans his Department has to extend t made available to care for the mentally ill, t mentally handicapped people in general.

Mr. Dorrell: The specific mental illness gra introduced because, in comparison with othe groups, local authorities had not been able sufficient priority to the mentally ill. In contra authority expenditure on services for mentally capped people has been rising steadily in real term sustained period, increasing by 72 per cent. 1979-80 and 1988-89 to £358 million.

Disabled People

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State fo what representations he has received on local au being empowered to make payments directly to people to make their own care arrangements.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There have been a nu representations on the subject.

Snapethorpe Hospital, Wakefield

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State fo if he will ensure that any moneys accruing to Y regional health authority from the proposed Snapethorpe hospital, Wakefield, are made avai Wakefield district health authority.

Mr. Dorrell: To encourage district health autho identify surplus property it is our policy that distri authorities should benefit from the proceeds Regional health authorities are instructed, there pass a significant proportion of sale proceeds to th health authority which initiates the sale. Regar proposed sale of Snapethorpe I suggest the hon. contacts the regional health authority chairman, S Askew.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Teacher Training

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for N Ireland whether teacher training colleges have any in interpreting the recommendations of the comm course accreditation for teacher education.

Dr. Mawhinney: In order to be approved Department of Education, courses of initial training in Northern Ireland must meet criteria la by the Council for the Accreditation of Education.

Some of these criteria prescribe specific requ which must be met; but others are not so pre seeking rather to establish a framework within which courses should be organised. Thus under the criteria relating to the selection and admission of students to postgraduate courses, it is for the institution to determine how appropriate the content of the entrant's initial degree is to the primary or secondary curriculum.

The colleges in Northern Ireland have exactly the same degree of latitude in this respect as their counterparts in England and Wales.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a list of those colleges whose graduates' training and qualifications are (a) likely to be acceptable and (b) unlikely to be acceptable for course accreditation for teacher education and entry to a recognised teacher training course.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available in the form requested. However, I can reassure the hon. Gentleman that all courses provided by Northern Ireland's two colleges of education meet the criteria laid down by the Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any discussions have been held between the Department of Education (Northern Ireland) and education and library boards in relation to retraining for teachers or training for alternative careers for teachers experiencing difficulty coping with education reforms and curriculum changes; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland regularly discusses all aspects of the in-service training of teachers with the area boards. These have embarked on major training programmes in fulfilment of their statutory responsibility to ensure that all teachers in grant-aided schools in their areas have the necessary skills to implement the various aspects of education reform, including the common curriculum.

To assist the boards to implement such a programme, substantial additional resources, both money and additional staff training time have been made available to each board.

I am very pleased with the way in which Northern Ireland's teachers are responding to these changes.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Late Sittings

Ms. Harman: To ask the Lord President of the Council how much it cost to keep the House of Commons open after midnight in Sessions 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. MacGregor: It is not possible to identify such costs.

Broadcasting of Parliament

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the statutory provisions that apply to the broadcasting of the proceedings of Parliament.

Mr. MacGregor: The broadcasting of the House's proceedings is carried out under the authority of the resolutions of the House of 26 July 1977 (sound broadcasting) and 19 July 1990 (televising). In the latter case, a further resolution will be required to provide authority for the continued televising of the House's proceedings after 1 October 1991 on the basis of permanent arrangements to be recommended to the House in due course by the Select Committee on Broadcasting.

The only statutory provisions which directly relate to the broadcasting of the House's proceedings are those contained in the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988. Section 165(4)(b) of the Act provides that of either House is protected by copyright. Section 167 states that the functions of the House of Commons as owner of copyright are to be performed by Mr. Speaker. In exercise of these powers in relation to the broadcasting of proceedings, Mr. Speaker has granted a licence to House of Commons Broadcasting Unit Ltd., a company formed by the BBC and independent television, for the purposes of producing and distributing the signal.

As for the inclusion within programmes of extracts from, or live transmissions of, parliamentary proceedings, the broadcasters are, of course, subject to the same legal obligations and standards in such areas as political balance as apply under the various Broadcasting Acts to all their other activities. Responsibility for the operation and administration of the relevant legislation lies, in the first instance, with my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary.

TRANSPORT

Footbridges

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will indicate the approximate range of costs of footbridges with sloping ramps suitable for installation over six-lane trunk roads.

Mr. Chope: Typical construction costs for such a footbridge are currently estimated at between £200,000 and £350,000. The total cost could be higher depending on factors such as location, land and foundation costs, and the angle to the carriageway.

Public Service Vehicles

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to monitor the operation of the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990.

Mr. Freeman: I am keeping various aspects of these regulations under review.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, how many prosecutions have been brought under the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990: and of those prosecutions, how many were in respect of clause 4.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the number of complaints that have been made by members of the public to the police in respect of clause 4 of the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990; and if he will undertake a review to assess the effectiveness of the enforcement of the above clause.

Mr. Freeman: Information on such complaints is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. We have no plans to review the enforcement of the regulations.

Midland Main Line

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about British Rail's longer-term plans for the midland main line.

Mr. Freeman: The midland main line is, and will continue to be, an important line for british Rail. Over £150 million at cash prices has been invested in the line since 1979, £40 million on rolling stock and the rest on signalling, infrastructure and improvements to passenger facilities. British Rail's investment will continue and it will also be developing plans and taking key decisions over the next two to three years about the longer-term future of the line. These plans will assess the options available when the existing high-speed trains are ready for renewal. I can assure my hon. Friend that electrification of the line will be an option.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will ask British Rail to undertake further investment to cut travelling time on the midland main line from London to Leicester.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that InterCity is considering spending a further £5 to £10 million on the infrastructure of the midland main line in the mid-1990s to improve journey times. Depending on the availability of finance it might be possible for British Rail to advance some, but not all, of this investment.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the European Commission about the environmental impact of the east London river crossing on Oxleas woods.

Mr. Chope: I have not received any representation from the European Commission on this subject.

Toll Roads

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) why his Department did not allow the Staffordshire forum of district councils to make a presentation on the proposed toll road;

(2) if he will name each of the six companies which are currently bidding to win the contract from his Department in respect of the toll road alternative to the Birmingham-Manchester M6;

(3) if he will place in the Library alternative proposed routes for the proposed toll road alternative to the M6.

Mr. Freeman: In April this year, we invited outline proposals from the private sector for new privately funded road capacity between Birmingham and Manchester. The following four groups responded:

Balfour Beatty
Tarmac
Trafalgar House/Italstat
Western Parkway Consortium: led by Manufacturers Hanover and Cofiroute.

In addition, the following two groups expressed an interest in participating in the project:

W. S. Atkins Consultants
Mitsubishi Bank.

The proposals that we have received are bei evaluated and, at this stage, remain co confidential. The Department is currently various aspects of the proposals with the respo still too early to give details of any of these pro is not certain yet which—if any—would be ac the Government. When we are clear about proposal, consultations will take place with a parties—including the Staffordshire forum councils—in the normal way.

M6

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State fo if he will estimate the volume of traffic current M6 motorway and for each of the next five 2030.

Mr. Freeman: On some weekdays, 24- exceeding 100,000 vehicles have been record junctions 11 and 16. A detailed breakdown o flow figures is given in "Information for Bidders" for the Birmingham-Manchester petition. A copy is in the House Library. National Road Traffic Forecasts" forecasts tra to grow between 83 and 143 per cent. by the

Corporation Tax

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the he will break down the 1989 figure of corporat by industrial and provident societies given in h 23 October, Official Report, column 107, i classes of such societies listed by the Registrar Societies in his annual report.

Mr. Maude: Building societies account f bulk of the total, but the full breakdown req be prepared only at disproportionate cost.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Ex will make a statement on the outcome of the la of the European Community's Economic Council.

Mr. Maude: The ECOFIN Council met in 19 November. The Minister of State for Corp and I represented the United Kingdom. Furt was made in discussions on the investm directive. The arrangements for VAT contro were also discussed and I explained the impo United Kingdom of further consultations wit also stressed the importance of setting thresh minimise the impact of VAT requiremen businesses. The presidency gave a brief report in developing a system for controlling move the Community of goods subject to ex Discussion of travellers' allowances for duty was postponed.

The Council discussed a report from the p negotiations with the European Parlia revisions to the financial perspective of the Community budget arising from German unification and the Gulf crisis.

The Commission reported on the Community's offer in the financial services negotiations in the Uruguay round. This offer received general support.

Capital Asset Information Systems

Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the development of proposals for improved capital asset information systems in Government.

Mr. Maples: An interdepartmental working group has now completed a study into these systems and has made recommendations. The report of the group has now been published and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Controlled Drugs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement as to the way in which Her Majesty's Customs and Excise assesses the street value of controlled drugs for the purpose of preparing evidence of value for courts.

Mr. Ryder: When called upon to provide a street value of controlled drugs Her Majesty's Customs and Excise use the national average street price as calculated by the national drugs intelligence unit from information provided by the police.

Privatisations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras of 13 November, Official Report, column 112, (1) if he will publish the list of appointments various companies have held in advising on past privatisations;

(2) whether the performance of any adviser on privatisation has been such as to cause them to warn Departments before considering them for a further privatisation.

Mr. Maude [holding answers 22 November 1990]: I have placed a copy of the list the hon. Member requested in the Library. Obviously, past performance is one of the factors taken into account in considering an adviser for a further appointment.

DEFENCE

Chemical Weapons

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his policy as to the most appropriate response to a chemical weapon attack by Iraq;

(2) what is his policy as to the most appropriate response to the use of chemical weapons by Iraq.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government would take the gravest view of any Iraqi attack using chemical weapons. I am not prepared to indicate in advance what our response to such an attack might be.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the Government will invest further resources in chemical weapons research following the developments in the Gulf;

(2) if the Government will invest further resources in biological weapons research following the developments in the Gulf.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my predecessor the hon. Member for Romford (Mr. Neubert), gave to her questions on 8 February 1990, Official Report, columns 775-76.

Porton Down

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the funds allocated to Porton Down chemical weapons research establishment in 1990; and what will be the level of funding in 1991.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The budget of the chemical defence establishment, Porton Down for the financial year 1990-91 is some £24 million. Budgets for 1991-92 will be determined in due course.

Signal Tower, Brizlee Wood

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is planned to demolish the existing signal tower and dishes at Brizlee wood, Northumberland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The station is expected to remain operational for the foreseeable future.

Service Personnel (Insurance)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have been held with the insurance industry in order to ensure appropriate mechanisms to ensure that service personnel are not disadvantaged in the housing market or in respect of life insurance and to ensure that they are compensated for any extra financial burden; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Department keeps in close touch with the insurance industry through the Association of British Insurers and through insurance brokers with traditional links with the services.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received regarding incidents where members of the armed services, including individuals neither under orders nor on standby, have been asked to pay a surcharge or otherwise disadvantaged before being accepted for life insurance cover, due to the Gulf crisis.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand that one letter has been received by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he will take to ensure that members of the armed services who are charged a surcharge in respect of life insurance due to the Gulf crisis, even when neither under orders nor on standby, are compensated for such additional costs.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not yet clear whether such steps are necessary, but we are keeping the matter under review.

EMPLOYMENT

Demographic Changes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the members of the interdepartmental working group set up to consider ways of alleviating the effects of forecast demographic change to the work force in the 1990s;

(2) if he will publish the recommendations made by the working group set up to consider ways of alleviating the effects of the forecast demographic change to the work force in the 1990s.

Mr. Jackson: An ad-hoc interdepartmental working group of officials was set up in 1987 to consider the implications of the decline in the number of young people entering the labour market. The working group consisted of officials from the Department of Employment, which chaired the group, the Department of Education and Science, the Manpower Services Commission, the Department of Health and Social Security, the Manpower and Personnel Office and the Ministry of Defence.

The working group's findings were summarised in an article entitled "New Entrants to the Labour Market in the 1990s", which was published in the May 1988 edition of Employment Gazette, and in chapter 1 of the Government White Paper "Employment for the 1990s" (Cm 540).

Labour Statistics

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many were employed in the (a) agricultural industry, (b) coal mining industry, (c) shipbuilding and ship repair industries and (d) steel industry as at June 1990.

Mr. Jackson: Information is given is the table.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Refugees

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will conduct a review of the social security provisions which are currently applied to refugees newly arrived in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will increase the resources made available to publicise the availability of social security assistance available to refugees newly arrived in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to do so. Adequate information is already available to newly arrived refugees and their advisers. All those refugees who do not already have contacts in the United Kingdom can turn for advice to the numerous refugee agencies, many of which receive Government funding.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what savings are made to the social security budget by reducing income support available to asylum seekers.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: None. The income support budget takes into account the provision for asylum seekers allowed under the rules.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will issue new guidelines to his Department's local offices authorising the award of social fund grants to bona fide refugees newly arrived in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Scott: No. There is already guidance to local offices on social fund provision for refugees. They can apply for a crisis loan when they first arrive in the United Kingdom. If they receive income support they can apply for a community care grant. In both cases the social fund officer will consider the full circumstances of their claim before making a decision.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make the full income support rate of payment available to asylum seekers newly arrived in the United Kingdom;

(2) if he will increae the rates of income support presently offered to asylum seekers under the age of 25 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There are no plans at p changes in the relevant income support rules.

Residential Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State f Security if Price Waterhouse was asked to eva quality of care offered when undertaking its rece into residential and nursing homes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The objective of the su to identify the range of costs of caring for pe different types and levels of dependency in varying size and staff-resident ratios in differen Great Britain. All the homes in the survey would to registration and inspection by the relevant authority to ensure appropriate standards und tion made by my right hon. Friend the Secretar for Health.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of Wales if he will announce the results of his co about exemptions from Welsh in the national cu

Mr. David Hunt: I have carefully considered of the Curriculum Council for Wales, local authorities and others on the issues set ou consultation document published by my prede 28 February.

There was general approval for the proposal the provision that schools not yet teaching Wel teach it for a "reasonable time" until the curriculum requirements come into effect regulations to implement this on 12 November.

There was also widespread though not u approval for the proposal to exempt from the curriculum requirement for Welsh pupils fro Wales who enter a school in Wales for the first t final year of key stage 3 or during key stage therefore be issuing for consultation draft regu implement this exemption for such pupils prov have not studied Welsh in the school curricul least one academic year in any of the prece academic years.

The consultation document indicated a prepa consider proposals from LEAs for an extension further two years of the period for phasing in We this was necessary and formed part of an LEA pl full introduction of Welsh in the national curri Clwyd, Gwynedd, Mid Glamorgan and West Glamorgan LEAs have not sought any extension and I propose to accept that.

Gwent LEA, which starts from a position of very limited provision in its schools, put forward a detailed plan for implementation which would require some exemptions for up to two years. I welcome the positive approach the authority has taken and I am making proposals in line with its implementation plan.

Powys and South Glamorgan LEAs also put forward implementation plans which I accept and which provide for deferment in some schools for up to two years.

Dyfed LEA has not sought any exemptions in general, but drew attention to the secondary schools of South Pembrokeshire with which it had agreed a proposal to extend the implementation of key stage 3 so that it would be taught to the end of key stage 3 by 1997. I accept this proposal.

I am now proceeding to consultation on proposals to implement the necessary limited period exemptions.

Dyfed LEA also takes the view that it would not be appropriate in the secondary schools in south Pembrokeshire to implement the national curriculum requirement for Welsh in key stage 4 at present. In view of the LEA's policy and of the distinctive historical and linguistic character of the south Pembrokeshire area, I shall be consulting interested bodies on a proposal to exempt the south Pembrokeshire secondary schools from Welsh at key stage 4. However, I do not think it would be right for any pupil in Wales to be deprived of the chance to choose to study Welsh in key stage 4. I would therefore propose that the exempted schools should make arrangements for Welsh to be an option for those pupils who choose it. Subject to that, I would propose to exempt the following schools from Welsh at key stage 4:

Greenhill School, Tenby
Milford Haven Comprehensive School
Pembroke School
Sir Thomas Picton School, Haverfordwest
Tasker-Millward VC Comprehensive School, Haverfordwest

The consultation exercise addressed the issue of flows of pupils across the border with England. Neither the CCW nor any LEA considered it sensible to make exemption regulations which would single out children who live in England but who are in classes in schools in Wales. I do not propose to do so. Nevertheless there are schools which take in numbers of pupils from England. Some schools with catchment areas or potential catchment areas which cross the English border have expressed concerns about possible losses of pupils if they were required to study Welsh, particularly at key stage 4. I therefore propose to respond to those concerns by consulting on proposals to exempt the following schools from the national curriculum requirements for Welsh at key stage 4. I propose that the exempted schools should make arrangements for Welsh to be available as an option at key stage 4 for those pupils who choose it:

Clwyd
Darland High School
Hawarden High School
The Maelor School, Wrexham
St. Richard Gwynn High School, Flint
St. David's High School, Saltney
St. Joseph's High School, Wrexhyam

Patient Care, Dyfed

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives are being taken to promote a better quality of care for patients in Dyfed, Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The quality strategy "A Quality Health Service for Wales", published in April 1990, is not intended to be prescriptive but to provide a framework within which individual health authorities can develop their own quality programmes in the context of their own strategic intent. Health authorities are required to consider how best they could progress quality within their own areas, using the strategy as a working framework.

Within the context of the Department's annual review East Dyfed health authority has confirmed its commitment to the development of total quality management (TQM) and the pursuance of quality care as a key task for the health authority within the district's overall philosophy of being consumer responsive. The authority is also developing explicit statements on quality standards for the contracting process. Detailed information on initiatives in East Dyfed is, however, a matter for the authority.

Welsh Speakers, Ceredigion

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh speakers there are in Ceredigion; what were the corresponding figures for 1960, 1970 and 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The most recent data available are from the 1981 census. Information on Welsh speakers in earlier years is also related to the dates of the census. The number of people aged three and over who were recorded as speaking Welsh in the 1961, 1971 and 1981 censuses was as follows:

	Enumerated population speaking Welsh[1]
1961	[2]38,500
1971	[2]35,800
1981	35,200

[1] The enumerated population consists of persons present at midnight on census night whether or not they were usually resident there.

Farmers' Unions

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when he last met the National Farmers Union; what representations it made to him; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he last met the Farmers Union of Wales; what representations it made to him; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend had a joint meeting with representatives of the National Farmers Union and the Farmers Union of Wales on 25 October 1990 to discuss the state of the agriculture industry in Wales.

Sheepmeat Producers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken to assist sheepmeat producers.

Sir Wyn Roberts: We were able to bring forward the timing of the two advance payments of sheep annual premium. Most, if not all, producers in Wales will, by now, have received the first payment of £2·40 per eligible ewe and will shortly receive the second instalment of £2·45 per head. This represents a cash flow benefit of some £25 million for producers in Wales. In addition, sheepmeat producers in the LFA can look forward to a 4 ecu per head (currently about £3·12) supplement to the sheep annual premium for 1991 as a result of this year's price-fixing agreement. The benefits of the green pound devaluation negotiated at the price fixing will also accrue from the beginning of the 1991 marketing year.

Hill Farmers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policy initiatives he proproses to safeguard and to enhance the incomes of hill farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Farmers in our less-favoured areas benefit directly from a number of special measures that are already in place, including the hill livestock compensatory allowances, enhanced rates of capital grants and for 1991 the maximum permitted payment under EC rules of the suckler cow premium. For the future we shall continue to seek to ensure that hill farmers in Wales are able to compete effectively and on equal terms with the rest of Europe.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from hill farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: During his recent visits to a number of hill farms my right hon. Friend discussed with farmers a wide range of issues affecting the agricultural industry in the less-favoured areas of Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has visited European Community institutions on the continent to discuss upland farmers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: In line with long-established practice, my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food takes the lead in European Community discussions and negotiations. We are in regular contact with him and we know that he is fully apprised of the needs of the upland farmers in Wales.

SCOTLAND

Second Homes

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of registered second homes by district council area as at (a) 1 April 1980, (b) 1 April 1988 and (c) 1 April 1990.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is held centrally only on the estimated numbers of second and holiday homes in each district council area at 30 June 1988. These are given in the table. Comparable figures for 1980 and 1990 are not available.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in each local authority area in Scotland have received a payment under the community charge special payments scheme; and what is the total sum paid out by each authority.

Mr. Lang: No local authority has yet provided details of the numbers of people receiving special payments in its area or of the amounts involved.

Sand Eel Catches

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the numbers of 0-group, 1-group and older fish in the sand eel catches in International Council for the Exploration of the Seas division VIa in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The estimated numbers are as follows:

Thousands

	0-Group	1-Group	2 Group and older
1985	3,260,010	152,092	1,240,938
1986	3,065,660	1,845,060	873,010
1987	700,070	1,196,780	518,460
1988	967,187	258,855	2,352,518
1989	444,595	225,564	1,284,771

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the size of the sand eel catches in International Council for the Exploration of the Seas division VIa in 1990, (b) the amount of fishing effort directed towards sand eel fishing and (c) the home ports of vessels concerned.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The sand eel catch in International Council for the Exploration of the Seas area VIa in 1990 up to and including October was 16,515 tonnes.

(b) 2,065 hours' fishing.

The data available are up to and including October 1990 and are therefore subject to revision.

(c) Eleven vessels have recorded sand eel catches from area VIa to date. The districts of the vessels concerned are:

	Number
Fraserburgh	3
Stornoway	2
Aberdeen	1
Ayr	1
MacDuff	1
Mallaig	1
Orkney	1
Shetland	1

Child Care, Fife

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if anyone involved in the inquiry into child care policy in Fife region has been given immunity from prosecution by the Crown Office; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 12 November 1990]: I am advised that one witness was granted limited immunity in respect of one incident not involving children.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Medical Care)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the normal arrangements for providing medical care for prisoners who are seriously ill; and under what circumstances treatment is normally arranged outside prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: The medical officer of a prison is statutorily responsible for the health care of its prisoners and has clinical discretion to make whatever arrangements are deemed appropriate to meet the health needs of those who become ill. In general the medical officer will arrange for treatment to be received outside when the treatment required is such that it cannot be provided by a prison service hospital or medical centre.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what form of transport is normally used to convey a prisoner when medical treatment is thought to be necessary outside a prison; and what security arrangements are made.

Mrs. Rumbold: Such matters are determined at the time according to the circumstances of the particular case, including the security classification of the prisoner.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in the last 12 months have been permitted to receive medical care outside prison; and what are the criteria for deciding if private medical care is appropriate in a particular case.

Mrs. Rumbold: In the 12 months ended 31 March 1990 prisoners attended out-patient departments of NHS hospitals on 18,740 occasions. During the same period there were 1,988 temporary removals of prisoners to NHS hospitals for in-patient observation or treatment. The number of prisoners involved is not recorded. More recent information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Instances of prisoners being allowed to receive private medical treatment outside prison are not statistically recorded. A prisoner may receive in-patient treatment privately only in exceptional circumstances. The medical officer must be satisfied that the treatment should be carried out during the period in which the prisoner is likely to be in custody; that it cannot be provided in a prison service hospital; and that either the prisoner should be treated significantly earlier privately than under NHS arrangements or the prisoner had received an appointment for private in-patient treatment before coming into prison. Prisoners are not normally allowed to receive out-patient treatment on a private basis, but individual cases are considered on their merits.

Freemasons

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will hold an inquiry into the operation of freemasonry within the Prison Department and the prison system.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have no plans to do so, but if the hon. Member has any specific cause for concern, perhaps he could let me know.

Mr. Paul Malone

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he is going to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Broadgreen regarding the findings of the two-year inquiry into the matter of the incarceration of Paul Malone.

Mr. John Patten: I wrote to the hon. Member about Mr. Malone's case on 21 November.

Controlled Drugs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners were serving prison sentences on 1 September for offences of importing controlled drugs;

(2) if he will enumerate by nationalities the prisoners serving sentences on 1 September for offences of importing controlled drugs, and the prisons in which they are serving their sentences.

Mrs. Rumbold: The only readily available information on the types of drugs offence does not separately distinguish females or nationality; it is published annually in "Prison Statistics England and Wales" (table 1(a) of the latest volume, for 1989, Cm. 1221), copies of which are in the Library.

Prisons (Education)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many GCSE examinations were sat by prisoners in Her Majesty's prisons in the last academic year; if the national curriculum is to be applied to education in prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: A total of 666 GCSE examinations were sat by prisoners in 1989-90. Prison service establishments will, as far as possible, apply the national curriculum.

Forensic Scientists

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the numbers of forensic scientists available for police work.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are currently 588 staff in post in the forensic science service of whom 527 are scientific and technical staff who, directly or indirectly, provide scientific support to the police.

Mr. Charles McGhee

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will refer for review by the Court of Appeal the case of Charles McGhee, who was convicted and sentenced on 17 May 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Representations from Mr. McGhee which have been submitted on his behalf are being considered to decide whether there are any grounds to justify our intervention.

Remand

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to increase the number of remand places available for female defendants remanded into custody from Welsh courts.

Mrs. Rumbold: Female prisoners committed into custody by courts in north Wales are at present received at Risley remand centre and those committed by courts in south Wales are received at Pucklechurch. The provision of remand places for female prisoners at these establishments is kept under constant review and there are currently plans to create a further 60 places for females at Risley by the mid-1990s.

Deportation Orders

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deportation orders he has signed in the last 10 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The numbers of deportation orders made in each year since 1980 are published in table 18 of the annual Home Office Command Paper "Control of Immigration Statistics, United Kingdom, 1989" (Cm.1124), a copy of which is in the Library.

Immigration

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the backlog of immigration cases in each category for October.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of outstanding cases relates to casework in B1 division in the immigration and nationality department and is as follows:

Outstanding Cases—October

	Number
General Immigration Casework[1][2]	20,910
Asylum and Related Casework[1][3]	29,936

[1] Does not include applications received in the Department but which await allocation to caseworkers.

[2] Includes referred entry clearance applications, and enquiries submitted by letter, as well as variation of leave cases. Includes both general and Eastern European casework (the latter was absorbed into general casework in July 1990).

[3] These figures are a total of all work outstanding in the Refugee Unit.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has visited (a) Lunar house and (b) the Liverpool passport office.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have paid three visits to Lunar house and one to Liverpool passport office since November 1989.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports are held at (a) Lunar house and (b) the Liverpool passport office.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Refugees

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will take steps to amend existing regulations to allow newly arrived refugees who have children to apply for family reunion as of the date of their arrival in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Once a person is recognised as a refugee, his or her spouse and minor children may be admitted to the United Kingdom immediately.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will amend the employment regulations to allow newly arrived asylum seekers to qualify for work permits as soon as they arrive in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no present plans to change our practice in allowing asylum seekers to work. The issue will be considered in the current review of asylum arrangements.

Visitors

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of visitors to the United Kingdom admitted in each quarter in 1988 and 1989, showing the numbers by country of embarkation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 14 November 1990]: The available information is by nationality and is given in the tables.

ENERGY

Low-energy Light Bulbs

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about the inclusion of low-energy light bulbs in the home energy efficiency scheme; and what has been his response.

Mr. Baldry: One respondent to the consultation paper on the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) published earlier this year sought to have the provision of low-energy light bulbs brought within the scheme. HEES is being introduced under powers taken in section 15 of the Social Security Act 1990, which do not enable the scheme to be extended to cover grant for provision of low-energy lighting.

PowerGen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what compensation has been awarded to Mr. Malpas, the ex-chairman of PowerGen; and how many years' salary it is equivalent to.

Mr. Baldry: The question of compensation is under discussion between PowerGen and Mr. Malpas.

Dounreay

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what long-term assessment he has made (a) of the consequences of current rundown at Dounreay for the United Kingdom's fuel requirements in the 21st century and (b) of Sir Frederick Warner's and Dr. Eric Vocie's evidence to the Select Committee on Energy in relation to Dounreay.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my predecessor on 21 July 1988 about the Government's review of the fast reactor programme. That review took full account of the position on uranium supplies in the next century.

North Sea Installations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether there are any platforms on North sea installations on which full emergency shutdown valves have still to be fitted on risers as near to sea level as practicable.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department has identified 181 pipeline risers which require the fitting or relocation of emergency shutdown valves to comply with the Offshore Installations (Emergency Pipeline Valve) Regulations 1989. A total of 72 valves remain to be fitted or relocated.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what was the ratio of injuries, excluding fatal injuries, suffered by operators' staff to those suffered by contractors' staff on North sea installations in each year since 1978;

(2) what was the ratio of fatal accidents suffered by operators' staff to those suffered by contractors' staff on North sea installations in each year since 1978.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested by the hon. Member can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on how many risers on platforms in the North sea it is intended to retrofit subsea isolation valves; and how many of these have been fitted to date.

Mr. Wakeham: A total of 35 subsea isolation systems have been fitted retrospectively to existing pipelines and plans have been made for a further six systems to be so installed.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for En if he will list the platforms in the North sea which control systems of the same age as that on Piper Al

Mr. Wakeham: Control systems on offshore inst tions may be modified as technology develops. modifications are a matter for the operators and certifying authorities.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAI

Katyn Massacres

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for For and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statemer his Department's policy on ascribing responsibility fo Katyn massacres; and to whom he currently asc responsibility for the massacres.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Soviet authorities' admis in April that the NKVD (forerunner of the KGB) responsible for the massacre was very welcome.

Antarctica

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of Stat Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will see persuade the signatories to the Antarctic treaty to inst controls on the quantities of krill removed from Anta waters.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Fishing in Antarctic wate controlled by the convention on the conservatio Antarctic marine living resources (CCAMLR). Since CCAMLR has applied catch restrictions on certain stocks in Antarctica, and has closed some areas to pr depleted stocks. CCAMLR has been successfu achieving protection of the most threatened species an shall continue to work towards reaching an agreeme limit krill catches in Antarctic waters.

Dalai Lama

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of Stat Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will mee Dalai Lama when he comes to visit the United King in March.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secr of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs ha plans to do so.

Sudan

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of Stat Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what correspond he has received from Amnesty International conce (a) detention without trial, (b) incidences of torture (c) extra-judicial executions in Sudan; and if he will a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are aware of Am International concerns about the abuse of human rig Sudan. We share those concerns and have made our known to the Sudanese authorities bilaterally, throug European Community and within the UN framewo

China

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department's library will obtain a copy of the Amnesty International report concerning the treatment of pro-democracy leaders by the Chinese authorities, published on 14 November.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A copy of this report is already held by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office library.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterparts in China concerning treatment of pro-democracy leaders by the Chinese authorities.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We regularly raise the question of human rights with the Chinese authorities. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs expressed our concern to the Chinese Foreign Minister in September, as did the EC Troika.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his present policy in respect of (a) mining activities and (b) tourism in Antarctica; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We remain committed to achieving the best possible environmental protection for Antarctica from all forms of environmental damage. We do not support mining in Antarctica and wish to see the question of mineral activity resolved as soon as possible, by a return to consensus among the Antarctic treaty parties.

We think tourism and environmental protection can be compatible, but there is a need for regulation to avoid adverse environmental impact. The Antarctic treaty parties agreed to discuss tourism within the development of comprehensive measures for the protection of the Antarctic environment. A conference on this issue is currently taking place in Chile.

European Political Union

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress was made during last month's European Council meeting in drawing up an agenda for the forthcoming EC intergovernmental conference on political union.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Dublin European Council in June agreed that the intergovernmental conference on political union should adopt its own agenda. The 27-28 October European Council in Rome discussed the preparations for that IGC. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made a statement on the outcome of that meeting to the House on 30 October.

Coventry (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the visit to Coventry on 10 November of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I attended a meeting of the Gulf support group in Coventry on 10 November for friends and relatives of those whom Saddam Hussein is preventing from leaving Kuwait and Iraq.

Following the meeting I attended evensong in Coventry cathedral at which prayers were said for the hostages and their families.

Mercenaries

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any proposals to implement the international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries adopted by the United Nations in December 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are examining carefully the convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries against the background of current United Kingdom legislation. We hope to reach a decision soon.

Nuclear Test Ban

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy in respect of negotiating the establishment of a comprehensive ban on all nuclear tests when they attend the conference in New York in January 1991.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A comprehensive test ban remains a long-term goal to which progress will be made by only a step-by-step approach. This must take account of technical advances in verification as well as progress elsewhere in arms control and the attitudes of other states.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Forces in Europe Treaty

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will publish a simplified, edited version of the treaty on conventional armed forces in Europe in booklet form.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A booklet describing the main provisions of the treaty on conventional armed forces in Europe is being placed in the Library of the House. Further copies will be made available to hon. Members on request.

Israel

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the Government of Israel concerning the effect of the intifada upon British public opinion concerning Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government of Israel are well aware of the effect of the intifada, and their handling of it, on British public opinion. We make frequent representations to them on the need for them to meet their obligations under international law in administrating the occupied territories.

Romania

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will reconsider his policy of aid to eastern European countries to include family planning assistance to Romania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our policy towards aid to Romania for humanitarian purposes is unaffected by our policy towards long-term economic aid. We believe humanitarian aid should be unrestricted and have ourselves provided some £6·5 million directly and through the European Community. Our bilateral aid has included a family planning programme implemented by Marie Stopes International.

Estonia

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he made to the visit of Mr. Lennart Meri, Foreign Secretary of Estonia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Mr. right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I held separate talks with Mr. Meri on 5 and 6 November. We emphasised that we had never recognised de jure the incorporation of the Baltic States into the USSR and that we continued to support the right of the Estonian people to decide their own future. As we told Mr. Meri, we believe that a negotiated outcome would be in the interests of both sides and hope that serious negotiations between Soviet and Baltic representatives will be resumed urgently. We agreed on the importance of developing and strengthening contacts between Britain and the Baltic states.

Lithuania

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he made to the visit of Mr. Landsbergis, President of Lithuania; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister had talks with Professor Landsbergis on 13 November. She emphasised that we had never recognised de jure the incorporation of the Baltic States into the USSR and that we continued to support the right of the Lithuanian people to decide their own future. She referred in her speech to the CSCE Paris summit to the particular position of the Baltic republics and to the need for a nogotiated settlement acceptable to both sides. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and Professor Landsbergis agreed on the importance of developing and strengthening contacts between Britain and the Baltic states.

Bulgaria

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to make an award for humanitarian aid to the people of Bulgaria.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are contributing to humanitarian aid for Bulgaria through the European Community's PHARE aid programme.

The European Community has recently approved a maternal and child health care support programme for Bulgaria worth approximately £3·5 million. We have encouraged the Commission to consider urgently Bulgarian requests for food assistance. These will be discussed during the meeting of the EC-Bulgaria joint commission on 30 November.

United States Nuclear Test Site (Arrests)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's ambassador in Washington made any representations on behalf of Juley Howard, Jane Gregory and Lorna Richardson, each a British citizen, arrested in the United States Department of Energy research and test facility in Nevada on 14 November.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No representations have been made: the case is a matter for the United States authorities.

ENVIRONMENT

Homelessness

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for action in relation to homeless single people in London, additional to that announced in his reply of 22 June, Official Report, column 738-40.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In his autumn statement on 8 November, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that, in addition to this year's provision of £15 million, a further £81 million would be provided over the next two years for single homeless people in London. The resources will meet the costs of additional short-term hostels for people currently on the streets and move-on accommodation for people in existing hostels.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what Government financial help is to be given this year to Crisis at Christmas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We give no direct financial help to Crisis at Christmas and it has made no application for any from my Department. However, several of the voluntary organisations assisting Crisis at Christmas with the "Open Christmas" project receive grant from my Department under section 73 of the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will amend the homelessness provisions to allow newly arrived single refugees to qualify for priority housing status on local authority waiting lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 23 November 1990]: No. It is for each local housing authority to decide its own priorities in the selection of its tenants, subject to the requirements of section 22 of the Housing Act 1985. It is also for authorities to decide whether single refugees applying as homeless under part III of that Act are vulnerable, and thus in priority need for accommodation.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make arrangements to ensure that housing authorities that experience higher than average numbers of housing requests from asylum seekers arriving in the United Kingdom are provided with additional financial resources to cope with any extra demand.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 23 November 1990]: Where a local housing authority in England experiences special needs which call for additional housing capital expenditure these needs will be taken into account by my Department in allocating housing investment programme (HIP) resources.

House Renovation Grants

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of the new house renovation grant scheme on (a) the number of applications for house renovation grants, (b) the number of grants awarded and (c) the size of the grants awarded.

Mr. Key: From a sample survey of activity in 40 local housing authorities under the new grants system it is estimated that up to the end of September in England as a whole.

(a) 5,810 grant applications have been submitted, sub-divided as follows:

	Grant applications
Mandatory renovation grants	480
Discretionary renovation grants	60
Mandatory disabled facilities grants	230
Discretionary disabled facilities grants
Houses in multiple occupation grant
Minor works assistance

(b) 4,450 grants have been awarded.

(c) The average size of minor works grant £620. The sample size is, as yet, too small to all estimates to be made of the average size of ren disabled facilities grants.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of St Environment (1) if he will list the relevant pop community charge purposes for each charging (a) calculated under the provisions of the Report (England) laid before the House on 11 Ja (b) calculated under the provisions of the draft Report (England) (No. 2) laid before the 31 October; if he will list the percentage differen the figures outlined in (a) and (b) above; if he w reasons for any percentage difference which ex cent.; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list for each local authorit relevant population for community charge pu each charging authority calculated under the pr the Population Report (England) laid before th 11 January, (b) the relevant population for charge purposes for each charging authority under the provisions of the draft Populati (England) (No. 2) laid before the House on 31 O (c) the percentage difference between the fig and (b) above; if he will give the reason percentage difference over 5 per cent.; and if h a statement.

Mr. Key: I am arranging for the informa placed in the Library of the House. The popula are based on information about the number of the community charges register for each au supplied and certified by the relevant commun registration officer except in the case of the City and Welwyn Hatfield district council, where provisions of the Population Report (En 1990-91 relevant population was based on i from the Registrar General and other sources. reflect differences in the figures supplied excep two authorities.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary the Environment if he will list in the Official total number of community standard charge 1990-91 for each local authority in England.

Mr. Key: The available information was pl Library on 24 October.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of St Environment what are the current poll tax pa in each local authority area in England, as figures; and if he will indicate the numbers wh only one poll tax instalment in each instance.

Mr. Key: I am arranging for the informati to the Department about the percentage of charge payers in each authority who had mad by 30 September, to be placed in the Library of the House. No information is available about the numbers of instalments paid.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East of 20 November, Official Report, column 62, when he expects to be in a position to give the same information as to the rate of collection of the poll tax for Birmingham.

Mr. Key: I understand that the council hopes to be able to provide the information shortly.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 20 November to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, Official Report, column 62. if he will now list for each local authority in England and Wales the available information as to the numbers of people who (a) have or (b) have not begun paying the poll tax and the percentage of the number of adults liable that represents.

Mr. Key: I am arranging for the information for England to be placed in the Library of the House. Figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East of 20 November, Official Report, column 62, if he will now make it his practice to collect from local authorities information as to the numbers of people seriously in arrears with the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: I have no plans to collect this information.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the budget for the Nature Conservancy Council for 1989-90 and the proposed budget for 1990-91;

(2) how much of the Nature Conservancy Council's budget for 1989-90, both in absolute and percentage terms, was spent in Scotland; and if he will give the same amounts for the proposed budget for 1990-91.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The grant-in-aid provided to the Nature Conservancy Council (NCC) in 1989-90 and 1990-91 was £40·15 million and £44·819 million (including £750,000 to cover initial reorganisation costs) respectively.

In 1989-90 £5·161 million—12·8 per cent.—of the grant-in-aid was spent by the NCC's Scottish Directorate. The proposed spend by the Scottish Directorate in 1990-91 is £4·999 million, 11·1 per cent. of total grant-in-aid. These figures do not include either the salaries of any permanent staff working on Scottish matters or funds spent by NCC Directorates which serve Great Britain as a whole, as these cannot be identified easily.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the amount of grant made by the Nature Conservancy Council under section 38 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 to voluntary conservation bodies for the purposes of land purchase in each of the last five years in 1989-90 prices.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 November 1990]: The figures requested are as follows:

1985-86	0·69
1986-87	1·297
1987-88	1·289
1988-89	1·180
1989-90	0·586

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was spent by the Nature Conservancy Council for the purchase of national nature reserves in each of the last five years in 1989-90 prices.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 November 1990]: The figures requested are as follows:

	£ million
1985-86	2·564
1986-87	1·756
1987-88	1·353
1988-89	1·102
1989-90	0·182

Birds (Protected Species)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of permits issued to falconers to take protected species of birds as quarry during 1989 and 1990 to date; what were the species in respect of which such permits were issued; and what were the number of each species so taken.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In the 1989-90 season, 66 licences were issued to falconers in England, Scotland and Wales to take the following species: blackbird, skylark, black-headed gull, song thrush, mistle thrush, redwing, fieldfare and meadow pipit. The number of birds reported as taken are: blackbird 59, skylark 278, black-headed gull 1, song thrush 2, redwing 8 and fieldfare 10.

To date, 60 licences have been issued in the 1990-91 season to take the following species: blackbird, skylark, black-headed gull, song thrush and meadow pipit; the numbers of birds taken are not yet available.

National Gypsy Council

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library audited accounts of the National Gypsy Council for the years 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Key: No. My Department receives copies of the National Gypsy Council's audited accounts, for monitoring purposes, as a condition of the grant which we pay to the council; but it is not for us to make those accounts public.

Oxleas Wood, London

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what communications he has recently received from the European Environment Commissioner concerning the future of Oxleas wood in south-east London.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Mountain Hare

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures are currently being proposed by the European Community for the protection of the species and habitat of lepus timidus; how he has responded to such measures; and whether he proposes any relevant changes to United Kingdon legislation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The lepus timidus is one of the species listed on annex III of the European Commission's proposal for a directive on the protection of natural and semi-natural habitats and of fauna and flora. Under the draft directive, any exploitation of lepus timidus would therefore be subject to a management plan. Negotiations on the directive in Brussels are currently stalled, but when they resume we expect to press the Commission to clarify what is expected of member states under this provision. It is therefore premature to consider whether changes to United Kingdom legislation would be appropriate.

Birds of Prey

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the number of licences issued in each of England, Scotland and Wales to possess birds of prey; and what were the numbers of birds of each species currently held under such licence.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Since the beginning of 1989, the Department has issued 11 licences to possess birds of prey which were either found abandoned or which had been seized by enforcement authorities after being taken illegally from the wild.

Only one bird, a golden eagle, is currently held under such a licence.

Bracken

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on current research into biological methods of controlling bracken.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department is aware of research by Professor Lawton of Imperial college at Silwood Park with a non-indigenous moth, Conservula cinsigna, which has a bracken-feeding caterpillar. Professor Lawton has applied for a licence under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, to release the moth in outdoor cages on the college premises. The application is under consideration.

Fire Regulations

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons the Fire Brigades Union, the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association, and the National Association of Fire Officers were not included in the list of bodies to whom the consultation letter was sent by his Department in respect of the Fire and Building Regulations proposed procedural guidance document of 17 October; what alternative arrangements were made to consult these bodies; and if any response has yet been received from them.

Mr. Key: All the member bodies of the joint fire prevention committee of the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council, which includes those bodies referred to by the hon. Member, were sent a copy of Building Regulations proposed procedu document by the Home Office. I understand no response has been received from any of

Nature Conservancy Agencies

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of Environment (1) when he expects to ma decision on the resources available to the conservancy agencies;

(2) what resources he estimates will be re new agencies of the Nature Conservancy commence operations; and what resources available to fill these posts.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Secretary of State for the Environment ann November that grant-in-aid for the Conservancy Council for England (NCCE) has been set provisionally at £32·411 milli allow the NCCE not only to undertake the conservation activities inherited from Conservancy Council but also to add to them them significantly.

Announcements about the grant-in-aid t to the new Councils in Scotland and Wales a my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State and for Wales respectively.

The staffing resources needed by the three in 1991-92 were described by the noble Lad statement made during Report stage of the E Protection Act in another place on 17 Oct columns 895-97. It is primarily the respon new councils to ensure that sufficient staff are they assume their full functions and duties.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of Environment if he will set out the terms of re Joint Committee on Nature Conservation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The statutory fu three new country agencies which are to through the joint nature conservation com out in section 133 of the Environmental P 1990. It is for the JNCC in the first instance detailed programme within the provisions o

Bailiffs

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of Environment (1) what plans he has to Community Charges (Administration and Regulations 1989 to bring the controls on ba the community charge into line with thos distress for rent; and if he will make a stat

(2) if he will monitor items recovered pursuit of debts owed to local authorities items subject to hire purchase or credit sal are not included in such actions; and if h statement;

(3) what plans he has to ensure that befo action to recover debts owed to local au mentally or physically disabled people, or f hospital or with a language difficulty, they the local authority concerned;

(4) what plans he has to introduce a co governing the manner in which local a bailiffs; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what steps he takes to ensure that bailiffs used by local authorities make reasonable efforts to contact debtors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: My Department has no plans to change existing regulations on the employment of bailiffs by local authorities. We have issued a practice note to all charging authorities advising them to check the reputation, qualifications and expertise of private firms and to issue guidelines to them on procedures. I understand that the Institute of Revenues, Rating and Valuation (IRRV) will shortly be incorporating this advice in a revised practice note which contains additional guidance on property and rights of entry. The Institute of Revenues, Rating and Valuation is also preparing a code of practice for discussion amongst local authority associations and the Certified Bailiffs Association which I welcome.

Spent Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the report which he received several months ago concerning the management and disposal of radioactive spent nuclear fuel.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Two reports have been produced over the last three years concerning the management and disposal of spent nuclear fuel. These are DOE RW87/125 entitled "Magnox fuel dry storage and direct disposal", and DOE RW89/089 entitled "Packaging, storage and direct disposal of spent AGR fuel". Both reports are available from the National Lending Library.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received the official advice that spent fuel from nuclear reactors would be better put into long-term dry storage then sent for reprocessing; and what account he took of the advice.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have received no such advice.

National Insurance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the net additional cost to local authorities of the changes to employers' national insurance contributions and reimbursement announced in the autumn statement.

Mr. Portillo: We do not collect the data which would enable us to predict with any accuracy the extent to which the changes in the level of statutory sick pay reimbursement and reductions in employers' national insurance contributions will cancel each other out for individual authorities. However, the reduction in reimbursements of statutory sick pay represents less than 0·1 per cent. of the total of employers' labour costs.

Housing Action Trusts

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any current proposals for housing action trusts still under discussion.

Mr. Key: Discussions are proceeding with the Council and tenants in the London borough of Waltham Forest and Hull city council are consulting tenants about the council's proposal for a housing action trust for the North Hull estate.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money in total his Department has spent on promoting housing action trusts.

Mr. Key: No expenditure has been incurred on promoting housing action trusts. In pursuance of the statutory duty under the Housing Act 1988 to hold a ballot of tenants and the need to ensure that the tenants are fully informed of the proposals expenditure of £93,000 has been incurred relating to information material and to ballots.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any proposals for housing action trusts which have been the subject of a ballot of tenants and the results.

Mr. Key: The Electoral Reform Society ran ballots on behalf of the Secretary of State in Sunderland and Southwark.

The results were as follows:

	In favour of the HAT	Opposed to the HAT
Sunderland	862	3,506
Southwark	496	1,164

Wild Birds

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all those sites in England which have been either designated or proposed for designation as (a) special protection areas under the EC directive on the conservation of wild birds or (b) Ramsar sites under the convention of wetlands of international importance.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 November 1990]: The following table lists all those sites in England which have to date been formally proposed to Government as either special protection areas or Ramsar sites (or both), indicating where appropriate the date of designation.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will assess the likely impact on 1991 levels of poll tax in London boroughs due to the inability of the London residuary body to make available the promised £155·5 million arising from the sale of county hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key [holding answer 23 November 1990]: The effect on the community charge will depend on decisions taken by London boroughs in the light of the failure of the County Hall Development Group to complete the purchase of county hall. In setting their budgets it is for boroughs to decide what account, if any, they should take of capital receipts not yet to hand.

Crookston Station

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made to date on the consideration by his Department's inquiry reporter of the appeal against planning refusal for the demolition of the listed building known as Crookston Station.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been asked to reply.

The papers in connection with this appeal are presently with the Scottish Office inquiry reporters unit and in common with most planning appeals it is proposed that this case be determined by a reporter acting under delegated powers. This appeal is due to be heard at public local inquiry along with an associated planning appeal in respect of proposed residential development on the site of the old station.

As Glasgow has many appeal cases, it is not possible to fix an inquiry date before February.

It is expected that a suitable date can be arranged towards the end of February 1990.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Libel

Mr. Snape: To ask the Attorney-General when the recommendation in the Faulks committee report 1977 that the defence of innocent dissemination should be available to printers in libel cases will be implemented.

The Attorney-General: In a consultation paper published in July 1990 the Lord Chancellor invited views on whether the defence of innocent dissemination should be made available to printers. The consultation period has recently ended, and he is now considering the responses he has received.

Law Centres

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration he has given to providing national funding for law centres.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor has asked the Legal Aid Board to consider the position of law centres in the context of improving access to legal services generally.

Bailiffs

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Attorney-General if he will set upper limits on the expenses which bailiffs may claim against debtors; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell on 21 November 1990 at column 125. There are at present no plans to increase the fees, charges and expenses which may be recovered under the Distress for Rent Rules 1988.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if he will establish a unit to receive complaints against private bailiffs and advertise its address and telephone number to the public;

(2) what steps he takes to consult consumers' organisations and advice agencies before agreeing to changes in the charges imposed by bailiffs; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 21 November 1990 at column 125.

Belmarsh Prison (Court Complex)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Attorney-General when he now expects the court complex associated with Her Majesty's prison Belmarsh to be in operation.

The Attorney-General: The contractor's programme, together with a period for fitting out the building, provides that the Crown court at Woolwich will be in operation in October 1992.

TRANSPORT

Public Transport, London

2. Mr. Ground: To ask Secretary of State for Transport what measures are planned to improve public transport in London.

Mr. Parkinson: We have set the public transport operators two challenges. To improve every aspect of their existing services; and to achieve historic increases in capacity. To these ends we have set tough quality of service objectives; massively increased the resources available for investment; and approved the building of major new lines. And we have announced legislation designed to create the clear roads needed to run attractive bus services.

New Motorways

12. Mr. Knox: To ask Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on new motorway construction in each of the past four years at constant prices.

Mr. Chope: Capital expenditure on motorways, at 1990-91 prices, was £466 million in 1986-87, £398 million in 1987-88, £459 million in 1988-89 and £576 million in 1989-90.

Road Safety

13. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures are being taken to educate children in road safety.

Mr. McLoughlin: We believe all schools should teach road safety as an integral part of the national curriculum. We have a wide range of teaching material and are developing guidelines to help local authorities organise road safety education in schools.

Official Visits

14. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will pay an official visit to Southend-on-Sea by train.

Mr. Freeman: I have written to my hon. Friend that I should be happy to do so.

Transport Expenditure

15. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much expenditure on transport will increase over the next three years.

Mr. Parkinson: In the areas where I have responsibility investment on transport will increase from some £9½ billion in the three years to April 1991 to nearly £16 billion in the three years to April 1994.

Bus Services

16. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding bus services in rural areas and off-peak hours.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have received very few representations about bus services in rural areas and in off-peak hours. Bus mileage overall has increased by 19 per cent. and local authorities are able to subsidise those socially necessary services which are not provided by operators on a commercial basis.

Rail Freight

17. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with British Rail on rail freight infrastructure.

Mr. Freeman: We are continuing to encourage British Rail to build on the strengths of rail freight, which are primarily in bulk trainload traffic. Where there are sound commercial prospects, we are backing the necessary investment. In the autumn statement we have endorsed over £600 million of investment in rail freight over the next three years.

Light Rapid Transit (Nottingham)

18. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assistance his Department has given to the proposal for a light rapid transit system in Nottingham.

Mr. McLoughlin: Officials in the Department of Transport have had a number of discussions with the promoters of this project on how best to work up their proposals.

Bedford Bypass

19. Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his current plans for bypassing Bedford; and if he will make a statement on the timetable.

Mr. Chope: My Department has two schemes for bypassing Bedford—Bedford southern bypass and Bedford western bypass.

Tenders for the construction of Bedford southern bypass are programmed to be invited in 1992. The scheme is due to be completed in 1995, following a two-year construction period. The programme for a Bedford western bypass depends largely on the outcome of our consideration of the results of Bedfordshire county and North Bedfordshire borough council's public consultation exercise on an outer western option, together with analysis of recent traffic survey data. We expect to announce the results of that consideration early next year.

Transport Investment

20. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what he estimates will be the total level of transport investment in the United Kingdom, in real terms, over the next three years; and what were the comparable figures for the last three years.

Mr. Parkinson: In the areas where I have responsibility, approximately 14 billion pounds at 1990-91 prices is planned in the next three years compared with some 10 billion pounds in the last three years.

Humber Bridge

21. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest estimate he has as to the current level of debt being carried by the Humber bridge board.

Mr. Chope: The debt on the Humber bridge at 31 March 1990 was about £373 million.

British Rail (West Midlands)

22. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the public subsidy to the British Rail provincial network in the west midlands sector in 1979 and 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: The public service obligation grant payable to British Rail is a block grant, and cannot be attributed to any individual area of service. Services in the area covered by the west midlands passenger transport authority are subsidised by them under section 20 of the Transport Act 1968. In 1989-90 this subsidy totalled more than £12 million.

Bus Routes, London

23. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the chair of the London Buses board to discuss bus routes in London.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend and I have regular meetings with the chairmen of London Transport and London Buses Limited. Both the Government and London Transport believe that buses have a major contribution to make to meeting London's public transport needs, and we frequently discuss ways of furthering this goal.

Road Casualties

24. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to meet his road casualty reduction target of a reduction in road casualties by one third by the year 2000.

Mr. Chope: I set out in the road safety debate on 16 November the wide range of measures which we have in hand for reducing road accident casualties.

British Rail (Investment)

25. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much British Rail will invest over the next three years; and what were the comparable figures for the previous three years.

Mr. Freeman: We have given British Rail an investment ceiling of £4 billion cash over the next three years. This represents £3·65 billion at 1990-91 prices, a 58 per cent. real increase on the comparable figure, £2·3 billion, for the previous three years.

London Transport (Investment)

26. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much London Transport will invest over the next three years.

Mr. Freeman: Approaching £3 billion. That is equivalent to well over £400 per head for every man, woman and child in the greater London area.

Channel Tunnel

27. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has of the average speed of (a) passenger and freight trains running between Glasgow and the continent once the channel tunnel is open and (b) TGV trains between Lille, Lyon and Paris running to Britain.

Mr. Freeman: The average speed for the proposed Glasgow to Paris night sleeper will be about 65 mph. Convenient departure and arrival times will matter more than speed. The average speed of passenger trains between Lille and London will be 90 mph, between Paris and London 100 mph, and on the daytime through service between Paris and Edinburgh will be 85 mph. SNCF do not propose to run direct services from Lyon to London. International freight trains will be able to travel both in the United Kingdom and in France at a maximum speed of 75 mph.

Regional Airports

28. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his policy towards greater use of regional airports.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government encourage the maximum use of regional airports, both to meet local demand and to relieve pressure on the London airports.

Over the past decade some £450 million of capital expenditure has been facilitated through special borrowing approvals for the development of local authority airports. Special borrowing approvals totalling £59 million are available for 1990-91, facilitating investment which the airports concerned estimate could total some £149 million this year. For 1991-92 £87 million worth of special borrowing approvals will be available, facilitating investment which the airports concerned estimate could total some £179 million in that year.

We also very much welcome the contribution to the development of local authority airports which the private sector already makes through direct investment and joint venture schemes; and we continue to look to the airports concerned and their local authority owners to take full account of the opportunities for private sector involvement as they formulate their plans for further expansion.

The working group now being established to take forward the Civil Aviation Authority's recent advice on long term United Kingdom airport capacity is to examine regional airports, role in meeting overall growth in demand into the next century.

We are continuing to pursue liberalisation policies, both in the European Community and in bilateral negotiations, which increase further the scope for services from our regional airports.

Black Country Spine Road

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has yet concluded his financial review of the black country spine road between West Bromwich and Wednesbury; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The review is making good progress but is not yet complete. A decision will be announced as soon as possible.

Road Casualties

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in tabular form the number of road deaths for each year from 1970 to 1989, inclusive, showing (a) total figures and (b) by category of (i) car drivers, (ii) car passengers, (iii) lorry drivers, (iv) lorry passengers, (v) motor cyclists, (vi) motor cycle passengers, (vii) other occupants of motor vehicles, (viii) cyclists, (ix) pedestrians, (x) bus drivers and (xi) bus passengers.

Mr. Chope: I have placed a copy of the information requested in the Library.

RAF Bentwaters

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will indicate the cost of road realignments and improvements which affect access to RAF Bentwaters in Suffolk.

Mr. Chope: Improvements planned in the vicinity of the base are on the A1152 road for which Suffolk county council is the local highway authority.

My Department will ask the council to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Dock Workers

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many dockers are employed in handling coal produced in Britain.

Mr. McLoughlin: No information is collected centrally about the number of dock workers handling specific commodities. In 1989, there were five ports at which British coal accounted for over 40 per cent. by weight of goods loaded in the port: Tyne, Blyth, Ayr, Garston and Workington. These ports accounted for 84 per cent. of the coal shipped from all British ports. The latest available survey of port manpower, carried out in March 1989, showed that 308 dock workers were employed in these ports.

Public Service Vehicles

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to publicise clause 4 of the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990.

Mr. Freeman: Regulation 4 was fully publicised in the Press Notice issued on 11 May 1990 when the regulations were laid before Parliament. Publicity was also given in the trade press. I have no plans for further publicity.

Fishing Boat Antares

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an urgent statement on the incident involving the fishing boat Antares and a royal naval submarine off the coast of Arran in the early morning of 22 November; if he will institute an inquiry into the incident; and what action he is now taking to ensure there are no further similar incidents.

Mr. McLoughlin: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces made a statement to the House on 23 November about this incident. An inspector from the marine accident investigation branch commenced an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the loss of the fishing vessel Antares on the same day. A separate inquiry is being carried out by the Royal Navy. The results of these inquiries will be given urgent consideration to see what lessons can be learnt.

Airports, South-East

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further steps have been taken towards identifying possible locations for additional runway capacity to serve the south-east, following the publication by the Civil Aviation Authority in CAP 570 of advice on the adequacy of airport capacity in the longer term.

Mr. Parkinson: I announced in July my intention to establish a working group to examine the wider implications of development at airports identified by the Civil Aviation Authority in CAP 570 as likely to be able in air traffic control terms to accommodate additional air traffic. Work has since been going forward on the group's terms of reference, structure and membership.

I have concluded that the terms of reference for the group should be:

"To evaluate the wider implications of developing additional runway capacity at the sites identified by the Civil Aviation Authority in Cap 570 as likely to be feasible for such development in air traffic control and airspace terms;

"To have regard to the considerations, including the environmental considerations, which led the Government in 1985 to the view that second runways should not be built at either Gatwick or Stansted; and to the relevance of those considerations at Heathrow and at other airports;

"To test the Authority's conclusions in CAP 570 on the contribution of regional airports, and to gauge the extent to which these airports can play a part in meeting the overall demand into the next century;

"And in the light of these considerations to advise the Secretary of State on the possible courses".

I intend that the group should be chaired by a senior official from my department, and that it should be assisted by four subgroups addressing, for each of the locations identified in CAP 570, the implications for regional development and the environment; for aircraft noise; for surface access; and capital costs, lead times and other practical and technical considerations. The first of these subgroups will be chaired by the Department of the Environment, the second and third by my own department and the last by the CAA.

Invitations to join the working group or one of its subgroups have today been sent to a variety of organisations. We have asked SERPLAN to co-ordinate the local authority input, and have also sought the involvement of the Kent Economic Development Board. To represent the interests of airports we have issued invitations to the Airport Operators Association, BAA plc and the Joint Airports Committee of Local Authorities. We have in particular asked JACOLA to take the lead in assessing the contribution of regional airports. The International Air Transport Association, the International Air Carrier Association and the British Air Transport Association have been invited to represent airlines.

We have asked the Association of British Travel Agents, the British Tourist Authority and the Air Transport Users Committee to represent, respectively, the interests of the travel and tourism industries and of consumers of air services (passenger and cargo).

To ensure a thorough examination of the important environmental implications of airport development we have extended invitations to a number of bodies and organisations. These are the Federation of Heathrow Anti-Noise Groups; the Gatwick Area Conservation Campaign, the North West Essex and East Herts Preservation Association; and the Airfield Environment Federation. We have also invited the participation of the chairmen of the consultative committees at each of the airports in question.

The local management of the different airports have been asked to contribute to the work of the airport technical subgroup, and British Rail and London Regional Transport have been invited to join the subgroup which will consider surface access. Finally, the working group will involve officials from the CAA and from the trade and industry, employment, defence and agriculture departments, as well as from my own department and the Department of the Environment.

I am confident that the expertise of those we have invited will enable the group to engage fully with the many issues it will address. Inevitably, it has not been possible to offer places to all of those wishing to participate. I hope that many of those not included will be able to put views forward through the various representative organisations on the group. I also intend to initiate shortly a wider, written consultation, to ensure the group has access to the views of others with an interest in the issues. The results of this consultation will be an important contribution to the group's work.

Once we have heard from those invited to join the group arrangements can go forward for the first of the meetings. I expect this to take place early next year.

London Underground (Crime)

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State f Transport if he will provide the figures for the number violent crimes committed on the London underground f the years 1989 and 1990; and if he will list the initiativ that have been taken by London Underground to redu the incidence of violent crime.

Mr. Freeman: I understand from the British Transpo Police that in 1989 there were 1,755 crimes of violence the London underground. During that time some 7 million passenger journeys were made. In the 10 months 31 October 1990, the number of crimes of violence w 1,137. This represents a 22 per cent. reduction compar with the same period for 1989 and continues t downward trend for such crimes. Crimes of violence ha been defined as robbery and assaults on passengers, st and police.

A programme of passenger security measures has be introduced at thirteen pilot scheme stations on t Northern line, Central line and at Oxford Circus to asse the effectiveness of various anti-crime measures at differe types of station. These involve:

—trained staff with personal radios
—help-point booths
—passenger help-point alarm panels
—closed circuit television and video monitoring
—supervised safe waiting areas
—mirrors and improved lighting

Similiar measures will be implemented in 1991 stations between Hammersmith and Paddington on t Hammersmith and City line. London Underground is al planning to extend these measures to other statio throughout the network. In addition a new communic tion network is being provided at 123 stations which w enable the police to use radios underground. T complement of the British Transport Police's (BT London Underground division has been increased to 4 and area police stations established. These enhancemer enable the BTP to mount increased numbers of patr which, together with the new culture of co-operati between staff and the BTP, will improve the effectiven of community policing on the Underground.

London Underground (Grant)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State f Transport what is the total Government grant to Lond Underground in the current financial year; how much will be in 1991-92; and how much of this grant has been aside for the repair of escalators.

Mr. Freeman: Total grant to London Transport, 1990-91 will be £474 million. In 1991-92 it will be £6 million. It is for London Transport to decide how t grant should be distributed to its subsidiaries, and it is London Underground to decide how much to spend on repair of escalators. The Government do not earma specific amounts of grant for specific purposes. understand that in 1990-91 London Underground v spend approximately £11 million on the repair escalators.

Winchester Bypass

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transp what are the fatality figures, including major injuries, o the last 10 years on the Winchester bypass.

Mr. Chope: The number of recorded accidents, in the stated categories, on the A33 Winchester bypass from its junction with the A27 (M3) to A31 Compton in each of the last six years were:

Year	Fatal injuries	Serious injuries
1984	2	8
1985	3	8
1986	0	12
1987	1	5
1989	1	3

Figures for years before 1984 are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

M3

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current approximate date for the completion of the entire M3 motorway; and if he will take steps to prevent any further delays.

Mr. Chope: The section of M3 at present under construction between Compton and Bassett is expected to be completed in autumn next year. Subject to completion of the remaining statutory procedures we will start work on the final section at Winchester as soon as possible which unfortunately cannot now be until 1992.

Road Journey Times

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average time taken on a daytime car journey between central London and central Birmingham; what was the corresponding time in 1975, 1980 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My Department does not have estimates of these journey-times, for 1990 or for the earlier years mentioned.

Roadside Crash Cushions

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on the use of roadside crash cushions and the development of an appropriate performance specification for roadside crash cushions.

Mr. Chope: The policy for crash cushions, as for any road safety equipment, is to provide such equipment where it can be shown to be cost-effective to do so, to a performance specification consistent with our international obligations and agreements.

Air Traffic Controllers

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if any action has been taken following the report of the committee looking into the control of fatigue amongst air traffic controllers.

Mr. McLoughlin: The statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of United Kingdom civil aviation rests with the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA). I am advised by the CAA that all air traffic control units within the United Kingdom have been informed that a scheme to regulate controllers' hours based on the CRATCOH report, will be implemented on 1 October 1991. A letter of intent to implement such regulations was despatched by the CAA in September 1990. One year has been allowed in order that ATC may bring their staff levels up to the strength recommended in the report.

British Rail Hotels

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if British Rail has any plans to sell its remaining hotel interests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail still owns the freeholds of 11 hotels. Nine, all at stations, are leased to the private sector on 125-year leases. British Rail considers it essential to retain the freeholds in case it becomes necessary to carry out work on the stations. The other two hotels are the Great Northern at King's Cross and the Great Eastern at Liverpool Street both in London. Management of both these hotels is contracted to the private sector. British Rail's plans for the passenger concourse at King's Cross would require the demolition of the Great Northern hotel. British Rail does not consider it opportune to dispose of the Great Eastern hotel at present, but will be looking carefully at the possibility of doing so as development work is completed at Liverpool Street station and on the Broadgate site.

Kuwaiti Aircraft

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has made the necessary arrangements to seize any of the Kuwaiti transport aircraft which have been taken from Kuwait by the Iraqi Government if they enter United Kingdom air space or territory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Arrangements have been made for any such aircraft found at an airport in this country to be detained and returned to its owners.

British Airways Aircraft, Kuwait

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has made to the International Civil Aviation Organisation about the hijacking of the British Airways 747 aircraft and its passengers and crew by the Iraqi Government at Kuwait airport on 2 August.

Mr. McLoughlin: The British delegation to the International Civil Aviation Organisation raised this matter at the October ICAO Assembly. The delegation called on the Iraqis to release the passengers and crew of the British Airways flight. In a resolution adopted condemning the plunder of Kuwait international airport the delegation secured the inclusion of wording calling upon Iraq to facilitate the early recovery by their owners of foreign-registered aircraft stranded at the airport.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many civil servants are currently employed (a) full time and (b) part time by his Department on civil defence; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties were in 1989-90; what the total costs of employing staff on civil defence duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and whether he has any plans for these staff to be transferred to work on other duties.

Mr. Leigh: The information requested is as follows:

Number of staff employed full-time 16 November 1990	Number of staff employed part-time 16 November 1990	Total estimated cost 1989-90	Total estimated cost 1990-91

The lower estimated costs for 1990-91 result from reductions both planned and already made in the staffing provision for civil defence work. The staff concerned have been or will be transferred to other work. Further consideration will be given to staffing and expenditure on this work when my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has completed the review, which he announced on 16 October, of the options for civil defence arrangements in the light of east-west relations.

Recycling

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what incentives he will bring forward to persuade industry to use recyclable materials.

Mr. Leigh: My Department fully recognises the importance of providing outlets for recycled materials, and that industry should use materials which are themselves recyclable, in order to ensure the achievement of the Government's recycling targets. We have taken, and are continuing to take, a wide range of initiatives to this end. These include conferences and literature to encourage businesses to design products with recycling in mind; assisting the development of new industry standards to encourage the use of recyclable and recycled products; and, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 27 September, the introduction of new schemes of support for businesses in the environmental area which embrace recycling technology. In addition, we are commissioning research activity to identify the scope for greater use and application of recyclable materials, and we are in active discussion with many industrial sectors to identify ways to stimulate recycling.

Audit Procedures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward legislation to require firms auditing a public limited company to file information with regulatory bodies.

Mr. Redwood: We have no such plans. However, I expect that all applications for recognition from supervisory bodies for auditors under the Companies Act 1989 will include requirements as to the filing of information with them by audit firms.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department makes any financial contribution towards the running of the Auditing Practices Committee.

Mr. Redwood: No.

ECGD

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade Industry if he will take steps to ensure that Export Cre Guarantee Department's claims outstanding from s and medium sized firms as a result of the Gulf crisis dealt with as fast as possible.

Mr. Sainsbury: ECGD is examining claims as fas possible within the terms of its guarantees with objective of making payments in respect of valid claim exporters at the end of the appropriate claims wai period.

Children's Clothing (Safety)

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade Industry what safety regulations apply to childr nightdresses and pyjamas; and what recent cases t have been whereby injury has been caused to children to the lack of flame retardants in these articles of cloth

Mr. Leigh: Under the Nightwear (Safety) Regulat 1985 (as amended in 1987) children's nightdresses r pass a test for low flammability. Pyjamas do not hav comply with the flammability standard, but they r carry a permanent label showing whether or not they r that standard. Garments can achieve low flammab through use of fabrics which are inherently fire resistar by adding a fire retardant treatment to the fabric.

My Department's home accident surveillance sys (HASS) monitors accidents receiving attention at accident and emergency departments of 22 hospital England and Wales. HASS statistics for 1988 (the l year for which data is complete) record two acciden which children required hospital treatment for l injuries after their nightwear caught fire. In one case child was wearing pyjamas and in the other a nightc was being worn. There is no record in these partic cases whether or not the garments were flame retar

Motor Vehicle Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State Trade and Industry if he will give an estimate of number of people employed in the United Kingdom m vehicle manufacturing industry in each year since 1 and if he will make a statement concerning Governm policy towards that industry.

Mr. Leigh: The number of people employed in United Kingdom motor vehicle manufacturing indust shown in the table.

Government policy for the motor industry, as industry as a whole, is to set the framework for free fair competition and the encouragement of enterpris

Numbers employed in the United Kingdom motor vehicle manufacturing industry 1979-90

Year	Employees (Thousands)
June
1979	466·3
1980	437·1
1981	365·7
1982	318·0
1983	299·0
1984	280·8
1985	274·0
1986	265·8

Year	Employees (Thousands)
1987	260·0
1988	269·1
1989	270·8

Note:

The employment figures are those under the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) heading 35, "Motor vehicles and their parts". Thus the figures include employees in the large automotive components sector. However, the actual employment figure will be higher when taking into account the manufacture of components not separately identifiable as specific to the motor industry.

Steel Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give an estimate of the number of people employed in the United Kingdom steel industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement concerning Government policy towards that industry.

Mr. Leigh: The Department of Employment estimate the number of people employed in the United Kingdom steel industry in each year since 1979 as:

Year	Employees (Thousands)
June
1979	422·1
1980	383·6
1981	314·0
1982	284·9
1983	284·4
1984	240·2
1985	231·6
1986	215·1
1987	206·3
1988	209·5
1990	216·0

The figures above are the sum of the Department of Employment's estimates for the following industries, classified according to the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification: iron and steel industry (group 221); ferrous metal foundries (activity heading 3111); forging, pressing and stamping (group 312); and industrial plant and steelwork (group 320). There are, in addition, various industries associated with the manufacture and processing of steel for which separate estimates for the dates specified are not available.

Government policy towards the steel industry, as for industry as a whole, is to set a framework for free and fair competition and the encouragement of enterprise.

Industry Council

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the matters expected to be discussed at the next meeting of the European Community Industry Council on 26 November.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 21 November 1990]: The Industry Council on 26 November, which Lord Hesketh will attend on behalf of the United Kingdom, is expected to discuss a Commission communication to the Council on industrial policy, a draft directive on aid for the Community shipbuilding industry, and a Commission proposal to extend the patent term for pharmaceuticals.

The Commission are also expected to make statements on the industrial impact of the Uruguay round, on the European semi-conductor industry, on the arts and crafts industry, on small and medium sized enterprises and on the future of the ECSC treaty.

Company Accounts (Environmental Information)

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies his Department has commissioned, or intends to commission, on what proportion of companies in the United Kingdom carry out an environmental audit or publish environmental information in their annual accounts; and if he intends to publish the results of any studies.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 22 November 1990]: The Government encourage companies to use the management technique of environmental audit as part of comprehensive action to assess and improve their environmental performance. The Government also welcome the growth in the number of companies voluntarily publishing more information about their environmental performance. I am aware of a number of reports by commercial and other organisations which include information about environmental auditing and reporting by business. However, my Department has not commissioned—nor are there any plans to commission—a systematic study of the number of companies in the United Kingdom which are using environmental audits or publishing environmental information, for example in their annual report and accounts.

Department Inspectors (Unpublished Reports)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any unpublished reports of his Department's inspectors criticise any of the auditors, solicitors, bankers, brokers underwriters or other advisers involved in the matters on which the reports have been produced.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 22 November 1990]: I cannot disclose details of unpublished reports.

WALES

"How Green was my Valley"

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department's library will obtain a copy of "How Green was my Valley", published by the Council for the Protection of Rural Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Department's library already holds a copy of this report.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the current poll tax payment rates in each local authority area in Wales, as percentage figures; and if he will indicate the numbers that have only paid one poll tax instalment in each instance.

Mr. Grist: Information relating to numbers of community charge payers making payments is not available centrally.

Green Belts and National Parks

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has any plans to designate green belt areas in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Green belts are established through development plans. As responsibility for preparing such plans rests with local planning authorities so too does the initiation of Green Belts. My right hon. Friend has recently invited the Assembly of Welsh Counties, in collaboration with other bodies, to assess the potential role which green belts might play in the proper planning of Wales and to report to him. To launch this exercise my right hon. Friend is convening a conference to be held in January 1991.

Higher Education

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of students at each public sector higher education college in Wales during 1989-90; and how many of these students were normally resident in Wales, in total numbers and as a percentage of the main student body.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information for the academic year 1989-90 is shown in the following table:

	Students on higher education courses in Wales	Resident Welsh students[1] on higher education courses	Resident Welsh students as a percentage of higher education students

Rail Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of Sta Wales what consultations he has had with Britis concerning the need to upgrade rail services betwe Newport and Shrewsbury, (b) Shrewsbury and Wre (c) Wrexham and Bidston and (d) Chester and Wre and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I consult regularly with the cha of British Rail on a wide range of rail issues. Howev upgrading of services is a matter for determinat British Rail.

Education Authorities (Land Sales)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of St Wales if he will list the property and land sold by the local education authorities of Wales, giving the n realised at each transaction for each year since 19

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is n centrally.

Green Belts and National Parks

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of St Wales if he will make a statement concerning his towards the retention of existing green belts and n parks in Wales.

Mr. Grist: In December 1989 the Coun Commission announced a major review of the me which national parks' purposes are pursued. The which was endorsed by my right hon. Friend and m hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environm expected to make recommendations on the way f for the parks into the next century. There are no belts in Wales.

Primary Schools

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for what guidelines are issued by his Department t education authorities in Wales concerning the op size of any new primary schools, and as to whethe should, in any circumstances, have a capacity in ex 500 pupils.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None.

Abattoirs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the abattoirs in Wales currently available for the slaughter of lambs for export to mainland Europe; if he has any proposals to provide part or full funding for new abattoirs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The following abattoirs in Wales are currently available for the slaughter of lambs for export to mainland Europe: Fairfield Meat Co, Maelor Abattoir, Marchwiel, Wrexham, Clwyd; Oriel Jones and Son Ltd, Teifi Park Abattoir, Llanybydder, Dyfed; and United Meat Packers (Wales) Ltd, Gaerwen Industrial Estate, Anglesey, Gwynedd.

Schemes for new abattoirs may be assisted by way of regional enterprise grants (if they are located in development areas and employ fewer than 25 people), or they could qualify for regional selective assistance (essentially if they create or safeguard employment and offer a distinct regional or national benefit). However, there are EC restrictions on the granting of support towards projects which increase United Kingdom slaughter capacity unless compensating reductions in capacity can be demonstrated.

Agriculture

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any proposals to widen the role of the Development Board for Rural Wales to include strategic planning and support for the agriculture industry in north and mid Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have no such proposals. These responsibilities are a matter for my agriculture department.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what information he has about the number of renal patients who satisfy the criteria of the Renal Association of Great Britain, and approved by the Department of Health, for treatment with Erythropoietin; and what percentage is receiving it;

(2) how much additional money he has made available to health authorities for the newly approved drug Erythropoietin to be prescribed; and what estimate he has made of the number of renal patients who will be treated as a result.

Mr. Grist: Information on the number of renal patients who satisfy the criteria for treatment with Erythropoietin is not held centrally, nor is information on the number of patients receiving it. Recurrent funding of £390,000 per annum has been made available to health authorities in Wales which manage the regional main renal units to support the provision of Erythropoietin. However, the prescription of Erythropoietin is a matter of clinical judgment and I am unable to estimate the number of patients who will be treated.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what considerations led him to discontinue national priority status for the training of educational psychologists in the 1991-92 grants for educational support and training programme.

Sir Wyn Roberts: All Welsh LEAs were invited in a letter from the Department dated 18 October 1990 to bid for the initial training of educational psychologists in 1991-92. Several bids have been received which are being considered.

Asthma

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will commission research on the health effects of fine dust particulates from industrial and extracting industries and as to any relationship between the presence of certain types of dust in the atmosphere and the incidence of asthma.

Mr. Grist: Health and safety matters are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the totals of planning appeals heard by his inspectors in each of the past eight years, and the totals of their decisions to approve or reject.

Mr. Grist: The information is set out in the table:

	Heard	Approved	Rejected
1982	678	183	495
1983	620	231	389
1984	610	222	388
1985	581	244	337
1986	811	335	476
1987	747	263	484
1988	1,007	321	686
1989	1,177	367	810

NHS Trusts

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he received an expression of interest from Pembrokeshire health authority in reconstituting the whole authority as a national health service unit.

Mr. Grist: An initial submission was received on 8 October. Further information was submitted on 16 November.

Mental Handicap

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he proposes for the full review of the mental handicap strategy in 1991-92 proposed in the Welsh chapter of the White Paper, "Caring for People—Community Care in the Next Decade and Beyond."

Mr. David Hunt: The Welsh Office has today issued a letter setting out the arrangements for the review and invited comments on key issues which are set out in a detailed paper. Copies of these documents have been placed in the Library. The review will enable me to take decisions about the next steps in ensuring the maintenance and development of quality services for people in Wales with mental handicaps before the end of the strategy's initially programmed 10 years in March 1993.

ENERGY

Coal Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give an estimate of the number of people employed in the United Kingdom coal industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement concerning Government policy towards that industry.

Mr. Baldry: British Coal is by far the largest single employer in the United Kingdom coal industry, and the numbers employed by the Corporation since 1979 are set out in the annual report which is available in the Library of the House.

Decisions on British Coal manpower levels are a commercial matter for the corporation.

Multiple Share Applications

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 21 November, what is his estimate of the likely completion date of the investigations into multiple share applications for British Gas.

Mr. Wakeham: Investigations into multiple share applications for British Gas shares are a matter for the police.

Coal Supplies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects next to discuss with the chairman of National Power an increase in the coal price to be paid to members of the South Wales Small Mines Association by National Power.

Mr. Baldry: My discussions with the chairman of National Power are confidential.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on how many occasions he has requested the competition directorate of the European Commission to expedite its adjudication of the discrimination complaint regarding coal supplies to the electricity industry made by the South Wales Small Mines Association.

Mr. Baldry: The handling of the complaint made by the South Wales Small Mines Association is a matter for the Commission.

PowerGen

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what severance payment is to be paid to Robert Malpas on his resignation as chairman of PowerGen; and whether he was consulted on the sums involved.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) on 23 November at column 251.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the salary of the new chairman of PowerGen; how many days a week Sir Graham Day will be PowerGen; and what terms have been agreed salary after the privatisation of PowerGen.

Mr. Wakeham: Sir Graham Day's salary of PowerGen is £110,000 per year.

Sir Graham will be devoting around two d PowerGen over the year as a whole. Greate time in the period up to flotation are ex balanced by a reduced involvement later on.

No terms have been agreed for fixing his sa privatisation of PowerGen.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of Stat what was the salary of the former chairman o how many days a week Robert Malpas PowerGen; and what terms had been agreed salary after the privatisation of PowerGen.

Mr. Wakeham: Mr. Malpas's salary was year. He worked three days per week at Po terms had been agreed for fixing his sala privatisation of PowerGen.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of Stat (1) when he was consulted on the appointme chairman of PowerGen;

(2) what information he has on the rea resignation of the chairman of PowerGen.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member t that I gave him on 22 November at column

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of Sta what representations he has received in recen PowerGen regarding a management-led empl

Mr. Baldry: None.

Energy Conservation (Schools)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of Sta what advice on energy conservation he education authorities and school governo local financial management.

Mr. Baldry: I am writing shortly to all he the United Kingdom with advice on how t energy costs in schools. The Department of E Science has already contributed to a numbe for headteachers on energy efficiency in scho are being drawn up for further seminars ne

THORP Plant

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of Sta what will be (a) the additional cost or (b) domestic and (ii) commercial users of electri THORP is commissioned in 1992; and what of its effect on the national economy.

Mr. Baldry: The commissioning of the T will have no effect on the price of electrici consumers. The facility will support work fo people and British Nuclear Fuels plc THORP's profitability by winning some £6, orders for its first 10 years of operation, in £4,000 million from overseas customers.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what will be the cost of the incentive electricity vouchers and alternative bonus shares issued to purchasers of shares in the electricity distribution companies.

Mr. Baldry: The cost will depend on the number of people applying for shares and on the number who hold on to their shares.

Low-energy Light Bulbs

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he has taken to encourage Government Departments and other public authorities to install low-energy light bulbs in their buildings.

Mr. Baldry: As part of the Government's initiative to improve energy efficiency on the Government estate my energy efficiency office gives advice, and encourages Departments to take all cost-effective energy efficiency measures available. In my Department's Palace street building low-energy light bulbs have been fitted, and other Departments have taken similar measures.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Disabled Students

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students confined to a wheelchair are currently enrolled in primary and secondary schools; and what information he has on the number unable to be offered places due to lack of funds or facilities.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not collected centrally. It is for local education authorities to determine their own policies to accomplish the integration of pupils with physical disabilities in ordinary schools.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many deaf-blind students are currently enrolled in primary and secondary schools; what provisions have been made for them; and what plans for improvement are to be implemented in the near future.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Precise identification of deaf-blind students is difficult because the degrees of deafness and blindness vary and may be combined with learning difficulties and physical disabilities. These make accurate diagnosis difficult. The latest information available to the Department is that some 800 deaf-blind pupils are currently enrolled in all maintained, including special, schools. Responsibility for educational provision for deaf-blind students rests with local education authorities.

In 1989 the Department issued a policy statement on the educational needs of these children, which is intended to provide a framework within which local education authorities and bodies responsible for non-maintained schools will be able to plan services and make suitable provision for deaf-blind students. We have undertaken a consultation exercise with local education authorities to follow up the policy statement, and are proposing a joint seminar with SENSE early in 1991 to disseminate the results of that exercise.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the estimated figures of primary or secondary age blind-deaf students on waiting lists to be admitted to special schools and how long is the average wait for admittance.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not collected centrally.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what considerations led him to maintain national priority status for the training of educational psychologists in the 1991-92 grants for educational support and training programme.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Local education authorities employ educational psychologists to undertake a range of important functions including the fulfilment of their statutory obligations, under the Education Act 1981, relating to the assessment of, and provision of education for, children with special educational needs. The specific funding for local education authorities under the grants for educational support and training programme for the training of educational psychologists is designed to encourage and assist the maintenance of a national stock of suitably qualified people.

Student Loans

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the latest estimates of current expenditure on the student loans scheme, disaggregated into (i) administrative costs, (ii) advances to students and (iii) expenditure on access funds; what were the original public expenditure forecasts for these items; and what are the reasons for the variations.

Mr. Alan Howarth: There has been no change in the approved Estimates provision for 1990-91 of a total of £147·6 million for student loans. This provision is for the United Kingdom and comprises £130·6 million for loans to students and £17·0 million for the establishment and administration of the student loans scheme. Total United Kingdom provision for access funds is £25·5 million. This provision includes an additional £10 million approved by Parliament in March 1990, to give higher education institutions greater scope for extending discretionary assistance to students.

Council of Europe

Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many nations within the Council of Europe were represented by Ministers at the third conference of Ministers responsible for youth, in Lisbon on 19 to 22 September; which Ministers represented the United Kingdom; and what action the Government intends to take to implement the decisions of the conference.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Eighteen member states of the Council of Europe were represented by Ministers at the Lisbon conference on youth mobility. The United Kingdom, which was represented by officials, abstained from voting on the conference resolutions. The United Kingdom Government recognise the potential benefits of freedom of movement in Europe, and will explore how best to mitigate or overcome specific barriers to youth mobility within existing legal provisions. We do not consider however that formal international legal instruments provide the best means to achieve this. I have placed in the Library a copy of the conference's final text which includes a declaration by the United Kingdom.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what would be the additional cost to central Government expenditure if the total cost of the teachers' salaries were borne exclusively by central Government.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Estimated spending by LEAs in England on teachers in 1990-91 is some £8 billion. The net additional cost to central Government of transferring the responsibility for that spending would depend on the extent to which there was a reduction in the grant paid to local authorities.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidelines he has issued to education authorities and school governors operating local financial management regarding the optimum use of energy within their school buildings; and whether he has any proposals to update them.

Mr. Fallon: The Department has co-operated with the Department of Energy in the preparation of guidance on the optimum use of energy within school buildings. A booklet in reducing energy costs in schools was produced in September. Further guidance on energy savings measures in schools and education authorities is in preparation.

PRIME MINISTER

Emperor of Japan (Coronation)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister what expenditure from public funds was incurred in connection with Her Majesty's Government's representation at the coronation of the Emperor of Japan; from what departmental budgets it was funded; and if she will provide a breakdown of the expenditure.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 21 November 1990]: Her Majesty's Government were represented at the coronation of the Emperor of Japan by Her Majesty's Ambassador in Tokyo. The costs involved were minimal.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Humanitarian Aid

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the criteria used to assess whether an award of humanitarian aid is made to a foreign country.

Mrs. Chalker: Humanitarian aid is provided, within available resources, on a case-by-case basis according to need.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of Home Department how many immigratio currently engaged in the processing of ap political asylum in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None. Such app processed in the asylum and special cases c immigration and nationality department.

Prisons (Creches)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State Department what is the number of creche or at prisons in England and Wales which ca people visiting inmates; if he will list the pri such facilities are funded.

Mrs. Rumbold: According to the la information, 66 prison service establishmen area for use by the children of people vis either in the visits room or in the visitors' re These establishments are listed in the table. a supervised creche is provided. Play areas a usually financed by the establishment's purpose fund, with support in some cases fi organisations. Privacy

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to bring forward legislation to protect the individual against intrusion by journalists as recommended by the report of the Committee on privacy and related matters.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As the hon. Gentleman will recall, on 21 June at columns 1123-24, my right hon. and learned Friend announced the Government's acceptance in principle of the proposals for new criminal offences which the Calcutt committee had put forward. We have been examining these proposals and the various representations, mainly from press interests, which we have received about them. We will inform the House of the Government's considered response to these proposals as soon as that consideration is completed.

Fire Stations

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of fire stations in each fire brigade area in the United Kingdom; and on average, how many people are served by each fire station according to each fire brigade area.

Mr. John Patten: The statistics for England and Wales, based on the annual returns by fire authorities of the fire brigade establishment scheme in force in their areas on 1 January 1990, are as follows:

Fire brigade	Fire stations	Population	Average population served

Population is just one factor among many—fully explained in fire service circular No. 4/1985, copies of which are in the Library—used in categorising risk and thus determining the number, location and staffing of fire stations.

Open Prisons

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish a table showing the numbers of prisoners transferred to open prisons in the last year, their categorisation, the number transferred to open prisons in the first week of their sentence and the period of their sentences which the remainder served prior to their transfer to the open prison;

(2) what are the current arrangements for deciding whether a prisoner is transferred to an open prison; and whether he has any plans to change those arrangements.

Mrs. Rumbold: A judgment is made in each case, based on information about the prisoner including any previous convictions for violent or sex offences, as to whether he or she can reasonably be trusted in open conditions. In some cases sufficient relevant information takes time to acquire. In general, the prison service seeks to transfer suitable prisoners to open conditions as soon as possible after sentence. There are no plans to alter these arrangements.

Details of the number of prisoners transferred to open prisons, including those who are transferred in the first week of their sentences, are not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Deportation

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women currently serving prison sentences he currently plans to deport upon completion of their sentence; what crimes they have committed; and what are their countries of origin.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many remand prisoners were held in police cells on 1 November; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 1 November, a total of 1,044 prisoners, the majority of whom were remand prisoners, were held in police cells. It is not possible to identify separately a precise total for the number of remand prisoners because at the time in question this information was not available centrally for all police areas.

Seizure for Debt Rules

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the Magistrates' Courts Rules 1981 in order to bring the categories of goods exempt from seizure for debts into line with the provisions of the courts and Legal Services Act 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We are actively considering, and will be consulting the Justices Clerks Society and others about amendments to the 1981 rules which would have this effect.

Broadcasting

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the capacity of the Independent Broadcasting Authority to provide adequate supervision and influence in the situation which has developed in regard to the future of British Satellite Broadcasting and of the D-MAC television technology.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Independent Broadcasting Authority has the powers conferred on it by Parliament in broadcasting legislation. Having considered the merger between British Satellite Broadcasting and Sky Television plc, it has announced its decision to terminate the contract it held with British Satellite Broadcasting. The new company, British Sky Broadcasting, will require a non-domestic satellite service licence under the Broadcasting Act 1990, and the Independent Television Commission has full powers to draw up and award such a licence and enforce its conditions.

The Government do not seek to impose new technology where it is not commercially viable. EC directive 86/529 requires all DBS services to be broadcast using the MAC transmission standard. The directive thus governed British Satellite Broadcasting but not Sky transmissions, and will apply to any future user of the DBS channels. It will be reviewed in 1991 and the Government are considering their attitude to a replacement directive in the light of recent events.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department's inspectors have taken to ensure that the provisions of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are observed in the conduct of experiments on animals at the National Institute for Medical Research laboratories, Mill Hill, London; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: All establishments in Great Britain designated under the Act, including the National Institute for Medical Research at Mill Hill, are subject to visits, mainly without notice, by the animals (scientific procedures) inspectorate to ensure that the controls of the Act and the terms and conditions of licences issued under it are being observed.

Prisoners (Compassionate Leave)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why Delroy Showers was not allowed to attend his mother's funeral from prison, following representations from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside.

Mrs. Rumbold: Mr. Showers' request to attend the funeral of his mother was considered in the light of all the circumstances but was not allowed for security reasons.

"Charity and the National Health"

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on those recommendations which relate to his responsibilities contained in the report, "Charity and the National Health" (Directory of Social Change research paper No. 1), a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We have not received a copy of the report, "Charities and the National Health," which was sent to the Department of Health. We will gladly consider any points which may be relevant to the Home Office if my hon. Friend cares to draw them to my attention.

HEALTH

Asthma and Eczema

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total annual cost of treatment for asthma and eczema, respectively (a) through the family practitioner service and (b) through the hospital service.

Mr. Dorrell: The estimated annual cost of treating asthma is £44 million through hospital in-patient treatment and £200 million through the family health services. It is not possible to estimate the hospital out-patient cost of asthma from information collected centrally. Eczema covers a range of conditions not separately identified in the information collected, and therefore information on costing is not available.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of national health service patients being treated for asthma and eczema, respectively; and what is the number of new cases in each category every year.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not held centrally.

South London Hospital for Women

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are for the future use of the South London hospital for women; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I understand that the future use of the hospital is still being considered; the hon. Member may like to contact Sir Peter Baldwin, the chairman of South East Thames regional health authority for further information.

Salmonella Enteritidis

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing for each county of England and Wales the number of outbreaks of salmonella enteritidis PT4 in 1990 to date.

Mr. Dorrell: Provisional figures for the first nine months of 1990 (weeks one to 39) show tht 315 outbreaks (including two or more people) of infection with salmonella enteritidis PT4 were reported to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre from England and Wales.

The distribution of these outbreaks by regional health authority is as follows:

	Number
Northern	4
Yorkshire	62
Trent	36
East Anglia	13
North West Thames	15
North East Thames	7
South East Thames	18
South West Thames	18
Wessex	23
Oxford	10
South Western	43
West Midlands	22
Mersey	9
North Western	21
Wales	14
Total	315

Child Care

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department's library will obtain a copy of "Caring for Children; the 1990 Report," produced by the family policy studies centre.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. A copy of the report was ordered by the Department's library service on 13 November 1990.

Day Nurseries

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by his Department to increase the availability of day nursery places.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of places in day nurseries in England increased by nearly 14 per cent. in the year to 31 March 1989 to over 75,000.

The tax concession for employer-managed child care facilities in the 1990 Budget will encourage further development. The new review duty introduced in the Children Act 1989 (to be implemented in October 1991) will require local authorities regularly to look at local services used by young children and publish reports. This will ensure more coherent use and development of services.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which outside agency is undertaking the analysis of national health service trust applications; and at what cost.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The financial assessment of national health service trust applicants has been undertaken by Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte management consultants. The total budget for this exercise is £536,000.

Custard

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what European regulations exist or are proposed concerning the production and use of custard; what representations he has received; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No European regulations exist concerning the production and use of custard and we are not aware that any are proposed. Representations have been received concerning the implications of the Food Hygiene (Amendment) Regulations 1990 for custards and custard tarts which we are currently considering.

National Insurance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the net additional cost to the national health service of the changes to employers' national insurance contributions and reimbursement announced in the autumn statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No central estimate has been made of the effect on the NHS of the changes in national insurance rates.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has about the number of renal patients who satisfy the criteria of the Renal Association of Great Britain, and approved by his Department for treatment with Erythropoietin; and what percentage are receiving it.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much additional money he has made available to health authorities for the newly approved drug Erythropoietin to be prescribed and what estimate he has made of the number of renal patients who will be treated as a result.

Mr. Dorrell: Health authorities are expected to finance Erythropoietin from their main allocations. Like other new treatments, it is being introduced progressively across the health service and spending throughout the NHS is, of course, increased to cover such new treatments, and services. It is for each region to assess their patients' requirements for the drug and make appropriate plans to ensure that need is met.

Graham Gaskin Case

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on what date the judgment of the Government of the European court was given in the Graham Gaskin case;

(2) if he will list what steps the Government have taken to implement the European court ruling of the Graham Gaskin case, listing dates and times of meetings, and those present;

(3) what are the reasons for the length of time taken in completing consideration of the implementation of the ruling given in the European court on the Graham Gaskin case;

(4) if he will place in the Library all the documents relating to the Graham Gaskin case held by his Department;

(5) how many members of his Department's staff are engaged in the study to examine the implications of the Graham Gaskin case; when the study was opened; what the terms of reference of the study are; and when the study will be completed.

Mr. Dorrell: The decision of the European Court of Human Rights in the Graham Gaskin case was given on 7 July 1989. The court held, by a majority vote, that there had been a violation of article 8 of the convention for the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the handling of Mr. Gaskin's request for access to case records relating to the period he spent in care as a child, and that the United Kingdom should pay damages to Mr. Gaskin. Payment was made to Mr. Gaskin in 1989.

As I indicated in my reply to the hon. Member on 30 October at column 446 the implications of the decision in respect of policy on access to personal records are being studied. Progress is being made and I will write to the hon. Member once decisions have been taken. Copies of the judgment of the European Court in Mr. Gaskin's case are held in the Library.

Terminal Care

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the £8 million made available in England in 1990-91 for hospices and terminal care; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A number of letters concerning the detailed implementation of this year's arrangements have been received. We are seeki information from health authorities and will be discussi with them any problems that arise.

Adoption

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Heal which countries' adoption orders are recognised by t United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Adoption orders made und the law of any country specified in the Adopti (Designation of Overseas Adoptions) Order 1973 a recognised as valid under United Kingdom statutory la A copy of the order is available in the Library.

Adoption orders made in countries which have ratifi the Hague convention on jurisdiction, applicable law a recognition of decrees are also recognised. Like the Unit Kingdom, Austria and Switzerland have ratified t convention.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Heal what steps he is taking to ensure that adoption orde made in Romania will be recognised in the Unit Kingdom.

Mrs. Virgina Bottomley: Adoption orders made Romania are not recognised as valid under Unit Kingdom statutory law. People who adopt a Romani child are required, as part of the entry clearan procedures, to undertake to apply to adopt the child in t United Kingdom. The recognition of foreign adopti orders is being considered in the current adoption la review.

Census Information

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State f Health whether information gathered during the co pletion of the census will remain private and confident from community charge registration officers.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes. It would be an offence under secti 8 of the Census Act 1920 for anyone employed on t census to pass personal information from the complet census returns to community charge registration office or anyone else outside the census offices, and any brea of confidence in this respect would also be treated as serious disciplinary offence.

"Charity and the National Health"

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Heal what is his policy on those recommendations which rela to his responsibilities contained in the report, "Charity a the National Health" (Directory of Social Chan Research Paper No. 1) a copy of which has been sent him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The management and use of NHS tr funds is a matter for the appointed trustees in accordan with general trust and charity law. Trustees should ha regard to the terms of individual trusts in deciding h funds are spent.

The Government encourage fund raising and ask heal authorities to consult widely with voluntary groups planning their fund-raising activities.

Nurse-bed Ratios

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of nurses employed by the national health service in 1960 , 1970, 1980 and 1990, or the latest date available and the number of occupied national health service hospital beds for each date, showing the nurse to occupied bed ratio in each case.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 12 November 1990]: The available information is given in the table. Figures for the earlier years cannot be provided on a comparable basis. There is no direct comparison between the manpower and the occupied bed information. The manpower figures relate to the total numbers of nursing and midwifery staff employed in the NHS hospital and community services. However, occupied beds relate to the hospital service only and are not a particularly meaningful measurement of service provision.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Kilroot Power Station

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the capital outlay for equipment which is already obsolete for phase 2 of Kilroot power station.

Dr. Mawhinney: None of the equipment for Kilroot phase 2 has been classed as obsolete.

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total outlay expended to date on equipment already purchased for phase 2 of Kilroot power station.

Dr. Mawhinney: Northern Ireland Electricity estimates this to be £65 million.

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the approximate date when the decision will be reached regarding the commencement of phase 2 of Kilroot power station.

Dr. Mawhinney: Decisions on Kilroot 2 will be taken as soon as possible. A number of options which affect the timing are under consideration at present, in particular the possibility of developing an electricity interconnector with Scotland and the possibility of piping natural gas to Northern Ireland for electricity generation. Both issues are being progressed as a matter of urgency.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met British Coal representatives to discuss Kilroot 2 power station; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I last met British Coal representatives on 14 November 1990. The discussion covered a number of topics including Kilroot 2.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effect Kilroot 2 power station will have on transport jobs in Northern Ireland if it is not coal fired; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Over the past year I have had representations on this issue from Northern Ireland Electricity, the trade unions, Members of Parliament, Carrickfergus borough council and British Coal.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Training

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the impending closure of employment training schemes initiated by the Allen Graham Trust for disabled and other disadvantaged young people; and what action he is prepared to take to save these schemes.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 23 November 1990]: The financial difficulties of the Allen Graham Trust were first brought to my attention early last week. Because of the valuable work done over a period of years by the trust, I asked my officials to meet immediately with representatives of the trust to explore what might be done to assist them. During this meeting, it was established that the trust had become insolvent. In those circumstances, it would be wrong to put at risk further substantial sums of taxpayers' money. The main concern now is to ensure that everything possible is done to provide alternative opportunities for trainees and others as quickly as possible and with the minimum amount of disruption for the people concerned.

DEFENCE

Community Charge

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been prosecuted to date for non-payment of the community charge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Non-payment of the community charge is a civil rather than a criminal matter, so the question of prosecutions as such does not arise. I am aware of about 190 court appearances by Service personnel in connection with non-payment of the community charge.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times bailiffs employed by local authorities have visited service accommodation in connection with non-payment of the community charge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Twice, so far as I am aware.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding the admission of bailiffs employed by local authorities on to Ministry of Defence property.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Bailiffs employed by local authorities may be admitted to Ministry of Defence property, but they must be accompanied at all times by Service personnel when within unit boundaries.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many attachment of possessions orders have been served on service personnel to date due to non-payment of community charges.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Liability orders for non payment of the community charge give local authorities a number of recovery options, including distraint. I am not aware that this latter option has been used against any Service personnel.

Attachment of Earnings

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether he will place in the Library copies of directives or documents distributed to regimental paymasters relating to the exemption of service personnel from attachment of earnings orders;

(2) if he will place a copy of Ministry of Defence directive D/PSA/11/1/11 PS4 (A) in the Library.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A copy of the directive sent to commands regarding the enforcement of liability orders and the exemption of service personnel from attachment of earnings orders is being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice has been given to service personnel regarding their liability to attachment of earnings orders served on them by local authorities in respect of community charges.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Personnel have been advised of the possible consequences of non-payment, including deductions at source from pay to recover arrears.

Accommodation Charges

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the percentage of each of the accommodation charges listed for quarters outside Scotland on page 29 of the 19 report of the review body on armed forces pay (Cm 936) that was paid in lieu of rates.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Gulf Forces

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Def how many free airmail letters can be sent and received week by service personnel stationed in the Gulf regio

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no restriction on number of forces free airletters that can be sent received per week by service personnel stationed in Gulf region.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Def what is the average length of time taken for an air letter to reach service personnel in the Gulf region f (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Germany.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All letters addressed to ser personnel in the Gulf region are transported by air present, letters posted in the United Kingdom ar within about five days and those from Germany wi about four days.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Def what is the latest posting date for parcels and letters t sent to service personnel in the Gulf region in time Christmas.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The latest recommended pos dates for parcels and letters to be sent to service perso in the Gulf region in time for Christmas are:

1 December
All classes of surface mail including economy se parcels.

13 December
Airmail 2nd class letters, cards, packets and stan service (airmail) parcels.

14 December
Airmail 1st class letters, cards and forces free airlet

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Def what arrangements he will make to ensure that Christ parcels can be sent out to those serving in the Gulf in for Christmas free of charge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Forces free airletters delivered to the Gulf region free of charge. Parcels ca sent at forces concessionary rates, which are roughl line with United Kingdom inland postage rates.

Nuclear Arms Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defen he will list in the Official Report all unclassified stu undertaken by the Atomic Weapons Establishment an predecessor since 1979 on (a) the United States nuc test site at Nevada and (b) the Soviet nuclear test sit Semipalatinsk and Novaya Zemla; and how m classified studies have been undertaken at the Ato Weapons Research Establishment or the Atomic Weap Establishment on these test sites over the same perio

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The unclassified seismolo studies undertaken by the Atomic Weapons Establishm and its predecessor since 1979 on the United States nuclear test site at Nevada and the Soviet sites at Semipalatinsk and Novya Zemlya are as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Charge Benefit

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Wales are receiving community charge benefit; what assessment he has made of the level of awareness among potential beneficiaries of the availability of this benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Full information from the Department's statistical surveys is not yet available, but it is estimated that currently nearly 600,000 individual charge payers in Wales are receiving community charge benefit. Most local authorities undertook publicity to ensure that potential claimants were aware that they might be entitled to benefit, and the Government have publicised the benefit scheme through television and newspaper advertisements and leaflets. Awareness of community charge benefit is generally high.

Statistical Surveys

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to receive the results of the statistical surveys being carried out by his Department on family credit and community charge benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information from statistical surveys about family credit claimants who are, or are not, also receiving community charge benefit should be available in the early summer of 1991.

Pensions

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the comparable level of pension and contributions towards pensions in (a) Luxembourg, (b) Belgium, (c) the Netherlands, (d) Denmark and (e) the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In general, it is very difficult to make meaningful comparisons between pension schemes in different countries because there are many fundamental differences in the way they are run. It is also very misleading to compare only the weekly rate of state pension payable, as there are many other factors to take into account.

For example, most other EC countries operate fully earnings-related state pension schemes—Luxembourg and Belgium fall into this category. This means that the rate of pension payable depends on the individual pensioner's earnings level during working life, and consequently there is a wide variation in the rate of pension paid from one person to another.

In making a comparison of the situation in the countries mentioned, such factors as the other benefits covered by the contribution, the employee—employer contribution split, the provision of pensions for dependent spouses and the availability of additional pensions must be taken into account, and the cost of living.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the maximum state earnings additional pension payable in each year since 1978; and if he will give a projection for each year to 1999 consistent with his answer of 5 April 1990, Official Report, column 788-89.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is set out in the table. The amounts apply to a person in full-time employment who has received earnings at or above the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions and retires on 6 April in each year, assuming price rises of 5 per cent. per year and average earnings increasing by 7 per cent. per year effective from April 1991.

Test Claim Procedure

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many special payments were made to people who were prevented from making a claim during the 1985 miners' strike owing to the test claim procedure and did not follow up with a claim within a year, in the latest available year;

(2) how many special payments were made to people who were prevented from making a claim owing to the test claim procedure and did not follow up with a claim within a year, in the latest available year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Following a decision of the social security commissioners in 1989, a number of claims from canteen workers and cleaners involved in the 1985 miners' strike were reviewed. Extra-statutory payments relating to arrears of benefit were made as follows:

Unemployment benefit cases = 220 payments
Supplementary benefit cases = 5 payments

During the last five years, no other special payments of benefit have been made to claimants who were prevented from making a claim owing to the test claim procedure.

Female Employment

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Security if he will give a breakdown of female emplo in his Department by grade, giving salary bands.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The table shows the num women in each grade. To give the salary bands wo disproportionately expensive. A copy of the "Civil S Pay and Conditions of Service Code", which gives details, is in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Security what is his estimate of the number of peop would be denied housing benefit if the Housing (General) Amendment No. 3 Regulations implemented; and what is his estimate of the net sa

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The indications are relatively few people in residential care and nursing are currently receiving housing benefit to help wit accommodation costs. Under the proposals, all tho registered residential care or nursing home who entitled to housing benefit on 29 October, or wh submitted a claim on or before that date wh subsequently determined in their favour, would entitlement under the current rules and, conseq there would be no financial saving. Any potential s from possible future claims can only be a mat speculation.

Direct Credit Transfers

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Security (1) if he intends making any changes to the Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations regulation 21(1), allowing for payment into a clai account by way of automated or other direct transfer;

(2) if he will give the number of direct credit tr made for income support and for invalidity benefit, latest available year;

(3) what instructions his Department issues t receiving a request for a direct credit transfer wh automated credit transfer cannot be made.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There are no propos change the Social Security (Claims and Pay Regulations 1987 affecting payment of benefit by credit transfer. Arrangements are not yet available for payments of income support or invalidity benefit to be made by credit transfer which is at present restricted to beneficiaries paid by computer. The Department's staff are aware of these arrangements.

National Insurance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the net additional cost to his Department of the changes to employer's national insurance contributions and reimbursement announced in the autumn statement.

Mr. Scott: No net additional cost is expected.

Direct Deductions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the reasons for which direct deduction from income support can be made, including those announced but not yet in force, indicating in each case (a) whether it can be made without the claimant's agreement, (b) the maximum rate level of deduction and (c) the date on which it came into force.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table.

Type of deduction	Claimant's agreement needed?	Current maximum amount of weekly arrears deduction	Date of coming into force
1. Accommodation and Utility Costs
(a) Housing costs	Yes	£1·85	April 1988—carried forward from Supplementary Benefit
(b) Miscellaneous accommodation costs	Yes	Nil
(c) Service charges for fuel and rent not falling within (a)	Yes	£1·85
(d) Fuel charges	Yes	£1·85 (£3·70 if only one fuel deduction)
(e) Water charges	Yes	£1·85
2. Community Charge	No	£1·85 (£2·90 for a couple)	8 April 1989—Scotland 1 April 1990—England and Wales
3. Overpayment Recovery	No	£5·55 (£7·20 in cases of proven fraud)	April 1988—carried forward from Supplementary Benefit

Notes:

1. Deductions for community charge are made following a court order. Overpayment recovery is initiated on behalf of the Secretary of State.
2. Deductions for current charges may be made under item 1 in addition to deductions for arrears. The claimant's written consent is sought before the total of deductions for arrears and current use of utilities is allowed to exceed 25 per cent. of the Income Support applicable amount (excluding housing costs) for the family.
3. Deductions may also be made to recover a social fund loan. The rate of recovery is determined after taking into account existing deductions and other known debts.
4. Deductions from income support for fines are proposed in the Criminal Justice Bill now before the House. They would be made by order of a court and, at current rates, would be £1·85 per week.
5. The White Paper "Children Come First" published on 29 October 1990 proposes deduction of 5 per cent. of the income support of an unemployed claimant who is liable to maintain a child.

Child Care

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many whole-time equivalent child care places are provided for staff in his Department; and how many places are provided per 100 employees.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As at 1 November 1990 the Department of Social Security has 80,486 staff, and provides 67 full-time places for pre-school children and access to over 1,400 places on holiday play schemes for children of school age.

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what leaflets are produced providing benefits advice for people involved in or affected by an industrial dispute.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The claim form for people affected by an industrial dispute (form B71D) contains an information page. Additionally, the guide to income support (leaflet IS20) contains a section which gives information to people involved in or affected by an industrial dispute.

Child Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the totals and categories of families who will face clawbacks in other benefits as a result of the planned increase in child benefit for the first born.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is estimated that the planned adjustment of benefit paid for a child for whom the higher rate of child benefit is payable would affect approximately 192,000 families in the categories shown in the table. The effect of the adjustment is that the benefits and increases of benefit payable for the child for whom the higher rate of child benefit is payable would be increased to £9·70 per week from April 1991.

	Number of families
Child dependency increases of:
Industrial death benefit	1,333
Invalid care allowance	3,778
Severe disablement allowance	1,222
Invalidity benefit	106,111
Retirement pension	18,308
Widow's benefit	59,200

	Number of families
Benefit
Guardian's allowance	2,023
Child's special allowance	346

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state by what means his Department intends to effect the forthcoming uprating of child benefit; and whether additional staffing resources will be made available to do so.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Child benefit is paid by credit transfer or order books produced by computerised processes at our central office in Newcastle. The reprogramming necessary to put the increase into effect can be contained within existing staff resources.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost of disregarding child benefit in the calculation of income support and family credit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 20 November 1990]: Child benefit is taken into account in the assessment of income support just as it always was in the assessment of supplementary benefit. It is also ta account in the assessment of housing bene community charge benefit. Although it is not tr income in the assessment of family credit, child b taken into account when the credit levels are set.

The net cost of disregarding child benefit assessment of income support, housing bene community charge benefit is estimated to be arou billion a year. The cost of ignoring child bene setting the credits for family credit would be arou million a year, including the knock-on effect of i family credit on other income-related benefits.

Family Credit

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State fo Security what assessment he has made of the p effect of the Family Credit (General) Am Regulations 1990 (S.I., 1990, No. 574) upon fa Scotland due to the earlier conclusion of the scho and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The amendment practical effect on families in Scotland or elsewh its purpose was merely to clarify the existing le and no change in policy or practice was involved

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment his Department has made of the situation of carers of pensionable age who did not initially qualify for invalid care allowance on age grounds and therefore do not now qualify for the carers premium; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Invalid care allowance is an income maintenance benefit for those who have to forgo the opportunity of full-time employment because they spend at least 35 hours per week caring for a severely disabled person who receives attendance allowance or constant attendance allowance. Although entitlement to invalid care allowance established before pension age may be carried forward after age 60-65, it would in general be true that those over retirement age are not forgoing full-time employment. We are nevertheless keeping the situation of carers under consideration. We have already announced the increase of the earnings limit for invalid care allowance recipients from £20 to £30 with effect from April 1991 which we expect will help 5,000 carers. We introduced the carer premium from October in the income-related benefits—income support, housing benefit and community charge benefit—which we expect will assist a further 30,000 claimants, many of whom did not qualify for any premium before its introduction. In common with others on income-related benefits, people who start caring after reaching pensionable age have access to one of the three pensioner premiums. We are extending the carer premium from October next year so that it can be paid for up to eight weeks after caring ceases.

SCOTLAND

House Sales

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sales Scottish Homes completed under (a) right to buy, (b) rent to mortgage, (c) portable discount and (d) vacant possession in each month from April to the latest available date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Number of sales: 1990

	Right to buy	Rent to mortgage	Portable discount scheme	Vacant possession sales

n/a—Not available.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what income Scottish Homes received in capital receipts from house sales in the first quarter of 1990-91, and in the second quarter of 1990-91.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The element of Scottish Homes income from capital receipts relative to house sales was £5·744 million in the first quarter of 1990-91 and £9·053 million in the second quarter of 1990-91.

Tenancies

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report any statutory rights that tenants will lose as a result of the ownership of their public sector or former Scottish Special Housing Association tenancies being transferred by the exercise of tenants' rights to voluntary transfer to an alternative public sector landlord.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Tenants who wish to exercise the statutory right under part III of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988 and transfer to a new landlord would give up their secure tenancy and transfer on an assured tenancy basis.

Tenants transferring by this route would lose their statutory right to buy but could enter a contractual agreement with their new landlord to preserve a form of RTB.

Tenants including new town development corporation tenants transferring to Scottish Homes would transfer as secure tenants.

Countryside Commission

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the budget for the Countryside Commission (Scotland) for 1989-90, and what is the proposed budget for 1990-91.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grant-in-aid to the Countryside Commission for Scotland for these years is as follows:

1989-90	5·785
1990-91	6·358

Families

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review his policies towards protection of the family unit in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The protection of the family in Scotland is a key feature of Government policy and is kept under constant review. In the field of family law, the Scottish Law Commission is engaged in a major project on the law of children. This includes the scope of parental rights and duties, the custody and guardianship of children, and the legal capacity and responsibility of young people.

Tenancies

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those sections of housing statutes which determine the power and procedures whereby alternative private sector landlords may acquire a heritable title to former public sector or Scottish Special Housing Association properties.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The provision whereby private sector landlords are able to acqure a title to public sector housing stock are contained primarily in part III of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988.

Local authorities also have a general power of disposal in section 12 of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 and Scottish Homes have a similar power in section 2(2)(h) of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988.

New town development corporations have a general power of disposal under section 3(2) as read with sections 18-18C of the New Towns (Scotland) Act 1968.

Divorce

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the cost of legal aid for actions of divorce in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Sheriff court Cost £	Court of session Cost £	Total £
1985-86	2,297,092	6,254,678	8,551,770
1986-87	3,901,527	5,402,408	9,303,935
1987-88	5,367,722	3,931,564	9,299,286
1988-89	5,330,902	2,223,971	7,554,873
1989-90	5,271,029	1,309,665	6,580,694

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what quantity of (a) low and (b) intermediate level nuclear waste has been generated by Scottish nuclear power stations annually since 1985.

Mr. Lang: Questions about operational aspects of nuclear power stations in Scotland are a matter for the operators concerned.

Government Researchers

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide to all Government-commissioned researchers a written undertaking of their right to publish completed work after three months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department strongly supports the principle of disseminating research findings. Every opportunity is taken to encourage the communication of these findings to those who might benefit. Practice varies according to the needs and circumstances applying in individual cases. For instance, it may be necessary to take steps to safeguard the confidentiality of information relating to identifiable individuals or institutions which may be obtained in the course of a research project. It is my intention that this policy should continue.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list research projects commissioned by his Department which remain unpublished one year or more after completion; and if he will make a statement in respect of each.

Mr. Rifkind: The publication of the reports of research projects is governed by contracts between researchers and my Department. The general policy of the Scottish Office is to encourage the dissemination of researc publication of reports or by other means. In Department standing in the way of publi finding of research projects which have been more than one year.

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary Scotland if he will make a statement on the r of (a) women, (b) representatives of service (c) persons representative of the wider c steering groups preparing business pla enterprise companies.

Mr. Lang: Local enterprise companie organisations and individual appointments for the companies themselves, subject requirement that at least two-thirds of the m board of each company are to be drawn fro sector.

Local Government Finance

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary Scotland if he will print in the Official Repo used to determine the revenue grants for the year for each of the regional councils including the population levels used in de grant-aided expenditure figure.

Mr. Rifkind: There are basically two procedure for distributing aggregate exter local authorities. First, an amount is distri authorities to equalise differences in thei expenditure (GAE). The GAE of each determined by the client group assessment ap is agreed with COSLA and kept under regu the distribution committee of the working government finance. Secondly, the rest of distributed on a per capita basis.

Details of the population estimates calculation of the 1991-92 GAE figures are the booklet "Grant Aided Expenditure so-called green book) published by my D copy of this publication is in the House Li

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of Stat if he will list the latest available information, authority in Scotland, as to the numbers 1989-90 and 1990-91 who (a) have or (b) h paying the poll tax and the percentage of liable adults that represents.

Mr. Lang: The information requested centrally. It is understood however that authorities have already collected or expect 90 per cent. of the total community charge for 1989-90 and that their collection rates f at present following broadly the same patte

Access Funds

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary Scotland on what principles he allocated th to each of the colleges under his control.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 1990]: The access fund were allocated on t number of eligible students in attendance at the Scottish colleges of education and central institutions during session 1989-90.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money he has allocated in access funds to each of the colleges under his control.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 22 November 1990]: The information requested is set out below and relates to Session 1990-91.

Dounreay

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what evidence his Department has received of nuclear-related dangers in the Dounreay area.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 November 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend has recieve no evidence of any nuclear-related dangers in the Dounreay area. All activities at nuclear establishments have to meet the requirements of the regulatory authorities. Permitted levels of radioactive discharges are very low and well within internationally agreed limits. Regular monitoring reveals no evidence of harm to the surrounding environment as a result of these discharges.

While there is no evidence of a causal link between the incidence of childhood leukaemia and nuclear installations, the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment has prompted a number of medical studies and these will be published as they become available.

Development Corporation Houses

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his most recent proposals for the handover of development corporation houses to other housing authorities prior to the wind-up of the Scottish new towns; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 23 November 1990]: The Government's proposals on the transfer of development corporation houses remain unchanged from those set out in the White Paper "The Scottish New Towns: The Way Ahead" (Cm. 711). That states:

"The position in each town will be carefully considered once an order for dissolution has been made, and formal consultations will be held with development corporations, district councils and representative tenant groups to review the position and to determine to what extent transfers might take place, be it to housing associations, co-operatives, district councils, private or other landlords. Those tenants who have not transferred to other landlords will be transferred to Scottish Homes at wind-up, with a view to pursuing further diversification with the small residual number of houses".

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Mink

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether Pentobarbitone is authorised for the killing of farmed mink.

Mr. Maclean: Pentobarbitone is an approved drug for use in the euthanasia of all species of farm livestock.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the environmental needs of farmed mink; and if he will make the amendments necessary to the existing orders to make provision for such needs.

Mr. Maclean: I have received a statement on fur farming from the Farm Animal Welfare Council, and the Council of Europe has recently agreed a recommendation concerning the welfare of fur-bearing animals under the convention for the protection of animals kept for farming purposes.

Contracting parties must implement this recommendation and for member states of the European Community it is likely that the Commission will propose Community legislation. Existing legislation in this country relates to security on mink farms and would not be a suitable vehicle for welfare matters.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he takes to ensure the proper qualifications of those involved in the killing of farmed mink; and what records he keeps of such personnel.

Mr. Maclean: There is no requirement for any farmers to receive training in the methods of killing their own livestock. Nevertheless, when this is done it must be undertaken with due care and humanity.

Mr. Maclean: The minimum specifications for the guard fence of a mink enclosure are laid down in Schedule 2 paragraph 2 of the Mink (Keeping) Regulations, 1975 (as amended). This states "enclosures shall be bounded by a guard fence consisting of wire netting of not less than 19 gauge with a mesh size not greater than 26mm or, alternatively, welded mesh of not less than 15 gauge with a mesh size not greater than 26mm × 40mm. The fence shall be not less than 1·20m high above ground level. The base of the fence shall be buried in the ground to a depth of at least 300mm and turned outwards at the bottom at right angles for at least 150mm or shall be embedded in a trench of the same depth the bottom of which shall be provided with a foundation at least 150mm wide on each side and at least 150mm deep of either concrete or of consolidated hard core of brick or concrete rubble or of similar or solid and durable material. At the top of the fence there shall be flat sheet metal at least 300mm deep securely attached to the inside of the wire netting and to any fence post inside the enclosure so as to form a continuos baffle leaving no gap between the wire and the sheet metal."

Agricultural Support

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total level of expenditure on agricultural support in each of the last 10 years; and what level is forecast for each of the next three years.

Mr. Curry: Details of agricultural support in the United Kingdom for the 1985-86 to 1989-90 (forecast) are set out in the publication "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1989". Figures for preceding years are contained in the Annual Review of Agriculture White Papers. These publications are available in the Library of the House.

The final outturn for 1989-90 and forecasts for the next three years (rounded to the nearest £10 million) are as follows:

	£ million
1989-90 (outturn)	1,260
1990-91 (forecast)	1,960
1991-92 (plans)	1,910
1992-93 (plans)	2,030

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he intends to compensate farmers for income lost as a result of the 30 per cent. cut in farm support agreed at the recent meeting of European Community Agriculture Ministers.

Mr. Curry: The EC Commission has undertaken to make proposals for Community measures to accompany any agreement reached in the current GATT negotiations to reduce levels of agricultural support worldwide. The Council of Ministers will discuss the Commission's proposals under its normal procedures.

Drainage Authorities

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the grant earning ceiling determined for internal drainage boards in England and Wales for 1990-91.

Mr. Curry: Grant earning ceilings, which determine the amount of flood defence expenditure in a financial year on which grant will be paid, are allocated to the National Rivers Authority, who undertake each year a substantial number of schemes. For internal drainage boards, of whom only a proportion will promote schemes in a single financial year, grant expenditure is constrained within an overall provision for all boards, and grant is paid when schemes have been approved by my Department. In 1990-91 in England grant provision to IDBs is £1·7 million.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales can provide information on the position in Wales.

Livestock Payments

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total level of livestock payments in the United Kingdom for each of the last five years; if he will list the payments made under each scheme; and what proportion of each scheme is financed by the European Community.

Mr. Curry: Information on payments under the various measures that benefit the United Kingdom livestock sector is contained at table 9.1 of "Agriculture i Kingdom 1989" a copy of which is in the l House.

The market support measures generally a cent. funding by the European Community, c suckler cow premium scheme payments inclu of national funding that does not att contribution; and the Community contribu cent. of eligible expenditure in Great Britai in Northern Ireland from 1990) under the compensatory allowance scheme.

Flood Defences

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister o Fisheries and Food what criteria are used i the eligibility of a proposed coastal prot flood and sea defence scheme for grant aid

Mr. Curry: For coast protection and flo sea, defence schemes to qualify for grant aid technically sound, economically worthwhil sufficient benefit to justify the cost), and en sympathetic. To satisfy the last of these crite proposals must be acceptable to the Nature Council, and have satisfied the requirement 1217 The Land Drainage Improve (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Reg or S.I. 1199 The Town and Country Plannin of Environmental Effects) Regulations 198 applicable.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister o Fisheries and Food what are the reasons available to individual regions or local d National Rivers Authority for fluvial flood a schemes being lowest in primarily urba highest in primarily agricultural regions.

Mr. Curry: The amount of grant av individual region or local district of the N Authority depends on the size of its progra work, and its financial resources. These fac into account in setting the grant earning c basic grant rate.

In the past three years, the numbe approved for grant is about 270, and their cost is around £110 million. Of these schem will afford protection to agricultural land a estimated cost is just over £7 million. The m number and value, are schemes providing alone.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister o Fisheries and Food whether, since his rep Member for Caerphilly of 18 December Report, column 878, he has become environmentally damaging land drainage scheme going ahead in the face of ob conservation bodies.

Mr. Curry: The environmental implic drainage and sea defence schemes submitte are examined carefully and confirmation is Nature Conservancy Council are cont proposals and that the requirements of eith Land Drainage Improvement Works (Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988,

The Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 as appropriate, have been satisfied. In respect of all land drainage or sea defence schemes, grant-aided or not, drainage authorities have a duty under the Water Act 1989 to further conservation, and they are also obliged to fulfil the requirements of S.I. 1217 or S.I. 1199 for, respectively, improvement works and new works.

These statutory requirements are intended to ensure that consultation takes place prior to works being undertaken, and that environmentally damaging works are avoided. I am not aware that any environmentally damaging land drainage or sea defence scheme has gone ahead in the face of objections from conservation bodies.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what levels of service drainage authorities are expected to provide when assessing the need for or designing new schemes to protect urban areas and agricultural land from fluvial and sea flooding.

Mr. Curry: Drainage authorities are aware that their proposals for flood defence schemes must satisfy Ministry criteria, namely be technically sound, economically worthwhile and environmentally sympathetic; the Ministry's consideration involves a judgment of the appropriate level of service as well as priority and need for works. The Ministry does not prescribe levels of service, nor is a national prescription considered appropriate. However we are encouraging further work to establish the methodology for setting levels of service, which are expected to be a more prominent feature of judgments about the timing and nature of works, and hence to play a greater part in planning programmes. We are aware, for instance, that the National Rivers Authority are addressing the question as part of the corporate planning process.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review the rates of grant for fluvial flood and sea defence schemes available to individual regions or local districts of the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Curry: In undertaking fluvial flood defence schemes individual regions or local districts of the National Rivers Authority may attract grant at one of four rates: 15 per cent., 35 per cent., 45 per cent., 55 per cent. Allocation of these rates takes account of a region's or district's facility to raise finance and the programme of grant aided works being undertaken. If one or both of these factors change, a region or district may qualify for a higher or lower grant rate.

Additionally, sea and tidal defence schemes attract a supplement which, in April of this year, was increased from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. I have no current plans for a further review of the present rates of grant, which offer support up to 75 per cent. of the cost of a scheme.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the continued viability of farm businesses in the light of the subsidy cuts agreed by the European Community's submission to the GATT round.

Mr. Curry: The Community offer on agricultural reform remains under negotiation in the GATT Round. It is premature to forecast the final agreement or its impact. The Commission has given an undertaking to make proposals for changes in agricultural support, consistent with a GATT agreement, aimed at ensuring a viable future for Community farmers.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will indicate the priority given in the allocation of grant aid to drainage authorities between the classes of (a) urban sea defence, (b) rural sea defence, (c) urban flood relief, (d) the preservation of existing rural drainage schemes, (e) new rural drainage schemes and (f) flood warning schemes.

Mr. Curry: In the main the order of priority given in the allocation of grant provision to the National Rivers Authority (and their predecessors, the Water Authorities) is: flood warning schemes; urban sea defence; urban flood relief; rural sea defence; the preservation of existing rural drainage schemes; new rural drainage schemes. This order of priorities is also kept in mind in allocating grant to schemes undertaken by local authorities and internal drainage boards, but no scheme would be rejected for grant solely because of its position in the above order of priorities.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions over the last six-year period an application for a licence for a mink farm has been refused; and if he will give for each case the relevant reason.

Mr. Maclean: No licences for mink farms have been refused over the last six years in Great Britain.

Quarantine (Dogs)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether there are any special provisions made by his Department, in the context of the six-month mandatory quarantine provision for dogs entering the United Kingdom, in order to enable guide dogs for blind people to enter accompanying a blind person, and not to be restricted by quarantine.

Mr. Maclean: There are no special provisions for the import of guide dogs. Having considered all the evidence, including that from the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association, the Waterhouse committee recommended that no exemptions to general rabies quarantine requirements should be permitted.

Bananas

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards trade preferences for Caribbean bananas after 1992.

Mr. Curry: The European Commission is currently considering the arrangements to apply to bananas post-1992 but has not yet come forward with proposals. We are encouraging the Commission and other member states to ensure that any new arrangements fulfil our commitments to Commonwealth Caribbean suppliers and that they take account of consumer interests, trade policy considerations and the competition and efficiency objectives of the single market initiative.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the minimum acceptable specifications for the perimeter guard fences of mink farms.

Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what actual expenditure is incurred by his Department in controlling the numbers of the wild fox population.

Mr. Maclean: The responsibility for fox control rests with the occupiers of land.

Agricultural Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give an estimate of the number of people earning their living in the United Kingdom agriculture industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement concerning Government policy towards that industry.

Mr. Curry: The number of persons recorded as being engaged in agriculture in the United Kingdom are shown in the table.

	Total number engaged in agriculture (thousand)	of which whole-time (thousand)

Food Manufacturing and Processing Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give an estimate of the number of people employed in the United Kingdom food manufacturing and processing industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement concerning Government policy towards that industry.

Mr. Curry: Our main objective is, through for example financial and other support for Food From Britain, to encourage the food industry to take the fullest advantage of the opportunities being opened up by the completion of the Single European Market at the end of 1992.

[4] The standard industrial classification for this industry was amended with effect from 1981, and statistics for 1979 and 1980 are thus not strictly comparable with those for subsequent years.

Advisory Committee (Food)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to establish the implementation advisory committee on food as a permanent committee.

Mr. Maclean: The implementation advisory committee's sole terms of reference are to advise Government Departments on draft codes of practice to be issued for consultation under section 40 of the Food Safety Act 1990. The committee will have completed its task when any necessary codes of practice have been prepared.

Foodstuffs (Inspection)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation there has been between his Department and local government organisations concerning the implementation of the European Community directive on the official inspection of foodstuffs.

Mr. Maclean: Our officials are in regular contact with local authority organisations about the implementation of the EC directive on the official control of foodstuffs. In particular, they were consulted about the costs if implementing the directive. As a result, the Government are providing an additional £30 million to implement the Food Safety Act 1990 and the directive. Most recently, local authority organisations have been consulted about the statistics on food law enforcement that the Government will collect from local authorities in order to comply with the directive.

Upland Sheep Farmers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to improve the level of incomes among upland sheep farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Sheep farmers in the less favoured areas (LFA) already benefit from a wide range of support measures, including particularly hill livestock compensatory allowances and sheep annual premium. Next year they will benefit additionally from the special 4 ECU per ewe supplement to be paid to producers in the LFA, and from the devaluation of the green pound effective from 7 January 1991.

Bottled Water (Labelling)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from Caithness Spring Water Company Ltd. about the labelling of bottled water; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have received representations about the need to avoid confusion between the labelling of natural mineral waters and other bottled waters. The views of Caithness Spring Water Company Limited will be taken into account when drawing up regulations on drinking water in containers and in forthcoming discussions on the revised Council directive on the exploitation and marketing of natural mineral waters.

Plaice Quota

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to consult the Lowestoft Fishing Vessel Owners Association along with other interested parties on all North sea fisheries matters and in particular plaice swaps.

Mr. Curry: The more fragmented the representation of the fishing industry the more difficult it is for the industry to give effective expression to its views on matters about which it is consulted. Moreover, for practical reasons, Fisheries Departments are unable to consult every organisation and individual on every point of fisheries policy. The principal channels of consultation with the fishing industry are therefore through the primary representative organisations. However, the Lowestoft Fishing Vessel Owners Association are provided with copies of all consultation papers on general fisheries policy matters and are able to attend the monthly area IV and VI meetings at which North sea non-sector fisheries matters are discussed. Moreover, we recognise that the association has a major interest in North sea plaice and, if it seemed that a proposed quota swap might lead to restrictions having to be imposed on their members fishing, we would consult the association.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect of the year by year conceding of United Kingdom plaice quota to European competitors on the plaice fishermen of Lowestoft.

Mr. Curry: Quota exchanges between member states are always entered into without prejudice to the distribution of quotas in future years.

Tuberculosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he estimates the cost-effectiveness of the tuberculosis eradication scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: An economic assessment of badger control policy was undertaken as part of the Dunnet review and was published in 1987 as Government economic service working paper No. 96. It is too early to make such an assessment of policy in relation to deer and action in relation to cattle is dictated by the need to maintain this country's officially tuberculosis-free status under Community rules.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the suckler cow premium for the current year will be paid.

Mr. Curry: Payments of suckler cow premium cannot be made until a claim has been received and checked, and the rate of premium has been determined. This year, the rate of premium in the less favoured areas was increased to the maximum possible. The necessary implementation arrangements were announced on 12 November. Payments have now begun and will be completed as quickly as possible.

Tuberculosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the strategy and methods of the control of tuberculosis in respect of (a) cattle and (b) badgers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Over the years there has been a significant reduction in the incidence of tuberculosis in cattle. This has been achieved by tuberculin testing the national herd and monitoring slaughterhouses, knackers yards and hunt kennels. Most of the country is now virtually free from the disease, although it is proving more difficult in the south west because of infection in the local badger population. Badger control is based upon the interim strategy recommended by Professor Dunnet. Thought is now being given by the Ministry and the consultative panel on badgers and tuberculosis as to how the live test developed for use in badgers can best be deployed in any revised strategy.

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Monetary System

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish the prediction on the Treasury models of the effect on output and employment in manufacturing industry and in the rest of the economy over the next three years of tying the pound sterling to the Deutschmark at a central rate of 2·95 dollars.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Forecasts of total output and manufacturing output up to 1991 can be found in the autumn statement. We have not published forecasts beyond that, nor do we publish forecasts of employment.

Trusts and Settlements

Mr. Eadie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the findings of the review he authorised the Inland Revenue to set up in 1988 to look into the taxation of trusts and settlements as a whole.

Mr. Maude: I am considering the next steps.

Deeds of Covenant

Mr. Eadie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he proposes to bring forward proposals to amend the provisions of the Finance Act 1988 which abolished tax relief for non-charitable deeds of covenant with a view to taking into consideration long-stay disabled relatives who require support.

Mr. Maude: I have no plans to do so.

THE ARTS

Christmas Arts Festivals

33. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he has any plans to attend any specifically Christmas arts festivals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I have no plans to do so at present.

East Midlands

34. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister for the Arts what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the arts from the east midlands; and if he will make a statement.

36. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last met representatives of East Midlands Arts to discuss funding for the arts in the east midlands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I met the chairman of East Midlands Arts on 26 September, along with the chairmen of the other regional arts associations, to discuss the proposals for further changes in the structure of the new regional arts boards that I had announced on 24 September.

Enhancement Fund

35. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister for the Arts what criteria he will employ when distributing his new enhancement fund.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my earlier reply to the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Mrs. Golding).

Business Sponsorship

37. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Minister for the Arts how much has been raised to date under the business sponsorship incentive scheme.

Mr. Mellor: Since its inception in October 1984, the business sponsorship incentive scheme has raised over £37 million new money for the arts. Almost £25·5 million has come from business sponsors, to which the Government have added £12·28 million in awards. This is a tremendous achievement.

Nottingham

38. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he next plans to visit Nottingham to review the extent of artistic and cultural facilities.

Mr. Mellor: I had great pleasure in visiting the excellent Nottingham Playhouse last month. I plan to travel widely in coming months to visit arts organisations around t country and I look forward to a further visit Nottingham.

British Library

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Minister for the Arts what the total number of subscriptions to scientific periodic that has been suspended by the British Library; and if will give a breakdown showing the number suspended a the amount of money saved thereby in each major subj area.

Mr. Mellor: The British Library has suspend subscriptions to a total of 200 scientific periodicals. breakdown by subject area and the savings expected a

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Anti-Jewish Literature

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General how many proceedings have been initiated by the Crown prosecution service in respect of the publishers and distributors of anti-Jewish literature from 1987 until the present; and what was the outcome in each case.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. and learned Gentleman to the answer I gave on 13 November, at column 88.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants for political asylum in the United Kingdom are currently awaiting a decision; and how many of these have been waiting for over 12 months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is provisionally estimated that about 27,800 asylum applications were awaiting a decision in the United Kingdom at 30 September 1990, of which about 8,400 had been outstanding for 12 months or more. However these figures are maxima which overstate the position, because of under-recording of decisions made earlier.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Dublin convention determining the state responsibility for examining applications for asylum lodged in one of the member states of the European Community will be ratified in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The convention determining the state responsible for examining applications for asylum was signed in Dublin in June by 11 members of the European Community. The ratification process must await a decision by the 12th member, Denmark, on whether to sign the convention.

Postal Voting

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to introduce the changes regarding postal voting controls in the Representation of the People Act 1990.

Mrs. Rumbold: We propose as soon as possible to make a commencement order to bring the Representation of the People Act 1990 into force. In order for the Act to take effect, it will also be necessary to make some minor amendments to the Representation of the People Regulations 1986 and the European Parliamentary Elections Regulations 1986 and to make an Order in Council in respect of local elections in Northern Ireland.

Child Abuse

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the number of successful prosecutions for child abuse in Wales for each of the last five years.

Mr. John Patten: The available information is given in the table. It is possible from the information held centrally to identify only offences where the victim is by definition aged under 16: children may also have been the victims of other offences, such as murder, that are not defined by reference to the victim's age.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now implement article 24 of European Community directive 86/609/EC to render illegal the use of former track greyhounds in laboratory experiments.

Mrs. Rumbold: At the moment, the only type of dog bred on any scale for scientific procedures is the beagle. In the absence of other types of purpose-bred dogs for use in research, it will remain necessary to grant some exemptions, all of which have to be fully justified scientifically, to the requirement in section 10(3) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 that only those dogs specially bred at and obtained from designated sources may be used in scientific procedures.

Care is, however, taken to ensure that greyhounds obtained from non-designated sources are neither pets nor ex-racing greyhounds which have been supplied to charitable bodies for rehoming as pets.

Commonwealth Citizens (Voting Rights)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those Commonwealth countries the citizens of which, resident in the United Kingdom, are eligible to vote in United Kingdom elections.

Mrs. Rumbold: Citizens of all Commonwealth countries, who are resident in the United Kingdom and who are not otherwise disqualified, are eligible to register as electors and vote at elections here.

Anti-Jewish Literature

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police investigations in respect of anti-Jewish literature are currently under way; and in what month and year each publication was referred to the police.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information about current investigations is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for the current year, the number of (a) applications for the renewal of and (b) applications for a new shotgun certificate made to the North Wales police, and indicate in each case the number of applications which were not dealt with and certificates issued after (i) 28 days and (ii) three months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In the North Wales police force area in 1989 there were 6,697 applications for the renewal of shotgun certificates and 1,068 applications for the granting of new shotgun certificates. Figures for 1990 are not yet available. No information is available centrally on the time taken to deal with these applications.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of S
Home Department if he will call for a report fro constable for north Wales, as to the reasons fo

Hazardous Substances

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he remains satisfied with the safety arrangements in place for the road transport of hydrobromic acid.

Mr. Chope: I am satisfied that the regulations for the road transport of dangerous substances, including hydrobromic acid, are adequate.

Northern Line

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current status of the project to upgrade the Northern line on London underground; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that London Underground is working up a scheme for the modernisation of the Northern line. I await its proposals.

A30 (Launceston)

Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in his review to improve motorists' safety at the Kennards House junction on the A30 trunk road at Launceston.

Mr. Chope: I have agreed that lighting should be installed at this junction. Some changes to road markings are also to be made to help drivers negotiate the junction.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Procedures

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the dates and circumstances of each occasion when he or a predecessor has exercised his powers in part XV, section 276, of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971; and in each case how much compensation was paid.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In the period 1955 to 1973 there were 18 cases in which my right hon. Friend's predecessors used their default powers to revoke local authority planning permissions. There have been no cases subsequently. The available details are as follows:

Year and details

Orpington Urban District Council: residential development at Lynwood Estate, Orpington.
Chislehurst and Sidcup Urban District Council: residential development between Chislehurst and Sidcup.

1956

Section 276 of the 1971 Act has now been consolidated in sections 100 and 104 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

Catalytic Converters

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government have any plans to provide fiscal incentives to car owners to fit catalytic converters.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Taxation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Toxic Chemicals (Dumping)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the progress of the investigations into the illegal dumping of 40 barrels of toxic chemicals in Dunday; and what measures are being taken to prevent such occurrences in the future.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The investigation of this incident is a matter for Avon county council as waste disposal authority for the area in which it occurred. HM inspectorate of pollution is continuing to monitor developments and is prepared to offer advice on arrangements for analysis or safe disposal should such advice be required.

The Environmental Protection Act 1990, which received Royal Assent on 1 November, includes a duty of care to be imposed on all holders of waste to ensure that it is not disposed of or managed illegally. The Act also extends the penalties for the illegal disposal of waste. The maximum fine on summary conviction will be £20,000, and prison terms will be introduced for all offences. On conviction on indictment fines are unlimited and, where special waste is involved, a maximum prison sentence of five years is possible.

River Pollution

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider introducing measures to give the National Rivers Authority power to prevent pollution from abandoned mineworkings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority has powers under section 115 of the Water Act 1989 to carry out works and operations for the purpose of preventing pollution of controlled waters, to take remedial action where pollution has already occurred and to recover the costs of taking such action. These general powers are applicable to abandoned mineworkings. In such cases, the authority may seek to recover costs from any person who caused pollution.

Homelessness

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of homeless people who will be sleeping rough this Christmas.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 26 November 1990]: We do not make forecasts of the number of people who may be sleeping rough at any point in the future. We have recently announced an increase of £80 million in our package of measures to help such people.

Housing Corporation

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the Housing Corporation's approved development programme allocation on current projections by regions in terms of (a) original projected expenditure per region, (b) current projected expenditure per region, (c) original planned number of units for rent and (d) current projected number of units for rent.

Mr. Key [holding answer 26 November 1990]: This is a matter for the Housing Corporation. I have therefore asked the corporation to respond to the hon. Member direct.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Higher Education

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration is being given by his Department to making donations to higher education from industry tax deductible.

Mr. Maude: The tax system already provides incentives to encourage business donations to higher education. Corporation tax relief is available for trade-related company donations for technical education and for cash payments by way of covenants and the gift aid scheme to educational establishments that are charities.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delay in the development of the new airport at Hong Kong, and when it is now expected to be completed.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There has been no delay. The Hong Kong Government plan to have the first runway in operation by early 1997.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the number of Vietnamese children under the age of 14 year being held in detention centres in Hong K November.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: On 20 November there children under the age of 14 being held in deter in Hong Kong.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Commonwealth Affairs what was the Vietnamese (a) men and (b) women who wer in detention centres in Hong Kong on 20 No

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: On 20 November there men and 13,976 women being held in detentio Hong Kong.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State and Commonwealth Affairs what are the imp the 1995 extension conference of the non-p treaty of the lack of a final document from review conference.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The lack of a final d not prevent the review conference from en continuing importance of the non-proliferati world security. We hope that the conference take a similarly positive line.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a the fourth review conference of the non- treaty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The NPT review co conducted in a positive atmosphere; ther support for the treaty's objectives and ag reached on most issues. It is to be regretted th on a final document was blocked by one de the conference nevertheless achieved a full r operation of the treaty and demonstrated it importance as a cornerstone of world securit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ind commitments were made to any of th governmental organisations invited to the c briefing referred to in his answer of 31 O Official Report, column 564, to the hon. Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) to clarify in wr not resolved during the meeting of 23 Octob

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As the hon. Ge recognised, the meeting was off the record.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set ou why the United Kingdom Government c inappropriate for preparatory meetings f nuclear non-proliferation treaty to begin in alternative proposals tabled by the th non-proliferation depository powers includi Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The preparatory co with administrative arrangements for the r ence, and we see no need for it to meet as early the alternative proposal by the depository powers, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 18 October, at column 901.

Ukraine

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been received from the Government of the Soviet Republic of the Ukraine concerning the return of a barrel of gold deposited with the Bank of England in the early 18th century; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of participation in negotiations leading to a comprehensive test ban treaty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A comprehensive test ban remains a long term goal to which progress will be made only by a step-by-step approach. This must take account of technical advances in verification as well as progress elsewhere in arms control and the attitudes of other states.

Somalia

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the reasons for the present closure of the British embassy in Mogadishu, Somalia, until 11 December; if he will state for what period from 11 December the embassy will be reopened, and with what services; and if he will describe the arrangements he proposes to make, for persons currently in Somalia who have been granted visas to enter the United Kingdom but are unable to collect them because of the present closure of the embassy, to enable such persons to travel to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The British embassy in Mogadishu is not closed. All normal services except visas are available. As in many small missions, the consul is the only trained entry clearance officer. During his leave from 21 November to 10 December the issuance of visas is temporarily suspended. The ambassador will assist urgent visitors.

Romania

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will review the Government's policy on aid to Romania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We frequently review our policy on aid to Romania and shall continue to do so in accordance with developments in that country.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new initiatives he intends to take to facilitate cultural exchanges between the United Kingdom and Romania.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have agreed with the Romanian Government to have negotiations in Bucharest in February to determine the shape and content of a new cultural exchange programme.

The Gulf (Hostages)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a list of names of those being held hostage in Iraq and Kuwait; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am arranging for a list of all those detained in Iraq and Kuwait to be placed in the Library.

Geneva Conventions

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the status of, and the Government's policy in respect of ratification of (a) the protocol additional to the Geneva conventions of 12 August 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of international armed conflicts, protocol 1, and (b) the protocol additional to the Geneva conventions of 12 August 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of non-international armed conflicts, protocol 2.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Currently, 97 states are party to additional protocol 1 of the 1949 Geneva conventions. Eighty-seven states are party to additional protocol 2. We signed both additional protocols in 1977, but have yet to ratify them. We hope to come to a decision soon.

ENERGY

Bilsthorpe Power Station

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what allowance he will make for the non-fossil fuel levy in assessing the financial go-ahead for the Bilsthorpe power station;

(2) what assessment he has made of the economic potential of the Bilsthorpe coal-fired advanced technology power station.

Mr. Baldry: It is for the partners involved in the Bilsthorpe project to assess its economic potential, taking into account the requirement of the Electricity Act 1989 as regards the fossil fuel levy.

British Gas

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations he has had with British Gas regarding the cost of further computer runs to detect multiple share applications for British Gas.

Mr. Wakeham: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has had from the Metropolitan police for further computer runs to detect multiple share applications for British Gas.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department is in discussion with the Crown prosecution service and the police about the investigation and possible prosecution of multiple applications, both for British Gas and the forthcoming regional electricity company share offers.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what additional resources are to be provided to stimulate energy conservation and saving; and if he will list the particular steps which are to be taken or confirmed in 1991.

Mr. Baldry: The Energy Efficiency Office budget will be substantially increased, to £42 million for 1991-92. The EEO will continue to promote a range of programmes designed to encourage the adoption of cost-effective energy efficiency measures.

From January 1991, the new home energy efficiency scheme, replacing the community insulation programme, will offer grants towards the cost of basic energy efficiency measures in low-income households.

During 1991, the EEO will be taking forward the initiatives announced in the White Paper on the environment "This Common Inheritance", Cm. 1200, which include: developing proposals for a new scheme of project management assistance for implementation of energy efficiency projects; considering with the lighting industry how to overcome barriers to the uptake of high-efficiency lighting; pursuing appliance labelling and minimum standards with our own appliance industry and in the EC.

The ministerial committee on energy efficiency, chaired by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy, will maintain the momentum for energy efficiency improvements; monitor the Government's energy efficiency programmes and the White Paper initiatives, and assess the need for further action.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps the Government have taken to encourage regional electricity companies to promote energy conservation after privatisation.

Mr. Baldry: Condition 22 of the supply licences issued to the regional electricity companies imposes an obligation on them to provide information and advice on energy efficiency and to provide individual codes of practice to the Director of the Office of Electricity Regulation—OFFER—setting out their proposals for doing this. Negotiations are continuing between the regional electricity companies and OFFER on the content of the codes.

Domestic Electricity Appliances

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what response has been offered to the European Community proposals to set out energy survey standards for domestic electricity appliances; and to what extent this response fulfils the aspirations and plans which Her Majesty's Government put forward at the recent world climate conference in Geneva.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if the Government have any plans to implement legislation requiring energy labelling on electrical goods to enable consumers to be aware of the relative amounts of energy different brands of appliances consume;

(2) if the Government have any plans to introduce legislation requiring minimum energy efficiency standards for all new domestic appliances as part of the programme to combat global warming.

Mr. Baldry: As set out in chapter 5 and annex C of the White Paper on the environment "This Common Inheritance"—Cm 1200—energy efficiency is a part of the Government's strategy to reduce gas emissions.

On appliances, we are pressing for ag energy efficiency labelling and standards European Community. Our own plans for labelling scheme which will lead to improv were outlined at a consultative workshop European Commission earlier this month. W effective voluntary measures can make unnecessary and bring about far swifter imp energy efficiency.

Coal Prices

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of Stat what legal advice was received in relation to t Mr. Heathcote, head of coal division, to Sa Jones, solicitor to the South Wales S Association, dated 22 November, concernin improved coal prices from National Power; place a copy of that letter in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: The letter was drafted in cons representatives, including legal advisers, Power and British Coal. Its contents are confi parties concerned.

Oil and Gas Licences

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary Energy what is his policy on farm-in proposa gas exploration and production licences; a make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: Transfers of interest i licences, which are commonly known as commercial transactions and, as such, the are initially a matter for the companies con

WALES

Wild Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what annual expenditure is incurred by his Department in controlling the numbers of the wild fox population in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: None. Control of foxes is a matter for individual landowners.

Supply Teachers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many teaching positions are currently filled by supply teachers in (a) the primary sector and (b) the secondary sector in Wales according to each local education authority area; and how many positions have been filled by supply teachers in each of the last five years.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The numbers of teachers employed in maintained primary and secondary schools to provide temporary cover for absent teachers on an occasional or short-notice basis are shown in the tables:

A487

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date was the draft compulsory purchase order first drawn up to enable the construction of a pavement between Caernarfon and Bontnewydd on the A487 trunk road; on what date an objection was received by the Welsh Office; and what steps have been taken subsequently by his Department to try to resolve this matter.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have nothing to add to the letter I sent the hon. Gentleman on 19 November in reply to his letter of 2 November.

Roads

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the performance of the roads division of the Welsh Office.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Since 1979, a total of 156 miles of new motorway and trunk roads have been completed, and total expenditure of over £1·2 billion incurred on such roads. This reflects the importance which the Government place on improving and maintaining the road network in Wales.

Planning Procedures

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that, in determining planning applications which come on appeal to the Welsh Office, sufficient consideration is given to the wishes of the local community as expressed by the district council; if he will make it his policy that planning appeals should be upheld only if there is a very strong case either on a point of law or on a failure to implement agreed planning strategy at a local level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: All representations received in respect of a planning appeal are taken into account by my right hon. Friend and his inspectors. The weight given to the views of a district council will depend on the circumstances of the case.

My right hon. Friend's policy is that each appeal is considered on its merits against the relevant planning policies. He considers that the policy suggestions in the question would be contrary to the aims of the planning legislation.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to increase the staffing levels of the National Rivers Authority Welsh region.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the National Rivers Authority.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from business interests in Wales on Britain's entry into the exchange rate mechanism and how many indicated (a) that the exchange rate was too high against the deutschmark and (b) that the exchange rate was too low against the deutschmark.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

HIV

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report, for the latest available date, the number of children (a) who are infected with the HIV virus, (b) who are suffering from AIDS and (c) who have died from AIDS.

Mr. Grist: For reasons of confidentiality and in line with the AIDS (Control) Act, numbers betwen one and nine inclusive are given as "less than 10". In each of the three categories cited the number is less than 10.

University Hospital of Wales

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff are currently in post at the University hospital of Wales paediatric cardiac surgery unit.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not available centrally.

Health Authorities (Savings)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the net projected savings made by health authorities in Wales in the current financial year.

Mr. Grist: The most recent estimates provided by health authorities suggest that the level of savings which they will collectively achieve from their cash-releasing cost improvement programmes this year will be £8·5 million. This is equivalent to 0·9 per cent. of their recurrent revenue allocations notified at the start of 1990-91 and is slightly below the minimum target of 1·1 per cent. of recurrent revenue resources which has been set for cash-releasing cost improvement savings this year. While authorities may count non-recurrent cost improvements such as capital receipts against this target, those doing so will have the recurrent shortfall added to the minimum target for cost improvement savings to be set for 1991-92.

Health Authorities (Buildings)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to enable health authorities to improve their defective buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Responsibility for the management and maintenance of the NHS estate in Wales is delegated to district health authorities. They are expected to maintain their buildings to an acceptable standard and to spend a minimum of 7·5 per cent. of their revenue and capital allocations on the maintenance of assets, including buildings.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many health authority buildings still in use were built (a) 50 years and (b) 100 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not available centrally.

School Buildings

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to bring defective school buildings up to standard; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Local education authorities are responsible for the condition of school buildings in their areas. Since 1985-86, central Government have increased by 60 per cent. the capital resources notionally made available to local education authorities for the provision of educational buildings and for their capital maintenance.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools in Wales in each local education authority were built before 1903; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Details of the ages of school buildings are not held centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital trust applications he has received in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: None, although my right hon. Friend is currently considering the "expression of interest" submitted by Pembrokeshire district health authority for NHS trust status.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what ways he is actively pursuing the interest of Pembrokeshire health authority in becoming a national health service trust.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend is currently considering the "expression of interest", together with further information which has been recently received from the authority.

General Practitioners

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioner budget statu applications he has received in Wales; and if he will mak a statement.

Mr. Grist: Applications for recognition as fund-holding practice from 1 April 1991 were required t be made by 1 November. Eight applications were receive from practices in Wales although one of these has sinc withdrawn. The seven practices have been authorised t undertake the preparatory work. Formal offers of practic funds will be made early next year.

Hospitals

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital beds have been lost in Wales since 1979.

Mr. Grist: Between the calendar year 1979 and the financial year 1989-90 the number of average daily available beds fell by 3,600. Over the same period the number of in-patients treated rose by 125,800—+36 per cent.—and the number of day cases rose by 54,800—+176 per cent.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital wards are proposed for closure in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The information held centrally relates only to proposed closures which are at present the subject of formal consultation. On this basis, and including those cases where consultation has ended but a final decision has yet to be made, 52 hospital wards are subject to closure proposals. Of these, 25 are linked to the planned development of a new district general hospital for the people of Taff-Ely and the Rhondda.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospitals have closed since 1980.

Mr. Grist: Since 1 January 1980 the number of hospitals that have closed, and are still closed, is 21. However, during the same period eight hospitals, including five district general hospitals, have opened.

Health Authorities

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings he has had with the health authorities of Wales to discuss their financial difficulties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend and I discussed the financial difficulties of Gwynedd health authority and its plans for resolving them with the chairman and general manager of the authority on 1 August. In addition, our officials have undertaken a series of annual review meetings with all authorities in recent months at which their financial positions have been reviewed. Health authorities have a statutory duty to contain expenditure within their notified cash resources, and we are content that they will do so.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, for each recommendation made by the Welsh Affairs Committee in its first report of Session 1989-90 on toxic waste disposal in Wales, he will state (a) the action taken by his Department so far and (b) the action proposed by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The Government's response to the recommendations was set out in Cm. 1147—my right hon. Friend's reply of 18 July refers to it. Provisions as indicated have been embodied in the Environmental Protection Act.

Community Charge Appeals

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the statutory community charge appeal documents authorised or prepared in the Welsh language and indicate the legislative base for the production of such documents.

Mr. David Hunt: I have not prescribed community charge appeal documents in either English or Welsh. Welsh language forms for use in connection with the community charge are prescribed in the Community Charges and Non-Domestic Rating (Demand Notices) (Wales) Regulations 1990, and in the Personal Community Charge (Students) Regulations 1989, copies of which are in the Library. In each case the powers relied upon include those provided by section 2(2) of the Welsh Language Act 1967.

M4

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the traffic counts for (a) cars and (b) lorries on the M4 from (i) Newhouse roundabout to the Coldra and (ii) from the Coldra to Tredegar park roundabout in each of the past 10 years.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Figures are provided for the sections from Newhouse to Magor and Caerleon to Malpas. Only total vehicle counts are available for the 10-year period as shown in the following table. Manual classified counts are carried out less frequently and the split between cars and all classes of goods vehicles is shown where available.

Poultry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing for each county of England and Wales the number of salmonella enteritidis PT4 outbreaks among poultry, the number of birds slaughtered and the compensation paid, in 1990 to date.

Mr. Maclean: Information in the form requested is not readily available. However a total of 49 flocks infected with salmonella enteritidis comprising 507,733 birds have so far been compulsorily slaughtered in 1990 at a cost in compensation of £551,509.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) under what circumstances antibiotic treatment of salmonella in poultry is now allowed; and if he will make a statement on the use of competitive exclusion products;

(2) whether he intends to amend his salmonella control regulations in respect of poultry; if he will introduce an antibiotic treatment alternative for laying flocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Flocks of pullets—layer replacem —which are infected with salmonella enteritidis salmonella typhimurium are permitted in cer circumstances to be treated with antibiotics an competitive exclusion product as an alternative slaughter. These arrangements are being conducted trial basis at present to determine the effectiveness o treatment. The possibility of further adaptation of salmonella control policy is being kept under review

Pigs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agricul Fisheries and Food when he received a copy of Humane Slaughter Association report on the culling o breeding stock; what response he will be making t recommendations; and if he proposes any conseq legislative change.

Mr. Maclean: A copy of this report has just received and we will be considering it carefully.

Unfit Meat

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many inquiries his Department is currently undertaking following the sale of unfit meat to butchers and supermarkets.

Mr. Maclean: Although MAFF veterinary officers can and do work closely with local authorities in this area, enforcement of legislation on unfit meat is the local authorities' responsibility and questions on numbers of inquiries must therefore be addressed to them. I am, nevertheless, aware that there is concern over allegations of illegal trade in unfit meat and we have instituted a full review of the existing controls to see if any improvements can be made, with particular attention to collection of casualty stock from farms.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has concerning the market value of beef cattle coming from farms where bovine spongiform encephalopathy has been confirmed.

Mr. Curry: None.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's latest forecast for the future spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement on the level of reporting of BSE cases.

Mr. Maclean: At present, about 350 suspect cases of BSE are being reported each week. The future course of the disease cannot be predicted precisely, but an assessment of the latest epidemiological evidence suggests that the number of cases will continue to rise until some time in 1992, after which, provided there is no direct cattle-to-cattle transmission, it will start to fall. The expected increase does not represent continued spread of the disease, but is a result of the exposure of cattle to the agent through the consumption of ruminant-based protein rations prior to the imposition of the feed ban in July 1988 and the long incubation period before clinical disease manifests itself.

Since BSE was made a notifiable disease in June 1988 the number of suspected cases arising each week has increased fairly steadily. Within this overall upward trend, a fairly consistent pattern of reporting has become apparent with numbers increasing in spring and autumn. Close surveillance at markets and abattoirs has not revealed any deliberate attempts to evade the legal requirement to report suspect cases of BSE.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of confirmed cases of BSE by county in the months (a) 17 July, (b) 17 August, (c) 17 September, (d) 17 October and (e) 17 November.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 21 November 1990]: The number of cases confirmed on a monthly basis simply reflects the number of positive findings of BSE recorded as a result of laboratory investigation in the period concerned. As processing in the laboratory can take several weeks, these figures do not therefore accurately reflect developments in the number of new cases arising or reported.

The information for Great Britain is as follows:

Fungicides

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the fungicide malachite green has a product licence issued by his Department.

Mr. Maclean: Eight malachite green products have been licensed under the Medicines Act 1968 solely for treatment of aquarium fish.

Cocoa

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about the pesticides, herbicides and fungicides used on cocoa imported to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The results of monitoring for pesticide residues in cocoa undertaken by the food industry are made available to the Government's working party on pesticide residues. Residues of organochlorine pestic have been detected but at very low levels which presen risk to consumers and are declining. The Internati Cocoa Association is compiling a list of active ingredi used in producing countries to facilitate monitoring.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

European Parliamentary Conference

Mr. Page: To ask the Lord President of the Council if any changes have been made to the delegation attending the European parliamentary conference in Rome on 27 to 30 November.

Mr. MacGregor: The delegation will now include Mr. Patrick Nicholls. Dr. Norman Godman, Sir Jim Spicer and Lord Aldington will not attend.

Slot Machines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to ensure all slot machines in the Palace of Westminster are adapted to take the new 5p piece before the demonetisation of its predecessor on 31 December.

Mr. MacGregor: The coin-operated payphones, the cigarette machines, and the machines dispensing books of postage stamps accept only coins of a larger denomination than 5p. The food and drink vending machines in the Norman Shaw South building already accept both types of 5p coin. All other vending machines will be converted to accept the new 5p piece before the end of the year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Refreshment Department

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will make available in the Library the Touche Ross report on the Refreshment Department.

Mr. Beith: The Greene Bellfield-Smith division of Touche Ross management consultants has recently completed its review of the management structure of the Refreshment Department, which was announced in paragraph 31 of the Commission's annual report for 1989-90—HC 572. A copy of the consultants' report will be placed in the Library of the House today. The Commission has not yet considered the report.

Ibbs Report

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, when the Ibbs report on the management of House of Commons services will be published.

Mr. Beith: The report of the team led by Sir Robin Ibbs, on "House of Commons Services", will be published tomorrow morning as House of Commons paper 38.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Angola

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to provide substantial extra aid for the United Nations special relief programme for Angola to meet basic survival needs.

Mrs. Chalker: The details of the special relief programme for Angola are under urgent study, together with requests from several British non-governmental organisations which are co-operating with the United Nations. In advance of a response to the Secretary-General's appeal, we have already agreed to contribute towards the cost of a team of United Nations co-ordinators to assist with implementation of the programme.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Expo 92, Seville

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the estimated completion date for the British pavilion building at Expo 92 in Seville.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 26 November 1990]: The estimated completion date for the British pavilion building at Expo 92 in Seville is August 1991.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what British firms have offered or guaranteed sponsorship of the British pavilion at Expo 92 in Seville; how much money has been offered or guaranteed in each case; and whether any non-United Kingdom European Community companies have made similar offers or guarantees of sponsorship.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 26 November 1990]: The table lists the British firms that have offered or guaranteed sponsorship of the British pavilion at Expo 92 and the value of each company's contribution, where we have permission to disclose it. Sponsorship is often a combination of cash and the supply of goods or services and in a number of instances is subject to the normal conventions of commercial confidentiality. No non-United Kingdom European Community company has made a similar offer or guarantee of sponsorship.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's budget for Expo 92 at Seville, both for present and planned current and capital spending, by area.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 26 November 1990]: My Department's budget for Expo 92 covering both current and capital expenditure is £25 million.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the original estimated cost of the British pavilion planned for Expo 92; what is the current estimated cost, and what effect on costs any design changes have had.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 26 November 1990]: The original estimated cost for the British pavilion was £14 million. Development of the design has not led to any change in that estimate.

Salary Placements

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement regarding details of any guidance issued by the Department to those involved in determining salary placements as to the circumstances under which discretion may be exercised.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland determines the salaries of teachers in Northern Ireland's grant-aided schools. Under the teachers' salaries regulations, incremental credit is awarded to a newly appointed teacher in respect of previous experience which the Department considers to be of value to him in the performance of his duty.

In exercising this discretion, the Department awards the credit for previous experience which has relevance to service as a teacher and is of equivalent professional standard to teaching.

Elderly People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to introduce a new code of practice for day and domiciliary care for elderly people.

Mr. Dorrell: There are no plans, at present, to publish such a code of practice. The need for central guidance will be considered as part of the development of the new community care arrangements.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial resources will be made available to support the recommendations of the departmental working party on the hours worked by junior doctors.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am currently chairing a ministerial group on junior doctors' hours. The group, representing all key parties, aims to reach broad agreement in principle on specific changes before the end of the year. Resource implications are being discussed in the context of that agreement.

Disabled People

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the local authority associations which have responded to his letter inviting costings estimates on sections 1 to 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will list those which gave detailed costings;

Neurosciences (Transfer)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secreta
Health if he will make a statement on th between the increase in the cost of neurosciences from the Brook hospital to the King's and Maudsley hospitals complex, the calculation involving the original cost of £27 million announced on 11 April 1989 by the then Minister of State and the present cost estimated at £50 million or more.

Mr. Dorrell: When the scheme was first submitted to the Department for approval in 1987 the cost at national average building rates was estimated to be £27 million. This figure subsisted throughout the approval in principle stage for comparative purposes.

In April 1989 the estimated costs were £42·5 million taking account of the rise in national building costs since 1987 and the additional costs of building in London.

The most recent estimate is that the total cost, taking full account of inflation since 1989 and the additional costs of building in London, has risen to £50·5 million.

Residential Care

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of pensioners in Durham county and the United Kingdom live in sheltered housing and residential care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available in the form requested.

In the local authority of Durham at 31 March 1989, 2·6 per cent. of the population aged 65 and over were in residential care accommodation, compared with 3·1 per cent. in England as a whole.

Local authorities in England report annually the numbers of sheltered dwellings in their areas to the Department of the Environment. The latest figures, for April 1990, are available in the Library. I understand that there are no estimates of the proportion of pensioners who live in sheltered dwellings.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private registered homes, voluntary registered homes, and local authority homes for the elderly there were in (a) Durham county and (b) the United Kingdom in 1980, 1985 and for the latest available year; how many places these provided and how many residents there were in each of these years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information available is given in the table. Data refer to homes catering primarily for people who are elderly or younger people who are physically handicapped. Data for these two groups were not collected separately for all of the years requested.

Information relating to Scotland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and information for Northern Ireland and Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and for Wales.

Influenza Vaccine

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that general medical practitioners are aware that extra influenza vaccine has been made available to fulfil all needs of at risk patients.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has obtained enough influenza vaccine to meet the demand from general practitioners; and what arrangements are being made to publicise the availability of this vaccine.

Mr. Dorrell: A number of steps have been taken to ensure an adequate supply of influenza vaccine. Over 3,600,000 doses of vaccine were made available this autumn. The Department has also arranged for the manufacture of a further 1 million doses which will be available from this week, providing a total supply of 45 per cent. more than last year.

The Department wrote to all family health services Authority general managers on 22 November informing them of the arrangements made to provide the further 1 million doses, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the scheme to provide facilities for the relocation of mentally handicapped people in the community in the Normanton constituency, described in the Official Report, 16 October, column 1039.

Mr. Dorrell: The scheme in question is the Wakefield and Pontefract case management scheme. I suggest the hon. Member contacts Sir Bryan Askew, the chairman of the Yorkshire regional health authority, for further details.

Smoked Salmon

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to protect the trade in postal orders for smoked salmon which may be affected by the new regulations in the food Bill.

Mr. Dorrell: The Food Hygiene (Amendment) Regulations 1990 will require certain foods to be kept chilled unless the processing of the food or the method of packaging can be shown to prevent the growth of pathogenic micro-organisms at ambient temperature. Smoked fish is one of the relevant foods. Research is taking place to see how the industry can best adapt to the new regulations.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is currently being undertaken into the effect on human health of those exposed to organo-phosphorus sheep dips.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive's south-west region is conducting a regional project on the risk from organo-phosphorus sheep dip. The study aims to develop information about the uptake of organo-phosphorus and possibly other solvents and phenols by operators and bystanders in the sheep-dipping season and relate this information to symptoms reported in the farming community.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current level of income support benefits received by (a) a single householder aged under 25 years, (b) a single householder with disabilities aged under 25 years, (c) a pensioner couple, (d) a pensioner couple with disabilities and (e) an unemployed man with dependent wife and two children aged five and 11 years; and in each case what would they have received if the pre-April 1988 system of supplementary benefits were still operating.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The question is not sufficiently specific concerning the circumstances of each beneficiary to enable an assessment to be made of what benefit they might have been entitled to under the old scheme. In addition, it would not be possible to calculate the likely entitlement of these individuals today, had the old scheme stayed in place, since it is not possible to say how the scheme would have evolved in response to changing circumstances.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the effect on the future number of income support claimants of the proposal to reduce the definition of full-time work from 24 hours to 16 hours and (b) the number of existing claimants who would lose entitlement if there were no transitional protection; and, in each case, if he will subdivide the figures into the childless, two-parent families and one-parent families.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Many families who are working part time will be better off as a result of the reduction in the remunerative work from 24 hours to 1 they will become entitled to family cred who are currently claiming income supp encouraged to take up employment, and t from income support to family credit. W protection for those claimants who need change.

The information requested is in the ta

PRIME MINISTER

European Energy Charte

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minis Majesty's Government will actively supp of President Delors and the Netherlands energy charter for the whole of Europe.

The Prime Minister: We have development of this initiative to date and to do so in the future.

Cambodia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Mir letters, cards, messages and phone calls concerning Cambodia since 8 October.

The Prime Minister: I have recei representations concerning Cambodia.

Press Secretary

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime M authority her press secretary issued any media in regard to her leadership ca Conservative and Unionist party.

The Prime Minister: My press secretar my interests as Prime Minister.

EDUCATION AND SCIE

Medical Research Coun

16. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secret Education and Science how much fu provided for the Medical Research Cou year.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Grant in aid to financial year will total £185·7 million.

Grammar Schools

17. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many grammar schools there presently are in England and Wales.

Mr. Fallon: In January 1989 there were 150 grammar schools in the maintained sector in England. The provisional estimate for January 1990 is the same. Welsh schools are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Education Administration Budgets

18. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that children's education is not adversely affected by the size of a local authority's budget for education administration.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have made it clear that we are determined that LEAs should reduce the proportion of resources which they hold back for spending on central bureaucracies and other central services. We shall be publishing a draft circular next month which will consult on proposals to that end.

Bradford CTC

19. Mr. Cryer To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the total amount of grant aid in 1989 and 1990 for the city technology college in Bradford.

Mr. Eggar: Total grant aid to the Bradford CTC was £2·9 million in the 1989-90 financial year for management and capital costs. So far this financial year, costs, including running costs, total £4 million.

Education Policies

20. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received as to the impact of the Government's policies for education on the north and north-west of England.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend receives such representations from time to time.

Student Loans Company

21. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the total cost to date of establishing in Glasgow the headquarters of the Student Loans Company.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Student Loans Company opened for business early in September. The total costs of establishing the student loans scheme to 31 August 1990 were £9·3 million, exclusive of VAT.

Stratford School, Newham

22. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science on what grounds he approved the local management of schools application on behalf of Stratford school, Newham.

Mr. Eggar: I presume that the hon. Member means "grant-maintained status" and not "local management of schools". My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State approved grant-maintained status for Stratford school because he judged that it was capable of providing cost-effectively for pupils aged 11 to 18, and that it was capable of maintaining and improving its performance under new management.

Education Expenditure (London)

23. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the current annual expenditure per child at (a) Sylvan city technology college and (b) local authority secondary schools in London.

Mr. Fallon: Funding for Sylvan city technology college has not yet been finalised, but the provisional annual per capita grant (APG) for 1990-91 is some £2,845 per pupil. The annual school-based expenditure at local authority secondary schools in London in 1988-89, the latest year for which this information is available, was some £2,095 per pupil.

It should be noted that these figures are not comparable in coverage. The local authority figure excludes central local education authority spending on such items as home to school transport and central administration; Sylvan's APG has to cover such items, and also includes an element to cover diseconomies of scale in the early years of operation. Sylvan CTC is also eligible for earmarked annual grant for particular purposes, in addition to its APG but not on a per capita basis.

Teacher Training

24. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received in the current year concerning the funding of in-service teacher training.

Mr. Fallon: The Department receives many letters and other representations about in-service teacher training generally. This year we have had around 40 letters which have raised funding issues. These are in addition to the bids which LEAs have submitted for support for training under next year's grants for education support and training programme.

Nursery Education

25. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to provide access to nursery education for children in every local education authority.

Mr. Eggar: The Government believe in a diversity of provision for the under-fives. Maintained nursery schools and classes are an important element within this diversity and the numbers of pupils attending them have increased by over 40 per cent. during the period of the present Government.

Higher Education

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next proposes to meet the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals to discuss the expansion of higher education in the period 1990 to 2000.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have already met representatives of the CVCP to discuss the recent public expenditure settlement and its provision for the further expansion of higher education. I expect to meet them again soon.

Teachers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students qualified to be teachers left the university of Wales and the teacher training colleges of Wales at the end of each academic year since 1984-85; how many qualified in each of the main subjects; and how many were qualified to teach their subject through the medium of Welsh.

Mr. Fallon: The number of students who left the university of Wales qualified to be teachers at the end of each academic year since 1984-85 is shown in the table. Information is not held centrally on the subjects in which they qualified and how many were qualified to teach through the medium of Welsh.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what figures he has on the total numbers of children referred by their school to see educational psychologists and of those currently waiting to do so.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps are being taken to reduce the waiting lists for the school psychological service for pupils in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The management of its psychology service is a matter for the individual local education authority. The Department provides specific funds to local education authorities in England, under the grants for education support and training, for the training of educational psychologists. In the current year £2·8 million was made available for this purpose.

Education establishments in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the respective Secretaries of State.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to ensure that the shortfall in the take-up of grants for the initial training of educational psychologists goes to training prospective educational psychologists.

Mr. Alan Howarth: In the current year, the grant for educational psychologists under the local education authority training grants scheme was sufficient to meet all local education authorities' needs. The small amount of grant not taken up by LEAs this year has been transferred to meet urgent needs in other national priority areas in the special education field.

Access Funds

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the rules governing the eligibility of a student to apply for money from access funds.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The following students in publicly funded institutions are eligible to apply to their institutions:

undergraduates: all full-time and sandwich home students in higher education at undergraduate level; postgraduates: all full-time home students in higher education studying at levels above first degree; and students in further education: all full-time and sandwich home students in further education aged 19 and over.

It is for each individual institution to draw up criteria for determining which applicants should receive support.

Disabled Students

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools of higher education have wheelchair access; and how many are currently making the transition.

Mr. Alan Howarth: As autonomous bodies, higher education institutions are responsible for determining what provision to make to meet the needs of students with disabilities. This is not monitored centrally.

LEA Capital Funds

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements he makes for ensuring that sufficient capital funds are available to areas of known rapid population expansion for timely planning and construction of schools without prejudice to current and future interest of existing and future populations of the relevant local education authority.

Mr. Fallon: It is for local education authorities to ensure that they provide sufficient school places. In distributing annual capital guidelines to authorities, my right hon. and learned Friend gives priority, after allowing for existing commitments, to their plans for providing new school places in areas of population growth. Priority is then given to plans to remove surplus capacity, to new building projects at colleges of further education and, as resources allow, to programmes to replace or refurbish existing school premises.

Parental Choice

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking to increase parental choice of schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The Government have already taken measures in the Education Reform Act 1988 to remove the artificial restrictions placed by some local education authorities on the number of pupils admitted to particular schools, thus increasing parents' chances of getting a place for their child at the school of their choice. The relevant provisions of the Act were brought into force for secondary schools in August this year. My right hon. and learned Friend is currently considering the timing of their introduction in the primary sector. The Government have also ensured that parents have more information about schools through prospectuses and annual reports. Parental choice is being further extended through the creation of grant-maintained schools and city technology colleges.

Physical Education

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to set up a survey of the state of school sport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The terms of reference of the national curriculum working group on physical education require the group to make recommendations on attainment targets and programmes of study for PE, including competitive sport. The Government are also currently undertaking a review of their policies and priorities for sport, which will include sport in schools. However, my right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to undertake a separate survey on the state of school sport.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to set up a register on the current availability of school playing fields; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: No. The provision of school playing fields is a mattter for local education authorities and others directly responsible for schools.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information his Department has about the current provision of swimming lessons in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Evidence on the provision of swimming instruction in schools is provided through the visits and reports of Her Majesty's inspectorate. The Government recognise the value of young people being taught to swim as part of a programme of physical education.

Religious Education

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much time he estimates should be spent under the national curriculum on the teaching of religious education; and what proportion of that should be spent on the study of the Christian faith.

Mr. Eggar: Religious education must be included alongside the national curriculum in the basic curriculum of all maintained schools. In county schools, the content of RE must be in accordance with a locally agreed syllabus drawn up by a conference convened by the local education authority. My right hon. and learned Friend has no power to prescribe how much time should be spent on individual subjects, but he has made clear his view that in drawing up an agreed syllabus the conference should assume that a reasonable time will be available for the study of RE.

Pensions Branch, Darlington

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State fo Education and Science what plans he has for the future o the Department of Education and Science pensions branc in Darlington; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: We are currently considerin whether the pensions branch should be identified as candidate for agency status, in the light of a feasibilit study conducted earlier this year.

Soil and Rock Formation

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State fo Education and Science whether he has asked the Britis Geological Survey to carry out a survey of soil and roc formation in England and Wales; and if he will make statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Systematic geological surveys i Great Britain are one of the main tasks of the Britis Geological Survey, for which it is funded mainly throug the science vote. The soil survey of England and Wales wa transferred in July 1987 from the Agricultural and Foo Research Council to the Cranfield institute of technolog to form part of the soil survey and land use research centr funded by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries an Food.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Educatio and Science how many primary schools have expresse interest to his Department in opting out.

Mr. Eggar: We have received large numbers of inquirie about becoming grant-maintained from primary school Since the announcement on 10 October that all primar schools would be able to apply for GM status, more tha 40,000 copies of our explanatory leaflet for parents hav been requested by schools. The majority of these reques have come from primary schools.

Teaching Unions

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Educatio and Science when he intends to meet the teaching unio to discuss educational policy; and if he will make statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I and my hon. Friends expect t have meetings from time to time with the teaching unio on a range of educational policy matters.

DEFENCE

Gulf Forces

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defenc what arrangements have been made to provide servic personnel with the ability to telephone the Unite Kingdom and Germany.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are giving urgent considera tion, in consultation with British Telecom, Mercury an Cable and Wireless, to the establishment of a welfar telephone link between the Gulf and the United Kingdo and Germany. A trial system is currently being tested.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been made to provide the families of service personnel in the Gulf region with facilities to visit the area.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans to introduce such arrangements.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the intended length of tours of duty for service personnel in the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is intended that service personnel now being deployed to the Gulf will serve a tour of duty of about six months. The precise duration will depend on a number of factors and will be governed by operational considerations.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are any plans for Combined Services Entertainment to stage any productions in the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the military equipment sent to the Gulf region will be included within the forthcoming treaty on conventional forces in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: United Kingdom equipment deployed to the Gulf will continue to be treated for the purposes of the CFE treaty as if it remained within that treaty's area of application, and has been included within the equipment totals declared for the purposes of that treaty.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken to establish libraries for service personnel in the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Regular supplies of paperback books are sent to the Gulf. We are keeping under review the requirement to establish formal libraries.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are any plans for the Services Sound and Vision Corporation to set up (a) cinemas or (b) video libraries in the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Services Sound and Vision Corporation plans to have two mobile cinemas operating in the area early next month. Several hundred video cassettes have already been sent to the Gulf, together with televisions and video recorders.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Services Sound and Vision Corporation or the British Forces Broadcasting Service intend to broadcast any material in the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Services Sound and Vision Corporation is already making regular short-wave broadcasts to the Gulf. As I announced yesterday, we have decided to expand the broadcasting facilities in the area by providing VHF facilities in Saudi Arabia to broadcast British Forces Broadcasting Service programmes. This will provide coverage in the area of eastern Saudi Arabia from December. In addition, trials are to be undertaken this month of broadcasting further BFBS programmes using short-wave transmissions from Cyprus.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are sufficient supplies of buttons for the desert uniforms for British soldiers stationed in the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes. There was a temporary shortage of one size of button in the initial stages of the production of desert combat clothing, but this problem has now been overcome.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further steps he is taking, following the judgment in the case of Stephen Anderson, to prevent racial discrimination in the armed services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The services are fully integrated non-discriminatory organisations and discrimination is not tolerated. Any complaint of racial discrimination will be thoroughly investigated and if substantiated disciplinary action will be taken against those found to have been involved. The Anderson judgment relates not to this policy but to the procedures followed by the Army Board in dealing with claims of racial discrimination brought under the Race Relations Act 1976. As soon as the final, approved, judgment has been received the Ministry of Defence will consider in detail what changes may be necessary to service procedures to conform with the judgment.

The Gulf (Floating Hospital)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the floating hospital in the Gulf developed from the Royal Fleet Auxiliary Argus.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The costs of equipping the Royal Fleet Auxiliary Argus for her role as a primary casualty receiving ship amounted to £2·5 million.

Desert Camouflage

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when British troops in the desert will be kitted out in desert camouflage or khaki drill; and what use has been made of British Army studies of desert kit and camouflage.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Sufficient desert combat clothing has been delivered to the Gulf for an initial issue to the troops already deployed there, and further quantities are being purchased to meet future requirements. As a result of recent Ministry of Defence studies the Army's new desert clothing incorporates a number of improvements, including a change in the design of the trousers, and the use of new materials with a special disruptive camouflage pattern for desert use.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies he has done of the operational effectiveness of the SA80 assault rifle in desert camouflage conditions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The SA80 individual weapon has proven on a number of hot weather trials conducted over the last two years that it performs well in severe desert conditions. Camouflage requirements depend on local terrain, and any additional provision is determined by commanders in the field.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the new desert uniforms being supplied to British troops stationed in the Gulf are of the same pattern as uniforms exported in the last 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The desert combat clothing being supplied to the British forces in the Gulf is of a new design based on improvements in tropical uniforms. These improvements include a change in the design of the trousers and the use of new materials, incorporating a special disruptive camouflage pattern for desert use.

Air Defence System

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment command and control system is due to come into operational service; what system is in operation in the meantime; and if he will make a statement as to how the ICCS will operate.

Mr. Alan Clark: The integrated command and control system (ICCS) of the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment (IUKADGE) is a computer system which will gather basic data relating to the air defence of the United Kingdom from a variety of sources (ground radars, early warning aircraft, fighters and ships, and NATO sources); process this information to maintain recognised air and sea pictures (RASP) and resource data catalogue (RDC) information files; provide assistance to operators to enable them to recognise hostile aircraft and to optimise the use of air defence assets to respond to such threats; and provide necessary supporting communications. Operating centres will be able to contribute to a common database and to assume other sites' tasks in the event of damage or loss. The quality, quantity and consistency of management information will be enhanced, so improving tactical decision making and resource management, as compared with the existing UKADGE system. In the latter, sites are linked only by a simple datalink and communications systems; command and control is exercised on a mixture of manual and semi-automatic systems; and the amount of shared data is limited.

The ICCS programme has suffered from substantial delays. We now expect it to be in full operational service by the mid-1990s.

Cruise Missile

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what problems have been encountered in the development of the new air-launched cruise missile; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the replacement system for our WE177 free-fall nuclear bomb. We are currently considering both French and United States options, but no decision has yet been taken. Accordingly the question of development does not yet arise.

Hunting

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the hunts that have licences allowing them access to hunt on land held by his Department; and if he will list which land each licence covers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The hunts that have licences allowing them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land and the areas covered by the licences are as follows:

Hunt and Area Used

The Hampshire Hunt—Longmoor
Mr. Goschen's Hounds—Longmoor, Hankley, Camberley and Ash
The Chiddingfold, Leconfield and Cowdray Hounds—Longmoor
The Windsor Forest Blood Hounds—Camberley
The Royal Artillery Hunt—Salisbury Plain West
The South and West Wilts Hunt—Salisbury Plain West
The Avondale Hunt—Salisbury Plain West
The Sennybridge Hunt—Sennybridge
The Irfon and Tywi Hunt—Sennybridge
The Brecon Hunt—Sennybridge
The Glyn Celyn Beagles—Sennybridge
The Essex and Suffolk Hunt—Colchester
The Cambridgeshire Hunt—Brampton Wood
The Bedale Hunt—Ripon Parks and Catterick
The West of Yore Hunt—Ripon Parks and Catterick
The Zetland Hunt—Feldom and Catterick
The Wensleydale Foxhounds—Stainton and Bellerby
The Catterick Beagles—Feldom and Catterick
The Border Hunt—Otterburn
The Tynedale Hunt—Ouston

Computers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the CM (CIPMIS) computer; what is its function; who has access to it; and where it is located.

Mr. Alan Clark: The CIPMIS system contains computerised basic personnel records of all non-industrial civil servants in the Ministry of Defence. It is used to help personnel management to make decisions on the posting and promotion of individual members of staff. Information in respect of individuals is available to the relevant personnel managers; aggregated information is available more generally within the Department. The system is located at the computer bureau at Devizes and is controlled by officials based in Bath.

RAF Macrihanish

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the construction works in the contract let to Amey Construction at RAF Macrihanish.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The contract let to Amey Construction at RAF Macrihanish is to construct dispersed aircraft parking platforms and associated connecting taxitrack for use by SACLANT assigned maritime patrol aircraft.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of the construction work being undertaken at RAF Macrihanish by Amey Construction; and whether the total cost is being met out of his Ministry's budget.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The details of the contract for work being undertaken at RAF Macrihanish by Amey Construction are "Contracts in Confidence" and, as such, cannot be released. However, the cost is being met entirely from NATO infrastructure funds; the Ministry of Defence will pay the VAT element only.

Iraq (Uranium)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he possesses on current uranium mining in Iraq and on future Iraqi potential to convert natural uranium yellowcake to weapons grade material.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Iraq is a signatory to the non-proliferation treaty and has concluded a full-scope safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) under which its nuclear facilities must be regularly inspected. Iraq extracts uranium as a by-product of the processing of phosphates to make fertilisers at Al Qaim close to the border with Syria. Since uranium ore (yellowcake) is not subject to safeguards inspections we are unable to state the total amount produced. No additional deposits of uranium ore have been identified within the country.

If Iraq wishes to produce enriched uranium it would require a facility to convert the yellowcake into a form suitable for enrichment and also an enrichment plant. We have no evidence of the existence of such facilities and, should it build them, Iraq would be obliged to declare them for safeguards inspections under its agreement with the IAEA.

Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has had any discussions with his United States counterpart concerning the deployment in the United Kingdom and other European NATO countries of new B61-4/10 nuclear warheads made from modified W85 warheads withdrawn from Pershing II missiles under the treaty of Washington on intermediate nuclear forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details of discussions between Her Majesty's Government and the United States Government are confidential.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many of the members of training and enterprise councils represent (a) employers, (b) trades unions and (c) others; if he will classify in broad terms the categories from which members under (c) are drawn; what information is held on the political affiliation of members of training and enterprise councils; and whether any members are nominated by political groupings.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested on board members is set out in the table and refers to the 41 operational training and enterprise councils. The role of TECs is to engage employers more fully in the training process. It is not their function to represent sectional interests in their local community. Board members are, therefore, appointed as individuals in their own right.

The number of board members drawn from the various sectors is as follows:

(a) Employers—378
(b) Trades Unions—29
(c) Other—137

The "other" category can be broken down into:

Local authority—50
Education—59
Voluntary organisation—20
Employer association—8

Information is not kept on the political affiliation of TEC members. Board members are not drawn from political groupings.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money training and enterprise councils have spent in total on outside consultants.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which consultancies have been employed by training and enterprise councils; and how much money each has received in fees for developing corporate or strategic plans.

Mr. Jackson: Training and enterprise councils are independent private companies. The consultants employed by them and the fees paid are a matter for individual TECs.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) chief executives of training and enterprise councils and (b) other staff, excluding outside employees, have chosen (i) to resign civil service status and (ii) to retain such status.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested is set out in the table and refers to the 41 operational training and enterprise councils.

		Number
(a) (i)	Chief Executives who have resigned Civil Service status	4
(ii)	Chief Executives who have retained Civil Service status	23
(b) (i)	Other staff who have resigned Civil Service status	—
(ii)	Other staff who have retained Civil Service status	2,156

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what allocation of resources has been made to the training and enterprise councils towards the training of the lower ability range of potential trainees.

Mr. Jackson: Budgets for training and enterprise councils are negotiated with individual TECs, based on proposals set out in their corporate and business plans. These plans set out how the needs of trainees of all ability levels including those from the lower ability range are to be addressed.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many of the training and enterprise council chief executives designated or appointed have been recruited from (a) outside the civil service and (b) outside the Training Agency.

Mr. Jackson: Sixty-four of the 82 training and enterprise councils have appointed or designated a chief executive to date. Of these, 25 were recruited from outside both the civil service and the Department of Employment.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give figures for unemployment in the east midlands region in 1985 and 1990.

Mr. Jackson: The level of unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the east midlands, was 102,900 or 5·3 per cent. in October 1990 compared with 185,400 or 9·8 per cent. in October 1985.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the level of unemployment in Amber Valley in 1985 and 1990.

Mr. Jackson: In October 1990 the numbers of unemployed claimants, not seasonally adjusted, in the Amber Valley parliamentary constituency were 1,958. This compares with 4,057 in October 1985 and represents a fall of 51·7 per cent.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects local education authorities to be told their financial allocations for 1991-92 for the technical and vocational education initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My officials are now confirming the TVEI finances available in 1991-92 with each local education authority. The Government are fully committed to the TVEI. A total of £900 million is available to extend the initiative to all 14 to 18-year-olds in maintained schools and colleges. One hundred and three education authorities are now in the extension phase of the TVEI. I am very pleased with the progress that has been made.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out, in 1989 prices, the level of funding for the technical and vocational education initiative for 1989-90, 1990-91, and 1991-92.

Mr. Jackson: Funding levels, in cash prices, for the years requested are as follows:

	£ million
1989-90	129·3 (actual expenditure)
1990-91	134·1 (estimates provision)
1991-92	141·6 (PES allocation)

The figures are not available in 1989 prices.

Toxic Chemicals (Storage)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what studies have been conducted by his Department, or consultants to his Department, on improving the safety of storage of toxic or corrosive chemicals at large industrial sites; and what studies have been conducted on the design of bunds associated with chemical containment.

Mr. Forth: In addition to the high standards of legislative control which already exist for vessels storing hazardous chemicals, the Health and Safety Executive is encouraging an improvement in the mitigatory strategies adopted by occupiers to limit the consequences of vessel failure. The HSE is funding a research and development programme into the design and performance of bunds. A first study entitled "The Design of Bunds" was published in March and a further study is nearing completion.

Youth Training

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will produce a table to show the changes in the level of YOP/YTS allowance since April 1978, giving (a) the date of the change, (b) the level of the allowance and (c) the value of the allowance at Nov 1990 prices; and what the allowance would now be if kept pace with average earnings since April 1978.

Mr. Jackson: The table shows the changes i minimum allowances paid to trainees on the opportunities programme/youth training scheme 1978, expressed in cash terms and at October 1990 the latest month for which information is available

If the minimum YT allowance had increased average earnings since April 1978, it would have £62·35 in September 1990, the latest month for average earnings information is available.

Figures quoted are minimum levels. A consid number of YT trainees receive higher allowances or

European Social Fund

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of Sta Employment when he will be in a position to pay to voluntary organisations for the European socia programme starting in January.

Mr. Forth: Time scales and procedures for the European social fund programmes will be consultation with the various committees estab under the new ESF arrangements. These consult have begun. Payments will be made to organisation their applications have been approved, and the mon been received from the European Commission.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of Sta Employment if he will make a statement on the imp the delays in the administration of European funding for voluntary sector applications.

Mr. Forth: I appreciate that many vol organisations may be experiencing financial difficul a result of delays in implementing the reformed Eu social fund this year. A major cause of this delay w the operational programmes submitted to Commission, in line with the new regulations, we approved by the Commission until August 199 organisations involved however are advised that cl support from the European social fund is an uncerta lengthy process. My Department is doing all it expedite this process, and some voluntary organi have already received payments for their 1990 pro

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of Sta Employment when the United Kingdom's tran European social fund money was given to his Depar and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My Department received most of the first advance money for the 1990 programmes supported by the European social fund in October 1990. This money is being paid out to organisations once they have submitted correct applications to my Department. A very real effort has been made to expedite the processing of applications this year. Department of Employment officials have been working overtime in the evenings and at weekends, and extra staff have been recruited to help out.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list (a) the total numbers of applications received and (b) the number of training places for European social fund support in 1990 for each of the standard regions, England and Wales.

Mr. Forth: The total number of applications for ESF support received in England is 1,954 and in Wales is 223.

The total number of training places envisaged in those applications is 264,445 for England and 18,207 for Wales.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when application forms for European social fund support in 1991 will be available for voluntary sector organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Time scales and procedures for the 1991 European social fund programmes will be set in consultation with the various committees established under the new ESF arrangements. These consultations have begun.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether money from the European social fund will be paid to voluntary organisations in 1990 for projects submitted in the current year.

Mr. Forth: Some voluntary organisations have already received payments for their 1990 projects, and it is expected that payments to the rest which have submitted correct applications for projects running in 1990 will be made during December and January.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total number of (a) training places, (b) projects and (c) voluntary organisations currently under consideration in applications for assistance by grant aid from the European social fund for 1990.

Mr. Forth: Approximately 2,500 project applications, involving 318,755 training places, are currently under consideration for European social fund assistance for 1990. Of these 2,500 applications, some 500 were from voluntary organisations.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representation he has received from voluntary sector orgnisations about the delay in the payment of European social fund money; and what consultations have taken place with interested organisations.

Mr. Forth: A number of representations have been made to my Department by voluntary sector organisations about the delays in 1990, which is the first year of the new European social fund.

Consultation with interested organisations has taken place at every stage in the process of implementing the new regulations. Since July there have been several meetings with representatives of the voluntary sector and other organisations concerned to discuss the 1990 procedures for obtaining support under the fund.

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will now publish the full results of the 100 per cent. follow-up survey of employment training leavers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how frequently updated information from the 100 per cent. follow-up survey of employment training leavers is supplied to operational technical education colleges and Training Agency regional offices; and if he intends to make information available on a similar basis to hon. Members.

Mr. Jackson: The full results of the 100 per cent. follow-up survey of employment training leavers contains records for individual trainees. This information is confidential and it would therefore be inappropriate to publish it. Summary results from the survey are sent monthly to regional offices and TECs. Information is available for hon. Members on a similar basis and is placed in the Library.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of those who have completed courses under the employment training scheme have entered full-time employment; and what average cost of training this represents as a per capita share of the total costs of the scheme.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 26 November 1990]: Of those trainees who left employment training between July 1989 and June 1990 after completing their agreed training, 26 per cent. went into full-time employment. Of all trainees who left employment training, 40 per cent. achieved a positive outcome, which includes full and part-time employment, self-employment and further training or education. The training cost per ET trainee leaving for a positive outcome is estimated to be £3,500.

Careers Service

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the internal review of the careers service will be completed; and if its findings will be made available to hon. Members.

Mr. Jackson: The internal review of careers guidance was announced last spring. The review team has now completed its consultations and will be presenting its recommendations shortly. An announcement about decisions emerging from the review will then be made.

Disabled People

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he is planning any additional help for disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have decided to give unemployeed people with disabilities priority access to our main employment and training programmes. From April next year they will become one of the key groups for entry on to employment training, the enterprise allowance scheme, job clubs and the job interview guarantee. Training and enterprise councils and the Employment Service will ensure that people with disabilities who are unemployed will be given this priority recognition. This will help strengthen their opportunity to participate in the labour market.

I have recently written to TEC chairmen about this new priority and special guidance has been issued about people who have special training needs, such as people with disabilities, so as to help TECs plan and implement their strategies for taking action. This is in addition to existing good practice guidance on the training of people with disabilities produced by my Department, most notably the "Building on Ability" guide. Promoting and encouraging dissemination of good practice to and between TECs and training providers will continue to be an important function of the Department. All this is particularly important as currently over 10 per cent. of people on employment training identify themselves as having a disability or long-term health problem.

I also recently launched the new symbol that is currently being promoted by the Employment Service aimed at encouraging and helping employers on a voluntary basis to commit themselves publicly to good policies and practices. Employers have an important role in providing opportunities for people with disabilities. My Department seeks increasingly to promote good employment practices and provide effective advice on recruitment, integration, career development and retention, mainly through the Disablement Advisory Service.

The increased priority being given to people with disabilities on our programmes and the new symbol are reflections of our commitment to ensure that people with disabilities are able to participate fully in training and employment. They already have access to the full range of non-specialist employment services, in many cases with easier eligibility or length of stay rules and special help. The extension of job clubs which I recently announced will further help people with disabilities. Research has shown that in general people who had participated in job clubs were 50 per cent. more likely to be in work than comparable people who had not, but that the difference was even greater for people with disabilities. The job interview guarantee is also being extended and that, too, can provide very significant help to people with disabilities.

There is also a wide range of services and schemes specifically designed to help people with disabilities obtain and retain employment. This includes:

—specialist assessment and rehabilitation services which provided 37,000 courses for over 25,000 people in 1989-90;

—special schemes to help overcome some of the problems people with disabilities may encounter in getting or keeping employment, such as assistance with adapting premises and equipment, with fares to work or with trying out a job or starting a business. Over 7,500 successful applications for help under the special schemes were made in 1989-90;

—funds for voluntary bodies, local authorities and Remploy to provide employment opportunities for severely disabled people who could not otherwise get work. Over 20,000 people with severe disabilities were employed through the sheltered employment programme at the end of 1989-90.

Disablement resettlement officers help people with disabilities make use of these services and identify the right sort of help necessary to meet their employment and training needs. In 1989-90 a total of 20,500 people with disabilities were placed into employment by these officers.

My Department has also issued in recent months two consultation documents which together look for the first time in over 40 years at all the employment a services we provide for people with disabilitie proposals and raise issues for discussion wit improving the effectiveness of the help we ha "Employment and Training for People with was published in June and an evaluation of schemes was published in November. We will b conclusions on what further action we can take the employment and training needs of people w ties, as well as the needs of the labour market, a considered all the comments we receive early n

Nuclear Casualties

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary Scotland if he will list all the hospitals in S have been designated to accept nuclear-c casualties; and if he will show in his answer th that have expressed an interest in national h trust status.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The hospitals in Scotland that have been designated to accept nuclear-contaminated casualties are as follows:

Aberdeen Royal Infirmary
Glasgow Royal Infirmary
Western Infirmary, Glasgow
Raigmore Hospital, Inverness
Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh
Dundee Royal Infirmary

Aberdeen royal infirmary as part of the Foresterhill unit has expressed an interest in NHS trust status.

Nurses

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the years 1986 to 1990 inclusive (a) the number of nurses at each grade employed and (b) the number of patients treated at (i) Lennox Castle hospital, (ii) Gartloch, (iii) Leverndale, (iv) Woodilee and (v) Gartnavel Royal.

Marriage Guidance

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance he has made available to Scottish Marriage Guidance in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Funding under section 9 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 (for training purposes) and under section 10(1)—for headquarters expenses—was offered to Marriage Counselling Scotland, formerly the Scottish Marriage Guidance Council as follows:

	Section 9	Section 10(1)
		Current	Capital	Total
1986-87	12,200	44,112	1,986	58,298
1987-88	13,500	45,437	2,000	60,937

Coal Exports

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current level of coal exports from Scotland to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: This Department does not collect such information. However, I understand that sales from Scotland to Northern Ireland by British Coal totalled some 1,019,000 tonnes in the year ended 31 March 1990, of which 921,000 tonnes went to the electricity supply industry. British Coal exports for the current year are estimated at around 800,000 tonnes.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current levels of coal exports from Scotland to other European countries.

Mr. Lang: Latest figures from the Department of Transport show that in the first nine months of 1990 shipments of coal from Scottish ports to European countries were as follows:

Country	Tonnes
France	65,308
Irish Republic	25,195
Denmark	107,427
Spain	2,9
Sweden	16,7
Finland	57,7
	275,3

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State when he last met with British Coal repr discuss the export of coal to Northern Irel will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Responsibility for the coal ind Britain rests with my right hon. Friend th State for Energy, who meets the chairman o on a regular basis to discuss all aspects of the

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State what information he has on the number of dependent on coal exports to Ireland.

Mr. Lang: There is no information on t jobs in Ayrshire dependent on coal expor However British Coal advises that there are jobs associated with opencast coal mining i which 545 employees are directly employ British Coal or its contractors. The majo from Ayrshire mines is at present bought fo generation and industrial consumption Ireland, with a further small amount expor

Community Services

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary Scotland how many unfilled posts there are Glasgow health board in the communit physiotherapy, occupational therapy and sp respectively.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: At 22 Noven Glasgow health board had identified thre physiotherapy, one in occupational therap speech therapy.

Wild Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure is incurred by his Department in controlling the numbers of the wild fox population in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) on 1 November at column 723.

Kidney Stones

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients with renal calculi have, since 1987, (a) been transferred to England for lithotripsy and (b) required multiple treatments with the lithotripter at the national centre in Edinburgh.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not centrally available.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what quantity of (a) low and (b) intermediate-level waste is in Scotland awaiting disposal or transfer to Sellafield at present;

(2) what quantity of (a) low and (b) intermediate-level nuclear waste has been (i) exported from and (ii) imported into Scotland on an annual basis since 1985.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: With the exception of a small quantity of waste at BNF plc's Chapelcross works, I am not aware of any nuclear waste in Scotland awaiting transfer to Sellafield. All Scottish nuclear establishments other than Dounreay are authorised under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 to dispose of low-level radioactive waste to BNF plc for burial and the company's facilities at Drigg, Cumbria. Details of these authorisations and the quantities of waste disposal of under their terms may be found in: "Radioactive waste disposal from nuclear sites in Scotland, 1984-1988"—SDD statistical bulletin No. 1(E) 1990—copies of which are in the Library.

From time to time, waste is transferred between United Kingdom nuclear establishments. Such transfers are made under the terms of authorisation granted by the appropriate territorial Department but records are not kept centrally. There have been no overseas imports or exports of nuclear waste.

Sheriff Ewen Stewart

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct a review to be carried out, under section 12 of the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act 1971, of the performance by Sheriff Ewen Stewart of his shrieval duties.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has requested no such review.

Sheriffs (Dismissal Procedures)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the procedures under which a sheriff may be dismissed; and if he has any proposals for their reform.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Procedures for the removal from office of a sheriff, in which are involved the Lord President of the Court of Session, the Lord Justice Clerk, the Secretary of State and the Houses of Parliament are contained in section 12 of the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act 1971. My right hon. and learned Friend has, at present, no proposals for the reform of these provisions.

Health Service Conference, Peebles

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the attendance of senior officials of the national health service and Scottish health boards at a conference organised by the Institute of Health Services Management and funded by private health care contractors at Peebles in November.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 November 1990]: This conference, which is held biennially, was organised by the Scottish division of the Institute of Health Services Management. These conferences are an important forum for discussing health-related matters and the IHSM invites many interested people, including health service and health board officials. Funding for the conference is a matter for the organisers.

Government Researchers

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list research projects and researchers awarded funding by the Scottish Education Department during 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 November 1990]: Details of current educational research projects, including those awarded in 1990, are contained in the Scottish Education Department's publication "Educational Research 1989-90", copies of which are in the Library. In addition to projects listed therein, the Scottish Education Department has awarded funding in 1990 for the following research:

Project	Researcher
Education of Pupils with Moderate Learning Difficulties and Contribution of Modern Foreign Languages	Private individual
Evaluation of the Policy of Pupils with Special Educational Needs in Dumfries and Galloway	The Scottish Council for Research in Education
Assessment processes, planning and resource allocation in placing people with learning difficulties in supported accommodation	University of Dundee
Correlation between child sexual abuse and domestic violence	Women's Support Project, Glasgow
Needs of families of children with epilepsy	University of Glasgow
Monitoring and evaluation of aspects of the post adoption scheme offered by family care	University of Edinburgh and University of Glasgow
Assessment of older people considered for institutional care	University of Edinburgh

Speech Therapy

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding will be made available to Scottish education authorities to enable them to meet the requirements of his inspectors in respect of provision of speech therapy services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 November 1990]: Expenditure by education authorities to provide for special educational needs, including, where appropriate, speech therapy services, is supported by the aggregate external finance settlement.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Spending

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the allocation to individual programmes in Northern Ireland of the public expenditure totals announced on 8 November.

Mr. Brooke: In his autumn statement on 8 November, my right hon. Friend the former Chancellor of the Exchequer announced total public expenditure planning figures for the Northern Ireland programme. I have now decided on the allocations to individual programmes shown in the table: copies of a more detailed statement have been placed in the Library. These allocations reflect my assessment of how best to distribute the Northern Ireland public expenditure totals in response to local needs and circumstances.

£ million

Programme	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94
Northern Ireland Office:
Law, Order Protective and Miscellaneous Services	762	810	860

Total Northern Ireland Block	6,337	6,770	7,090
National Agriculture and Fishery Support	85	90	90
Total Northern Ireland Programme	6,422	6,860	7,170

Notes to Table:

(1) Figures are rounded to nearest £1m for 1991-92 and to the nearest £10m for 1992-93 and 1993-94 (thus "£0m" means "less than £5m"). Figures may not sum to totals due to roundings.

(2) As announced in 8 November, the plans reflect the reclassification of the water and sewerage element of the Regional Rate as negative PE. Allowing for this technical change, the overall level of resources represented by the public expenditure plans overall, and the Environmental and Miscellaneous Services programme in particular, are effectively some £110m a year higher than the figures in the table.

(3) The figure for the Energy programme for 1991-92 is negative because it is anticipated NIE will be repaying loans to Government in that year. The PE plans for the Energy Programme for 1992-93 and 1993-94 have been adjusted to reflect Government's intention that NIE should be privatised early in 1992. This produces total plans for NI for those years which are some £120m higher than would otherwise be the case.

(4) Figures for social security administration also include district councils' share of rate rebates.

(5) The figures are now net of VAT refunds to the Government of Northern Ireland: this is a classification change which does not affect the spending power of departments nor the year on year comparisons.

(6) The planning figures for 1991-92 form the basis for preparation by Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office of Main Estimates for the coming year. These will be presented to Parliament in due course.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Anti-Jewish Leaflets

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will institute proceedings in respect of the anti-Jewish leaflet, "The Snides of March."

The Attorney-General: I am not yet in possession of all the material that I need to enable me to make a decision concerning the institution of proceedings. I shall make my decision when I have considered the results of further related police inquiries which have been requested by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Commonhold

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will make a statement about the publication of draft legislation to implement a commonhold scheme.

The Attorney-General: The Government are today publishing a document entitled "Commonhold: A Consultation Paper"—Cm. 1345. It includes a draft Bill. Comments are invited on this draft legislation and also on certain important policy issues, in particular whether provision should be made enabling the conversion to commonhold of residential long leasehold flats and other developments against the wishes of the landlord. The consultation paper is also available in a version without the draft Bill attached—Cm. 1346.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Claim Forms (Verification)

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what evidence he has of failure by local authorities to verify details on claim forms for housing benefit and community charge benefit; how many local authorities have failed so to verify; and if he will list them in the Official Report.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is the responsibility of local authorities to decide what information it is reasonable to ask for in order to determine an individual's entitlement to housing benefit or community charge benefit. Administrative practices vary from authority to authority and information is not collected centrally on the detail of these practices.

HEALTH

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he plans to take to ensure that nursing and residential homes are fully licensed to care for patients before the patient is sent there upon release from the hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Department of Health guidance asks health authorities to ensure that appropriate plans are made for the continuing care of patients as necessary on their discharge from hospital. These plans should include ensuring that a nursing or residential care home placement is suitable and acceptable in all respects.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he plans to take to ensure that owners of a residential home who are deemed unfit to run a home will not later open another similar facility.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is for local authorities to satisfy themselves, by making thorough inquiries, of the suitability of applicants for registration of residential care homes. The Department assists by acting as a channel of information between authorities about people who have had their registration cancelled and provides a consultancy service to authorities seeking information about applications for homes with children and young people under age 18.

Ashworth Hospital, Mayhill

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement concerning staffing levels at Ashworth hospital, Mayhill, on 19 November;

(2) if he will institute a public inquiry into the death of Derek Anthony Williams at Ashworth hospital, Mayhill, on 19 November; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will make a statement on the death of Derek Anthony Williams at Ashworth hospital, Mayhill, on 19 November.

Mr. Dorrell: I am writing to the hon. and learned Member about this tragic incident and would like to record here how I very much regret the sad death of Mr. Williams and offer my sympathy to his parents.

The Special Hospitals Service Authority, which is responsible for the management of Ashworth hospital, is urgently setting up an independent inquiry into the circumstances surrounding Mr. Williams' death.

The management of Ashworth hospital have already launched their own internal inquiry. An early finding is that on the morning of 19 November, with the exception of one ward designated to the care of mentally handicapped female patients, all wards in Ashworth hospital, including that in which Mr. Williams died, were fully manned. During the afternoon and night shifts all wards were fully manned.

ENVIRONMENT

Homelessness

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the number of registered homeless people in each of the 32 London boroughs on 17 November;

(2) what was the known number of homeless people in the United Kingdom on 16 November.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Local authorities have a statutory duty to secure accommodation for households who have been found to be homeless or threatened with homelessness, under part III of the Housing Act 1985. The numbers of households accepted and found accommodation are reported quarterly to the Department. Latest estimates for England, and figures reported by the London boroughs, appear in tables 1(a) and 7, respectively, of "Local authorities' action under the homeless provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the second quarter 1990. Supplementary Tables". A copy is in the Library.

For information about other parts of the United Kingdom, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about unpaid community charges in Lancashire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: I am not aware of any such representations.

The Department's information is that the proportion of residents who had made payments by the end of September varied from 80·4 per cent. in Burnley and 81 per cent. in west Lancashire to 96 per cent. in Hyndburn and 97·2 per cent. in Fylde. This range suggests that some authorities perform more efficiently than others and I look to all authorities to minimise arrears in the four months that remain of this financial year.

Ministerial Committee

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the first meeting of the new standing ministerial committee on the environment will take place; which Ministers will sit on this committee; what matters will be discussed; and through whom it will be accountable to Parliament.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is not the practice to disclose the detailed arrangements for Cabinet committees.

Pollution Inspectorate

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the report of the National Audit Office into the organisation of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will be published.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This is a matter for the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is available to him if water companies are unable to bring the designated beaches within their area into compliance with the EEC 1976 bathing waters directive by 1995.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A number of actions are available to the Secretary of State under the Water Act 1989 including, ultimately, termination of the company's appointment as a sewerage undertaker. In addition, if the company were in breach of discharge consent conditions set by the National Rivers Authority it could be liable to prosecution by the authority.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report for each designated bathing beach in England sampled in the summer of 1990 (i) the E. Coli and (ii) the total coliform level of each sample taken, together with the date that the sampling took place.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. This information is already held in the public registers maintained by the National Rivers Authority.

Disabled Facilities Grants

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has issued to social services departments regarding the new system of disabled facilities grants.

Mr. Key: A departmental circular 10/90 on "House Adaptations for People with Disabilities" was issued jointly with the Department of Health on 18 June 1990. Copies were sent to all local housing and social services authorities.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to monitor the impact of the system of disabled facilities grants and the impact of the means test on disabled people.

Mr. Key: The Department is undertaking a sample survey of 40 local authorities in England to monitor activity under the new house renovation grants system. All aspects of the system are covered by the review including the impact of disabled facilities grants and the test of resources.

Pollution Inspectorate

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to increase the powers available to Her Majesty's inspectors of pollution.

Mr. Trippier: The Environmental Protection Act 1990 strengthens the powers available to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution—HMIP—for controlling all major emissions to air, land and water from the processes with most potential to cause pollution; for policing the storage and disposal of radioactive substances and wastes; and for overseeing local authorities' performance of their waste regulation functions. Our White Paper on the environment, published in the summer, proposes that HMIP's powers could be further strengthened by making it a candidate to become a "next steps" agency. This would give them an enhanced status and a clearly separate identity, which should strengthen their authority in controlling pollution.

Rivers, Derbyshire

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give figures for the number of rivers classed 1A, 1B and 2 in Derbyshire and those classed 3 and 4.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The latest available information is in the form of maps showing the classification of all rivers included in the 1985 river quality survey of England and Wales. Copies are available in the Library of the House. The National Rivers Authority is conducting another national survey this year.

Planning Permission

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those occasions since 1971 on which he or his predecessors have used section 276 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 to revoke planning permission; and if he will indicate any compensation that was awarded.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Reading, East (Sir G. Vaughan) on 27 November, Official Report, column 333.

Environmental Protection Act 1990

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish a timetable for implementation of the Environmental Protection Act 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I have today placed in the Library copies of our target timetable for implementation of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Part A of the timetable sets out for each subject area of the Act target dates for key tasks such as consultation on draft regulations, the laying of regulations and the ultimate target commencement dates. Part B lists the key tasks in chronological order.

The timetable covers implementation plans for the whole Act with the exception of the regulatory system under part II—waste on land. This brings a complete overhaul of our existing waste management systems and we are presently working on the timetable for this. A further announcement will be made on part II as soon as possible.

The Environmental Protection Act is a landmark in environmental legislation. It brings with it valuable opportunities to enhance our domestic environment and contribute significantly to the development of international environmental policy. We must all be prepared to seize these opportunities so that future generations can benefit from a cleaner, healthier and greener world.

Sewage Discharges

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of providing treatment for sewage discharges to estuarial and coastal waters.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The cost of providing primary treatment for coastal discharges and secondary treatment for estuarial discharges for populations above 10,000 was estimated at around £1·5 billion by Consultants in Environmental Sciences Ltd. A copy of its report "Study of Coastal Sewage Discharges" is available in the Library. CES Ltd. has recently completed a further study to refine its earlier estimate and to include the cost of providing secondary treatment for discharges to estuaries for populations between 2,000 and 10,000 as required by the draft municipal waste water directive. The revised estimate of costs is now put at some £2·16 billion. Copies of the latest study by CES are being placed in the Library.

Marine Environment, North Sea

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government have measured the effects on sensitive marine environments from discharges of nitrates and phosphates into the North sea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 27 November 1990]: A substantial part of the marine research budgets of several Government Departments is devoted to work on nutrients and there is extensive monitoring of nutrient levels around our coasts.

Monitoring of nutrient levels in coastal and estuarial waters has taken place since 1960 and is now the responsibility of the National Rivers Authority. While nutrient inputs from rivers may have increased, there is no evidence of an increase in nutrients offshore. Monitoring by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland has led to the same conclusion.

Beach Pollution

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department will produce its observations on the fourth report of the Select Committee on the Environment, on pollution of beaches.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 27 November 1990]: The Government's response will be published next month.

Building Control Fees

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for t Environment when he next intends to review loc authority building control fees.

Mr. Key [holding answer 27 November 1990 Regulations will be laid before the House shortly whi will propose increases in building control fees in respect the erection of small domestic buildings, garages, carpo and small extensions and alterations to domestic buildin by, on average, 7 per cent, to take effect from 1 Februa 1991.

My officials are discussing with the relevant loc authority associations a restructuring of the fe regulations, with a view to preparing the way for allowi local authorities to set their own levels of fees. I hope issue a consultation paper early next year.

Urban Programme

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for t Environment if he will show for each authority current entitled to apply for urban programme funding and summary for all such authorities, for each year fro 1981-82 to the latest year for which figures are available, constant prices (a) the amount of rate support grant revenue support grant received and (b) total gra received under the urban programme.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 19 November 1990 The total amounts of (a) rate support grant or reven support grant received and (b) urban programm expenditure allocated to the 57 authorities current entitled to apply for urban programme funding, for ea year from 1981-82 to 1990-91, at 1990-91 prices, were follows:

	Revenue support grant £ billion	Urban programme £ billion
1981-82	4·232	0·238
1982-83	3·642	0·317
1983-84	3·591	0·318
1984-85	3·431	0·320
1985-86	3·339	0·316
1986-87	3·622	0·297
1987-88	3·653	0·321
1988-89	3·667	0·295
1989-90	3·611	0·268
1990-91	4·592	0·259

I shall send the hon. Gentleman tables showing deta for all the authorities. Copies of these tables will be plac in the Libraries of the House.

TRANSPORT

Public Transport

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State f Transport whether he will make a statement about t funding of local public transport schemes in England.

Mr. Freeman: We are providing resources for the £1 million Manchester metrolink light rail scheme, includi more than £50 million of grant. Construction is w advanced, and operations should begin late next year.

Subject to my receiving assurances from the Sou Yorkshire passenger transport authority about cos contributions to be made by the parties involved, and transfer in due course to the private sector, the £230 million supertram project proposed for Sheffield will be the next light rail scheme to go ahead. Substantial Government grant suppport will be provided.

As I announced on 26 November, we are reserving resources for a start on the electrification of the railway infrastructure in the Bradford area.

Light rail schemes are being actively considered in other areas. Parliament has granted powers for a number of lines, including the proposed midland metro line between Birmingham and Wolverhampton. The appraisal of that scheme is currently in progress, and we hope that it will be completed as soon as possible. If it proves satisfactory, we will be ready to consider paying grant next year towards the cost of developing the scheme in detail. We will consider other proposals on the same basis, subject to the availability of resources.

We also remain committed to taking full advantage of the important contribution which the bus can make to improving the quality of public transport in urban areas. We are examining urgently the proposals put forward by the Bus and Coach Council, including the possibility of earmarking resources for measures to promote bus use, and hope to respond in the new year.

Transport Deaths

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in tabular form the number of rail deaths for each year from 1970 to 1989, inclusive, showing (a) total figures and (b) by category of (i) British Rail drivers, (ii) other British Rail staff and (iii) passengers.

Mr. McLoughlin: The table shows fatalities in accidents on all railway premises. The staff figures include all railway employees; no separate figures are available for British Rail staff fatalities. Similarly, I am unable to provide a breakdown between drivers and other railway employees.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in tabular form the death rate per thousand miles travelled for each year from 1970 to 1989 (inclusive) for (a) car, (b) rail, (c) air (United Kingdom airlines), (d) air (within United Kingdom airspace), (e) bicycle, (f) motor bike, (g) lorry, (h) bus, (i) ship (United Kingdom-registered vessels) and (j) ship (within United Kingdom waters).

Mr. McLoughlin: The readily available information is set out in the table.

An article concerning fatality rates by mode of transport appears in the Department's publication "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1979-1989", pages 1 to 5, which is available in the Library.

Further information is either unavailable or could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Motor Cycle Driving Licence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what facilities will be available by 1 December within (a) the borough of Berwick upon Tweed, (b) Alnwick district and (c) Castle Morpeth district for the basic training necessary for obtaining a provisional motor cycle driving licence after 1 December.

Mr. Chope: Sites have been approved for basic training at Berwick upon Tweed and Belford in the borough of Berwick upon Tweed and at Alnwick in Alnwick district. No sites have been approved within Castle Morpeth district, but sites have been approved nearby at Ashlington and Cramlington. I expect the operators of all these sites to be offering basic training courses from 1 December. Completion of basic training is not a requirement for the issue of a provisional licence, but a licence issued on or after 1 December will not be valid for riding on the road, unaccompanied by an instructor, until a certificate of completion of basic training has been obtained.

Rail Links

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to use the rate of return criteria used to sanction investment in the east-west underground rail link through London for proposals for electrification of lines in Scotland.

Mr. Freeman: The east-west cross rail link was approved on the basis that reduced road congestion and other benefits to non-users more than justified the cost to the public sector. My right hon. Friend stated in his 1989 objectives for BR that where, exceptionally, investment in Network SouthEast or provincial services is needed to meet growth in demand but cannot meet the required financial return, cost-benefit analysis can be used.

Carbon Monoxide Emissions

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what technical basis was the proposed standard of 4·5 per cent. carbon monoxide for emission testing in the MOT test determined; what proportion of the current car fleet is technically capable of meeting an emission standard of (a) 4 per cent. carbon monoxide and (b) 3 per cent. carbon monoxide at idle; and what levels of carbon monoxide are typically produced by new models of car at idle.

Mr. Chope: The proposed 4·5 per cent. carbon monoxide standard derives from EC directive 78/665, which lays down maximum levels of emissions permitted from new vehicles. There is no detailed information available on the number of vehicles that should be able to meet more rigorous carbon monoxide standards, but most modern cars should be capable of achieving lower levels provided they are tuned in accordance with manufacturers' recommendations.

M4

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the nature and function of the works unit off the eastbound carriageway of the M4 between junctions 14 and 13; what was the cost of erecting the "works unit only" signs for the works unit; when the road between the works unit and the motorway was completed; what was t of the road between the works unit and the motorw from which subheads of which votes this money wa

Mr. Chope: The works unit referred to is RAF W which is made available to the United States air fo conventional munitions storage. The "works uni signs which are to the conventional red, white an design as used for MoD establishments cost £6,63 provide and erect. The entry and exit slip roads, from the motorway, were completed on 17 Decemb and 2 July 1985 respectively. The final cost construction of the slip roads was £377,081·84. works costs were funded by United States air force also contributed towards administration expenses.

Diesel Smoke

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of St Transport what regulations control the emission o smoke from railway engines; which agency is resp for enforcement; and what action has been ta control such emissions.

Mr. Freeman: Emission of dark smoke from engines is subject to regulations under section 1 Clean Air Act 1956. Enforcement is a matter fo authorities. Under the Environmental Protecti 1990, railway engines other than steam locomotive become subject to statutory nuisance action b authorities or individuals. Action to control emissi matter for operators and the enforcement authori

M6 (Gravelly Hill Interchange)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of St Transport if he will make a statement outlining reas the delay in repairs to the Gravelly hill interchang M6 motorway following the accident of 26 Augus

Mr. Chope: The accident resulted in severe str damage requiring the closure of two slip roads.

An urgent investigation began into the effects of damage and possible remedial works includi possibility of demolishing and reconstructing the structure.

There are a number of technical matters stil resolved, but I hope that work on a replacement st will commence before the end of the year.

Disabled Drivers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Tr what representations he has received concerning u wheelclamping of orange badge holders.

Mr. Chope: Orange badge holders are exemp wheelclamping on the street in areas where wheelcl is authorised. The exemption does not, however, ex private car parks or other private land.

Railway Inspectorate

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of S Transport when the railway inspectorate w transferred to the Health and Safety Executive; a will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: As I told my hon. Friend the M for Kingswood (Mr. Hayward) on 19 July, at colu

I have decided to transfer the railway inspectorate to the Health and Safety Executive. Following consultations with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment, and the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission, I have now made an agency agreement with the commission for the discharge of my railway safety functions. Under this agreement, the railway inspectorate will transfer to the Health and Safety Executive on 1 December, where its identity will be maintained. There will be no change in ministerial responsibilities. I will remain answerable on all matters affecting railway passenger safety. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment will remain accountable for railway employee safety matters under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

Public Service Vehicles

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the number of accidents involving public service vehicles carrying schoolchildren from 1979 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The presence of schoolchildren on a public service vehicle involved in a personal injury accident is not routinely recorded by the police. It is, however, possible to identify accidents in which children travelling to or from school on a PSV were themselves injured. The table gives figures for 1979 to 1989:

Number of road accidents in which children, up to and including age 16, travelling to or from school on public service vehicles suffered injury or death; 1979-1989:

	Number
1979	207
1980	218
1981	209
1982	275
1983	281
1984	289
1985	275
1986	261
1987	219
1988	218
1989	254

Casualties resulting from these PSV accidents are:

Number of casualties in road accidents involving children travelling to or from school by Public Service Vehicle; 1979-89

	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1979	2	44	348	394
1980	2	42	443	487
1981	0	29	341	370
1982	3	35	362	400
1983	2	40	375	417
1984	0	72	500	572
1985	0	43	487	530
1986	1	34	429	464
1987	0	36	451	487
1988	0	24	429	453
1989	1	47	531	579

The figures show that these casualties represent less than 0·2 per cent. of all road casualties and less than 0·1 per cent. of deaths and serious injuries.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the applicability of the European Community environmental impact assessment directive 1985 to the proposed east London river crossing.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 23 November at column 231.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice his Department has sought concerning the applicability of the European Community environmental impact assessment directive 1985 and the Highways (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 to the proposed east London river crossing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No environmental assessment under the directive was required in relation to the line and side road orders for this scheme, which were published in 1984. An assessment in the form of an appraisal framework of the environmental effects of the scheme was published in 1985, and taken into account by the Secretaries of State in reaching their decision. The directive has been applied to the proposed design changes for which an environmental statement was published in January 1990.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will conduct an environmental impact assessment study for (a) the east London river crossing and (b) M11 link projects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: An assessment in the form of an appraisal framework of the environmental effects of the east London river crossing was published in 1985. The likely environmental effects of the scheme were also exhaustively considered at lengthy public inquiries during 1985-86. An environmental statement on the effects of the proposed design changes to the scheme from the A13 to the A2016 was published in January 1990. Public inquiries are currently being held into the proposed design changes, at which the Department has presented detailed evidence on the effects of the design changes.

Evidence on the environmental impact of the A12 Hackney-M11 link road was presented at public inquiries held in 1983 and 1987 and was fully taken into account when the decisions to proceed with the scheme were taken.

Roads, Birmingham

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the damage to the slip road between the Aston expressway and spaghetti junction in Birmingham to be repaired.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) today. The slip roads should be reopened in the summer.

ENERGY

British Gas

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations he has had with the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis regarding the funding of further computer runs to detect multiple share applications for British Gas.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 21 November 1990, at column 148.

North Sea Installations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the earliest year for which he can differentiate between prosecutions mounted against operators in the North sea which resulted from (a) inspections and (b) accidents; and what are the figures for that year and each subsequent year.

Mr. Wakeham: Information is not kept in a form by which prosecutions resulting from inspections and from accidents can be distinguished without disproportionate cost.

The six convictions of companies for breaches of health and safety legislation in 1987, 1988 and 1989 all resulted from accidents.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the earliest year for which he can, without incurring disproportionate cost, give the percentage of serious accidents on North sea installations which have been investigated by his inspectors; and what was the percentage in that year and each subsequent year.

Mr. Wakeham: Accident data are not kept in a form from which the information requested can be extracted without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the earliest year for which he can give the total spent on the North sea safety inspectorate of his Department without incurring disproportionate cost; and what is the figure for that year and subsequent years at constant prices.

Mr. Wakeham: Running costs for the safety directorate for the period 1989-90 were of the order of £7·2 million. Figures for earlier years cannot be separately identified.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 21 November to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras, Official Report, column 150, how the 475 technical staff referred to are broken down between the six certifying authorities.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

Certifying Authority	Number of Technical Staff Employed
Lloyd's Register of Shipping	275
Bureau Veritas	20
American Bureau of Shipping	70
Det Norske Véritas	90
Germanischer Lloyd	8
Offshore Certification Bureau	12
	475

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the serious accidents referred to in his answer of 21 November, Official Report, column 149, to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras, represent the numbers seriously injured or the number of incidents involving serious injury.

Mr. Wakeham: The numbers of serious acci referred to in my answer of 21 November represen numbers of persons injured.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for E what will be the total fees paid out in respect of U Kingdom primary underwriting, United Kin sub-underwriting and overseas underwriting o regional electricity company flotations.

Mr. Wakeham: Subject to the terms of the underw agreements the commissions paid out for underwriti regional electricity company flotations will be:

	£ millio
United Kingdom primary underwriting:	6·
United Kingdom sub-underwriting:	29·
Overseas underwriting:	12·

Piper Alpha

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for E how many (a) clear breaches of regulations, (b) pro breaches and (c) possible breaches were involved fire and explosion on Piper Alpha on 24 March 19

Mr. Wakeham: It is for the courts to determi matters brought before them, whether breaches of th have occurred.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for E how many hours were spent on the inspections of Alpha on 21 February 1984, excluding the helic flights and meal breaks; and how many inspectors involved.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested i available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for E how many hours were spent on the inspections of Alpha on 25 and 26 March 1984, excluding the helic flights and meal breaks; and how many inspectors involved.

Mr. Wakeham: The visit by one inspector to Alpha on 25 and 26 March 1984 was not an inspectio an investigation of the explosion in the gas compr module on 24 March. The information requested on spent is not available.

Offshore Installations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for E how many occasions in each year since 1978 his insp have used their powers under the Mineral Wo (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 to prohibit an activ use of equipment or to require improvement.

Mr. Wakeham: Action to effect improvement feature of almost every inspection. Such action takes against the background of inspectors' powers und Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 19 detailed breakdown of the kind requested cou provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for E how many full-time field inspectors engaged in off installation inspections were employed by his Depar in each year since 1978.

Mr. Wakeham: The number of full-time field inspectors engaged in offshore installation inspections since 1986 is set out in the table.

Date	Staff in post
1986	7
1987	5
1988	6
1989	7
1990	6

All figures relate to 1 November of the year in question. There is no data prior to 1986.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid Review

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost of publishing the 1990 annual review of British overseas aid.

Mrs. Chalker: The total cost of publishing the 1990 annual review of British overseas aid was £76,504·90, a unit cost of £5·10.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Horserace Totalisator Board

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the qualifications and (b) the dates of original appointment of members of the Horserace Totalisator Board.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Board members are appointed by the Home Secretary under section 12(2) of the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963; there are no statutory qualifications for appointment to the board, although appointment as an executive member of the board is in practice contingent upon employment by the Horserace Totalisator Board in an executive capacity. Considerations influencing the selection of non-executive members include what commercial or other relevant experience they may bring to the board.

The current members of the board, the dates of their original appointments, and their occupations, as detailed in the Tote's annual report and accounts, are as follows:

Lord Wyatt of Weeford—Member 1 November 1975, chairman 1 May 1976, Director of Satellite Information Services Ltd.

Lord Swaythling—Member 1 October 1981, chairman of Rothmans International plc, a member of the board of Banking Supervision of the Bank of England, and a non-executive director of the Daily Telegraph plc. Racehorse owner.

Mr. P. Winfield FRICS—Member 1 October 1981, Formerly senior partner of Healey & Baker until 1988 and continues to act as a full-time consultant. Chairman of Letinvest plc. and the London Auction Mart Limited, a non-executive director of Manders (Holdings) plc. and a special trustee of Guy's Hospital. Racehorse owner.

Mr. J. Sanderson FCA—Member 1 August 1983, clerk of the course at Doncaster and Catterick Bridge and a director of Thirsk, Wetherby and Phoenix Park, Dublin. He also has business interests in televised sport and leisure.

Mr. B. McDonnell CA—Executive member 1 November 1990, chief executive of the Tote.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list Government expenditure in each of the last five years on funding alternatives to the use of animals in scientific procedures, with the projects supported in each year.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Home Office has been involved in funding research into finding alternatives to the use of living animals since 1984 when financial assistance was provided to two organisations concerned with animals in research. Some £185,000 was given to the Fund for the Replacement of Animals in Medical Experiments—FRAME—to help with three projects: a feasibility study of validation of in vitro techniques which might replace animal experiments; work on a possible database of tissue culture techniques; and an examination of the use of human tissue cultures instead of animals in medical research and toxicity testing. Some £30,000 was given to the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare—UFAW—to support an evaluation of the effects of various cage sizes and social groupings on the well-being of laboratory rats.

With the passing of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, the Home Office established a scheme which is administered by a sub-committee of the Animal Procedures Committee to provide financial assistance for research for the reduction, refinement or replacement of the use of living animals in scientific procedures. The Home Office also funds research concerned with the welfare of laboratory animals. The Home Office has also supported, and part-funded, international work on acute toxicity testing aimed at further reducing the need for formal LD50 tests.

In 1988-89, the first year of the operation of the scheme, it was decided to fund the following four projects:

(i) Dr. P. A. Botham and Dr. G. J. A. Oliver, ICI Central Toxicology Laboratory. "Validation of an enucleated eye model" (£26,700 over two years)

(ii) Dr. A. F. Bristow and Dr. S. Poole, National Institute for Biological Standards and Control. "Assay of Pyrogens measuring lymphokine production in vitro". (£72,700) over three years)

(iv) Professor D. B. Morton, University of Birmingham. "Evaluation of welfare in the husbandry of laboratory rabbits". (£59,900 over three years)

In 1990-91 one further project has been funded:

Dr. D. E. S. Stewart-Tull, University of Glasgow. "Establishment of an adjuvants (immunomodulating agents) database" (£9,200) over two years)

In addition, on the advice of the Animal Procedures Committee's research sub-committee, the Home Office commissioned a report of an investigation into antibody production: this report formed the basis for appendix III of the "Report of the Animal Procedures Committee for 1989"—HC581; 24 July 1990.

In 1991-92, subject to parliamentary approval, the Home Office is making available £215,000 to assist research in this area. The Animal Procedures Committee is now seeking worth while projects for funding in the next financial year.

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to ban water sports off any bathing beaches in Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Secretary of State has no powers to ban water sports taking place off bathing beaches. Local authorities are able to make byelaws to control public bathing and to regulate the navigation of seaside pleasure boats to prevent danger to bathers, but this does not include power to prohibit particular activities taking place.

NATO

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any request has been received from (a) Interpol or (b) other sources, seeking the co-operation of Her Majesty's Government in investigations into allegations of undercover military operations by groups linked to NATO.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government have received no such request.

Overseas Voters

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions the Government have made to check that overseas voters who have registered for a proxy vote are still eligible to vote on the day of the election.

Mrs. Rumbold: Registration as an elector depends upon eligibility on the qualifying date, and not on the date of any election. No routine checks are made on whether registered electors remain eligible to vote during the currency of the register on which they are included. However, it is an offence for any person, or a proxy acting on his or her behalf, to vote at any election if that person is not eligible to vote.

Criminal Records

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the actual and recommended numbers of educational psychologists in each local education authority.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The employment of educational psychologists and the management of their educational psychology services are the responsibilities of individual local education authorities. The Department does not issue advice to LEAs on numbers of educational psychologists. The number of educational psychologists employed by each LEA on 19 January 1989 is given in the table:

School Premises Regulations

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the review of the school premises regulations announced on 2 October is to be completed; how the review is to be undertaken; when consultation with interested bodies is to begin; and when it is envisaged that the review will report to him and the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Fallon: The review will be conducted by a joint group of this Department's officials and representatives of the Welsh Office, and will draw on up-to-date information on educational needs and practice. Consultations with interested bodies are expected to begin at an early stage in the group's work. It is too early at this stage to say how long the review will take or when it will report to my right hon. Friends.

Co-ordinating Committee for Marine Science and Technology

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he intends to extend the life of the Co-ordinating Committee for Marine Science and Technology beyond 31 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend has decided to extend the three-year term of the Co-ordinating Committee for Marine Science and Technology for a further three months until 31 March 1991. This will enable the committee to consider the Government's response to its report on marine science and technology in the United Kingdom.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Coinage

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he made of the requirement for slot machines to be adapted before announcing that the demonetisation of the old 5p piece will take place on 31 December.

Mr. Maples: Every effort has been made to consult the vending industry to minimise the problems it will experience. Companies were given test coins a half years notice so that they could plan reprogramme their machines as far as po normal maintenance cycle.

The demonetisation date for the old 5p announced by the Chancellor at the Trial 27 April 1990. This gave the vending industry to prepare for the change. Most vending m now been converted to accept the new 5p c

Vehicle Tax Discs

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State Industry what criteria are applied when de general or sub post office facilities will be ava supply of motor vehicle tax discs.

Mr. Leigh: This is essentially an operation the Post Office and the Department of Tr location of outlets issuing motor vehicle lice —is determined by the Post Office, within th by the Department of Transport, and is, I understand, based on such factors as the distance to existing MVL issuing offices and the likely level of business. The size of the MVL issuing network is the result of regular review by the Department of Transport, taking into account convenience to the customer and cost to the taxpayer.

Public Utilities

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what monitoring and action is taken by his Department to stop undue pressure being placed upon the consumers of the services provided by existing or former public utilities for the payment of bills which are held to be outstanding.

Mr. Leigh: The Gas Consumers Council, whose members are appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, represents consumers' interests and investigates complaints. In doing so, it works closely with British Gas plc and the Director General of Gas Supply. British Gas plc has a code of practice on disconnections which provides that no pensioner may be cut off during the winter months and customers experiencing payment difficulties are offered gas payment plans and prepayment meters. As a result, disconnections have fallen sharply from a peak of 60,778 per annum in 1987 to 19,379 in 1989.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has set up four advisory committees on telecommunications to represent consumers' interests in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. These committees advise the Director General of the Office of Telecommunications on matters affecting consumers of telecommunications services. British Telecom has various ways of dealing with outstanding bills, including in appropriate cases negotiating a payment package for an exceptionally high bill in one quarter due to special circumstances. Moreover, when there are disputes over bills, customers will not be disconnected provided that the undisputed items on the bill are paid.

Following electricity privatisation, responsibility for electricity consumers has now passed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy.

Clothing Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give an estimate of the number of people employed in the United Kingdom clothing manufacturing industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement concerning Government policy towards that industry.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 26 November 1990]: The Department of Employment estimates that the number of employees in the clothing manufacturing industry in Great Britain in each year since 1979 was as follows:

Clothing manufacturing industry Great Britain
Group 453 and 456 (SIC 80)

Notes:
1. Group 453 (SIC80) consists of those industries involved in the manufacture of clothing, hats and gloves. Group 456 (SIC80) consists of those involved in the manufacture of fur goods.
2. Similar estimates are not available for Northern Ireland or for people other than employees in employment.
3. Estimates at this level of industrial detail are subject to substantial estimation error.

Government policy towards the clothing industry, as for industry as a whole, is to set a framework for free and fair competition and the encouragement of enterprise. A range of Government schemes for encouraging enterprise and spreading best practice is available to companies in the industry.

Machine Tool Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give an estimate of the number of people employed in the United Kingdom machine tool manufacturing industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement concerning Government policy towards that industry.

Motor Cars

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is seeking any changes in the current EC regime governing the trade in motor cars, including those of partly Japanese origin, between the member states in which they are manufactured; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 26 November 1990]: The Government are participating in discussions about the European Commission's proposals for the eventual abolition of restrictions on imports of vehicles from Japan. We are adamant that there must be no link between any continuing ceilings set for imports from Japan and the treatment of cars made in the EC by Japanese-owned companies. Such cars are European and must continue to be allowed unlimited free circulation throughout the EC. I believe that this has now been accepted by other member states and by the Commission. I will inform the House of the outcome of the discussions when agreement has been reached.

SCOTLAND

River Esk (Licences)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he has made to ensure that the National Rivers Authority does not seek to collect individual rod licence fees from Scottish anglers fishing in tributaries of the Esk in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Border Esk and its tributaries in Scotland have been subject to English fisheries legislation and administration since at least 1865. The implementation and enforcement of those provisions —including rod licence duties—is now a matter for the National Rivers Authority (NRA). I understand that the NRA is keen to allow sufficient time for consultation and agreement on the way forward and that, to this end, no charges will be made for 1991.

Football Grounds

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which grounds used by clubs in the Scottish football league are, according to information available to him, owned by local authorities.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Four clubs in the Scottish football league play at grounds owned by local authorities. The grounds are:

(1) Meadowbank stadium, home of Meadowbank Thistle, owned by Edinburgh district council.
(2) Stair park, home of Stranraer, owned by Wigtown district council.
(3) Annfield park, home of Stirling Albion, owned by Stirling district council.
(4) Shielfield park, home of Berwick Rangers, owned by Northumberland county council.

School Meals

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the results of the annual census of school meals in Scotland held in January; and what were the corresponding 1989 results.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the table. Despite a decrease in the number of pupils present on census day, the number of pupils taking school meals has risen. This reaffirms the Government view that changes in entitlement to free meals would not affect the overall uptake of meals. Free meals formed 30 per cent. of the total meals provided and the number taking their own food increased by just over 1 per cent. Cafeteria-style meals remain popular and their uptake has risen from 64 per cent. to 69 per cent. of all meals taken: there was a corresponding 5 per cent. drop in the uptake of the traditional two-course fixed meal.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Romania

23. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of reform in Romania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Romania has made some progress on democratric reform since the grave setback in June. We are also encouraged by the start of economic reform. However, we urge the Romanian Government to press ahead with further moves to transform Romania into a genuine free-market democracy.

32. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about consular assistance to British couples wishing to adopt Romanian orphans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received a number of representations on this subject. We are committed to offering whatever assistance we can to British couples wishing to adopt Romanian children.

Cambodia

24. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports Her Majesty's Government have received about the military situation in Cambodia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Information about the military situation in Cambodia is limited. The rainy season usually curtails military operations from September to November. We understand that the resistance coalition is conducting hit-and-run guerrilla operations well inside Cambodia.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many letters, cards, messages and phone calls his Department has received on Cambodia since 8 October.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since 8 October, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received about 2,500 written communications and a small number of telephone inquiries about Cambodia.

Iraq

25. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any contacts of any kind with his opposite number in Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The British ambassador in Baghdad is in contact with the Iraqi Foreign Ministry and our views are regularly made clear to the Iraqi ambassador in London.

NATO

26. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his objectives are for the meeting of the North Atlantic Council in December.

36. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his objectives are for the meeting of the North Atlantic Council in December.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The NATO summit in London this summer set in hand a wide-ranging review to adapt the alliance to the new circumstances in Europe. We plan to take stock with our NATO colleagues of the progress made and to underline the essential role that NATO will continue to play in defence of western interests.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the investigations being conducted by other NATO Governments into allegations of the existence of an undercover military organisation linked to NATO.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We do not comment on investigations being conducted by other Governments.

Intergovernmental Conference

27. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming intergovernmental conference.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Two intergovernmental conferences will be launched on 15 December, one on economic and monetary union, the other on "political union". The United Kingdom will play a full and constructive part in both, as my right hon. Friend the then Prime Minister made clear in her statement to the House on 30 October.

Middle East

28. Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what future security and political structure he envisages in the middle east after the restoration of an independent Kuwait.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Once this crisis has been satisfactorily resolved, it must be primarily for the countries of the region to decide what security structures can best ensure their long-term peace and stability. But we stand prepared to play our part in that process.

India

29. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the Prime Minister of India to discuss United Kingdom-Indian relations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans at present to meet the Prime Minister of India.

Poland

31. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to assist United Kingdom citizens who were born in Poland to return to Poland.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: British citizens of Polish extraction are free to return to Poland if they wish. There are no schemes to help with the cost of returning and we have no plans to introduce one.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between the United Kingdom and Poland.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have close and friendly relations with Poland. We were delighted to welcome Prime Minister Mazowiecki to the United Kingdom in February. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs himself visited Poland at the end of April and many other Cabinet Ministers have done so, too. We admire the courage with which the Polish Government are tackling their economic problems and will continue to give substantial help to ease the smooth transition to democracy and a market-based economy.

The Gulf

34. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the United States Secretary of State to discuss the situation in the Gulf.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met Mr. Baker in Paris on 18 November. Our views on the handling of all aspects of the Gulf crisis remain identical.

35. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest estimate he has as to the number of British citizens still being held captive in Iraq and Kuwait.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our latest estimates of British nationals detained at strategic sites are 341 for Iraq. There are no British nationals detained at strategic sites in Kuwait, though two are detained at an hotel in Kuwait. The estimates for the total numbers of Britons in those countries are 741 and 477 respectively.

Sri Lanka

37. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid is now being provided to Sri Lanka; and what was the comparable figure for 1987.

Mrs. Chalker: Gross bilateral United Kingdom aid to Sri Lanka in 1989 totalled £23·5 million. The comparable figure for 1987 was £18·7 million. The amounts break down as follows:

£ million

	1987	1989
CDC Investment	7·1	3·1
Debt Relief	1·6	1·6
Aid and Trade Provision	5·3	4·2
Technical Co-operation	4·7	8·2
Capital Aid	—	6·4

Gross bilateral aid in 1990 is expected to be of the order of £13 million excluding CDC investment.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the involvement of Sri Lankan security forces in extra-judicial killings in that country.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received many representations, both from hon. Members and from members of the public, expressing deep concern. We have frequently made it clear to the Sri Lankan Government that their security forces must maintain the highest respect for human rights.

European Commission (British Employees)

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further progress he has made towards increasing the number of British citizens employed in the European Commission.

Mr. Garel-Jones: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State, Privy Council Office to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Field) on 29 October. The response to the European fast-stream scheme is encouraging but such measures inevitably require some time to take full effect.

Single European Act

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his written answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East on 22 November, Official Report, column 200, under which legally binding authorities the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office signed the Single European Act treaty at the meetings he refers to.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the then Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker), signed the Single European Act at the plenipotentiary meetings in Luxembourg on 17 February 1986 and The Hague on 28 February 1986 under general full powers authorised by Her Majesty the Queen.

EC Political Union

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with other EEC Foreign Ministers on moves towards political union.

Mr. Hurd: I and other EC Foreign Ministers attended the European Council in Rome on 27-28 October, which discussed the preparations for the intergovernmental conference on political union. My right hon. Friend the then Prime Minister reported on those discussions to this House on 30 October.

Vietnamese Boat People

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of Vietnamese boat people currently being held in detention in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: On 24 November there were 52,716 Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong of whom 8,447 have refugee status and are accommodated in open centres. The remaining 44,269 are held in detention.

WALES

School Nurses

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many secondary schools there are in each local education authority area in Wales; and how many are served by officially appointed school nurses.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information as at September 1989 is shown in the table:

	Number of secondary schools	Number of schools served by a nurse

Rents

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the effect the policy of linking rent levels in Wales as a whole to property valuations had on council rents in each district and borough council area, on a weekly basis.

Mr. Grist: Implied capital values are used in the distribution of the real part of the increase in guideline rents for subsidy purposes. It is for each authority to set its own rents having regard to its legal obligations.

For each district, guideline rent increases for the current year, including an allowance for inflation, are shown in the table:

Teacher Training

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing the intake at each teacher training establishment in Wales for each year since 1975, together with the numbers who qualified as teachers from each establishment during the same period.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information is not available for all years requested. The information held is as follows:

Colleges of higher education

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that his Department will reimburse fully, no later than the following financial year, all levies paid by county councils in Wales to the National Rivers Authority for flood defence work; and if he will publish a definition of the pass-through arrangement which is applicable in such circumstances.

Mr. Grist: In Wales, levies from the National Rivers Authority are taken into account in calculating standard spending assessments for Welsh county councils. These assessments are based upon the use of formulae agreed with the Welsh local authority associations. Central Government support for local authority revenue expenditure (which includes meeting National Rivers Authority levies) is distributed on the basis of those assessments and is unhypothecated. Arrangements in England are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the amount and percentage of community charge not paid in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I am confident that the approach to collection adopted by Welsh charging authorities is both professional and effective and I am sure that the overwhelming majority of people will pay their community charges. I shall be seeking data about collection from authorities at the end of this financial year when the full picture for the year will be available.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many manufacturing jobs have been lost in Wales since May 1979 up to the latest availabe date, giving the reply for each year.

Mr. David Hunt: Comprehensive information regarding jobs lost is not available.

Upland Farmers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what urgent action he proposes to help upland farmers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Measures already introduced for general application, such as improved intervention support for beef and early advance payments of sheep annual premium, will help all farmers. LFA producers will additionally benefit from the enhanced suckler cow premium—which has been increased for 1991 to £51·69, the maximum permitted under EC rules—and from a supplement of 4 ecu (currently worth £3·12) to the sheep annual premium from the 1991 marketing year.

Teachers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to improve teacher morale in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I am conscious of the pressures teachers face in this period of change. Managing change is never easy, but we have taken positive steps to minimise the burden and to allow teachers more time to adjust to the pace of change. I believe that our reforms will support teachers in their work.

For example, the national curriculum will give teachers clear objectives, and local management will give schools greater flexibility as to how these objectives are achieved. As the independent interim advisory committee noted, in the medium and longer term there should be substantial gains in the self-confidence of teachers as the new arrangements are successfully introduced, and increases in their job satisfaction as the educational benefits of the changes start to be realised in practice.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which teacher unions he has met; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I met representatives of the NAS/UWT (Wales) on 7 September. Both my right hon. Friend and I are always willing to consider requests from the teacher unions for a meeting.

Parent Teacher Association

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the Parent Teacher Association.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I last met the Parent Teacher Association of Wales in November 1987 when I addressed the annual general meeting of the association.

Schools (Ministerial Visits)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the schools in Wales which he has visited.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend visited Pen-y-Dre high school, Mid Glamorgan on 19 October 1990. Since March 1990 I have visited six county primary schools, one special school and four county secondary schools in Wales. These are listed in the table:

		Date
Cwmffrwdoer County Primary School	Gwent	2 March 1990
Oakdale Secondary School	Gwent	2 March 1990
Catwg County Primary School	West Glamorgan	3 April 1990
Ysgol Pendalar (Special School)	Gwynedd	27 April 1990
Ysgol Brynrefail (Secondary)	Gwynedd	27 April 1990

NHS Trusts

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what date he aims to accept or reject the proposals that Pembrokeshire health authority be constituted as a national health service trust.

Mr. Grist: The outcome will depend on whether the authority is invited to prepare a formal application for NHS trust status following consideration of its expression of interest.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rented Land

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he proposes to take to improve the availability of agricultural land to rent.

Mr. Gummer: I believe the tenanted sector is an important element in a healthy agricultural industry, but it is clear that the current legislation is hindering the supply of land to rent. In our discussions with the main interested organisations all have recognised the need for change. I therefore intend to issue a consultative paper in the new year with a view to securing a lasting and effective change without prejudice to the position of existing tenants.

Market Regulation

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of expenditure in 1989-90 and 1990-91 by the intervention board executive agency and the Agriculture Departments on market regulation under the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Curry: Details are given in the table of the outturn for 1989-90 and the latest forecast of outturn for 1990-91.

	£ million 1989-90 (Actual Outturn)	£ million 1990-91 (Forecast Outturn)
(i) Expenditure by the Intervention Board—Executive Agency
Cereals	120·6	274·4
Oilseeds	187·0	211·0

Beef Special Premium Scheme (Northern Ireland)	11·6	5·8
Total	277·7	348·4
Grand Total	1,012·4	1,665·0

The figures for the Intervention Board-Executive Agency are net of various receipts treated as negative expenditure. Receipts from levies on the production and storage of sugar and isoglucose and on third country exports, which are regarded as Community Own Resources, are excluded.

Of the estimated outturn for 1990-91, £1,501 million is expected to be financed from the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (EAGGF); in 1989-90, £1,137 million was thus financed. However, because the United Kingdom is a net contributor to the European Community budget, the whole of this expenditure is attributable to the Exchequer. Receipts from the European Community do not always relate to expenditure in the period.

Grants and Subsidies

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of expenditure in 1989-90 and 1990-91 by the Agriculture Departments on agricultural grants and subsidies excluding market regulation under the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Curry: Details are given in the following table of the outturn for 1989-90 and the latest forecast of outturn for 1990-91.

Some of this expenditure attracts contributions from the European Community. These are mainly received in the following year. In 1990-91, £60 million is expected to be received from the fund compared with £53 million in 1989-90.

The individual figures may not add up to the totals shown due to roundings.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 27 November.

Mr. Curry: I represented the United Kingdom at this meeting of the Council.

Agreement was reached on a number of useful measures including one fixing maximum levels for pesticide residues in certain fruit and vegetables, one dealing with the health implications of the marketing of farmed game, one amending the Community regime for olive oil to take account of the gradual application of the full Community regime to Spain and Portugal and one specifying details for the second stage of the accession of Portugal to the full CAP regime.

Agreement was also reached on a Council directive laying down veterinary rules for the processing of animal waste. This provides specifically for the continuation of the traditional United Kingdom knacker industry until at least 1995 and keeps open the possibility of the trade continuing, under conditions to be determined, beyond that date.

Food Labelling

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agricult Fisheries and Food when he proposes to implement European directive on nutrition labelling; and what nutritional information will be available to Br consumers.

Mr. Maclean: The provisions of the directive broadly similar to the United Kingdom nutriti labelling guidelines issued in 1987 and the directive's r impact will, therefore, be to give further impetus to provision of nutrition information on food labels w will be of great benefit to consumers.

I am encouraging manufacturers and retailers to a the main provisions of the new directive at once an particular to give full nutritional information, at energy, protein, carbohydrate, sugars, fat, saturates, and sodium. Some changes to the Food Labe Regulations will be needed to achieve full implementa and draft amending regulations will be published comment as soon as possible.

Salmonella

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agricult Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy investigate and identify the cause of infection in each of salmonella enteritidis which leads to the compul slaughter of poultry.

Mr. Maclean: Because of the nature of the salmo organism and the many routes through which infectio a flock can occur it would not be possible in most cas identify the origin of the infection. Detailed investiga of individual cases is therefore unlikely to be an effe use of resources.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agricult Fisheries and Food if he has any evidence environmental factors such as low lime status influenc incidence of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; whether he is sponsoring any appropriate research.

Mr. Maclean: The most likely cause of bo spongiform encephalopathy was the feeding of meat bonemeal which included material derived from scra infected sheep and subsequently from bovine spongif encephalopathy-infected cattle. The feeding of rumin derived animal protein to ruminants has been banned s July 1988. A wide range of other possible factors has considered in the continuing epidemiological study o disease, but there is no evidence that any environme factors have influenced its incidence.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agricult Fisheries and Food what information he has on meas adopted in the Republic of Ireland to ensure potent bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected material f cattle does not enter the human food chain in the Un Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The Republic of Ireland operat compulsory slaughter policy in which all cattle suspe of having bovine spongiform encephalopathy slaughtered and destroyed. As the incidence of cli bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the Republic is negligible, the view of the scientific veterinary committee of the European Community is that further measures are not necessary.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations apply to the import into the United Kingdom of bovine offal which would be subject to the Bovine Offal Prohibition Regulations (1989) if originating in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The Imported Food Regulations and the Importation of Animal Products and Poultry Products Order 1980, as amended.

Fertilisers

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he has any plans to modify the fertiliser regulations to cover any products sold to growers which make feeding claims;

(2) if he has any plans to introduce standards and labelling of products sold as soil improvers.

Mr. Maclean: Soil improvers and products which make feeding claims are covered by general legislation on the sale and trading of goods, which is the responsibility of the Department of Trade and Industry.

Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the result of the laboratory test for spongiform encephalopathy carried out on the antelope calf which died at London zoo on 12 November.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what investigations he is carrying out, and what consultations he has had with London zoo, to determine the type of transmission of spongiform encephalopathy in the kudu antelope which died there recently; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The state veterinary service is in close touch with London zoo about the kudu which died on 13 November. The animal's brain has been removed for laboratory examination at the central veterinary laboratory to determine whether it had a spongiform encephalopathy. The results will be made available when the examination is completed.

Bananas

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are being taken for the protection after 1992 of the small-scale banana farmers of the Caribbean.

Mr. Curry: Until the European Commission puts forward a proposal for the banana market post-1992, specific steps to protect small-scale Caribbean banana farmers cannot be decided upon. Her Majesty's Government continue to work for effective preferential arrangements for bananas from the United Kingdom's traditional suppliers in the context of the single European market.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all nuclear weapons tests carried out by his Department since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following nuclear weapons tests have been carried out jointly with the United States since 1979:

Test	Date
Nessel	29 August 1979
Colwick	26 August 1980
Dutchess	24 October 1980
Serpa	17 December 1980
Rousanne	12 November 1981
Gibne	25 April 1982
Armada	22 April 1983

Houston	14 November 1990

RAF Bases, Germany

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) where No. 60 Squadron will be moved to after the closure of RAF Wildenrath;

(2) what is the proposed date for closure of (a) RAF Gutersloh and (b) RAF Wildenrath;

(3) where (a) 3 Squadron, (b) 4 Squadron, (c) 18 Squadron and (d) 230 Squadron, will be moved after the closure of RAF Gutersloh.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add at this stage to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Newark (Mr. Alexander) on 13 November 1990, Official Report, column 122.

Operation Granby

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether full accident investigations will be carried out on aircraft that are lost or damaged in accidents while operating in support of Operation Granby.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes, where practicable.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all accidents involving British military aircraft operating in support of Operation Granby.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been two such accidents:

18 October 1990: RAF Tornado at Tabuk, Saudi Arabia.

13 November 1990: RAF Jaguar in the desert in Saudi Arabia.

Military Exercise (Soviet Inspection)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the inspection of a military exercise by Soviet officials in the United Kingdom in September this year; what was the name of this exercise; and how many military personnel were involved.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Soviet Union conducted an inspection under the terms of the document of the Stockholm conference on confidence and security building measures in Europe in the United Kingdom from 26 to 28 September 1990. Under the terms of this document any of the 35 participating states has the right to conduct inspections on the territory of any participating state within the whole of Europe. The purpose of such inspections is to clarify doubts about compliance with the agreed measures.

The area designated for inspection by the Soviets was bounded by Holmer point, Hove, St. Catherines point, Portland Bill and Chepstow (some 12,000 sq m). Almost exactly the same area was designated by the Soviets in 1988 for the purposes of the only other inspection that has been conducted in the United Kingdom to date.

There was no significant exercise activity taking place within the designated area. The maximum number of troops on exercise within the area on any day was around 4,000.

The inspection successfully demonstrated to the Soviets the United Kingdom's continued compliance with the terms of the document.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Soviet inspectors participated in the inspection of a British military exercise in September; what sites were visited; and what was the cost of this inspection to Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Four Soviet inspectors participated in the inspection. They were accommodated at Bulford and they visited the following sites:

Salisbury Plain Training Area
Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst
Ash Ranges, Surrey
Longmoor Training Area, Hampshire
Browndown Training Area, Hampshire
School of Signals, Blandford
HQ United Kingdom Land Forces, Wilton
RAF Middle Wallop
Bovington Training Area, Dorset
Long Valley Training Area, Hampshire
Army Apprentices College, Chepstow.

The cost of the inspection is not available. Inspections are not centrally funded and costs, for the most part, lie where they fall. Costs encompass such areas as accommodation, transport, provisions and staff costs of the accompanying interpreters and escorts.

Greenham Common

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the future use of RAF Greenham Common;

(2) when he expects the 501 Tactical Missile Wing at RAF Greenham Common to be deactivated.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 6 February 1990, columns 591-92.

RAF Leuchars

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities exist at RAF Leuchars for support of F15 aircraft of the United States air force based at NAS Keflavik, Iceland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No facilities have been constructed at RAF Leuchars for the particular use of USAF F15 aircraft.

WE177

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for D what year the WE177 achieved operational statu the Royal Air Force and (ii) the Royal Navy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The WE177 free-fall bomb first entered service with the RAF in 1966 the Royal Navy in 1971.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for what was the development cost of the WE177.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It has been the p successive Governments not to reveal details nature.

INF Treaty

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for D he will list the inspections carried out by inspect the Soviet Union at RAF Greenham Common a Molesworth under the intermediate nuclear force

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The INF treaty inc stringent, mandatory and effective verification involving data exchanges, on-site inspection an peded surveillance by national intelligence measu four elements of the verification regime that a United Kingdom are as follows:

(a) initial "baseline" inspections, which took the first three months of the operation of th to verify the date exchanges;
(b) short-notice inspections of declared missil ing bases and support facilities, with a quota of 20 such inspections for each side i three years;
(c) "close-out" inspections of the operating b support facilities which have been decomm
(d) short-notice inspections of formerly decla for a period of 10 years after the eliminati missiles.

To date, the Soviets have conducted eig inspections during five visits to the United Kingd details are as follows:

19-22 August 1988
"Baseline" inspections at RAF Greenham C and RAF Molesworth.
30 October—2 November 1988
Short notice inspection at Molesworth.
18-20 January 1989
"Close-out" inspection at Molesworth, sho inspection at Greenham Common.
16-18 August 1989
Short notice inspection at Greenham Commo
23-25 May 1990
Short notice inspections at both Greenham C and Molesworth.

RAF St. Mawgan

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for what is the role and function of the propos maritime communications centre at RAF St. Ma

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Membe answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for C North (Mr. Neale) on 25 July 1990, column 301.

Phantom Aircraft Squadrons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for whether any decision has been made on what to the Phantom aircraft of Nos. 19 and 92 squ following the disbanding of those squadrons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No decision has yet been taken.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest assessment of the size of the Soviet Union's stockpile of chemical weapons, in terms of quantity of chemical agents.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We continue to assess that the Soviet stockpile of chemical warfare agents is several times greater than the figure of 50,000 tonnes declared by the Soviets themselves in 1987.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which beryllium compounds are used in the United Kingdom's nuclear weapons programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Beryllium in metallic form is used at the atomic weapons establishment sites at Aldermaston, Cardiff and Burghfield.

RAF Molesworth

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future use of RAF Molesworth.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West (Sir A. Grant) on 11 January 1990, at column 691.

NATO

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of undercover organisations by NATO.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the Government's practice to comment on such questions.

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any additional orders have been placed with Vickers plc for the supply of spare parts for Challenger tanks as a result of the deployment of forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Alan Clark: Yes.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any additional orders have been placed with GKN plc for the supply of spare parts for Warrior armoured vehicles as a result of the deployment of forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Alan Clark: Orders already in the pipeline with GKN for the support of Warrior armoured vehicles have been brought forward as a result of the deployment of forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the operational availability of armoured vehicles deployed with the 7 Armoured Brigade has been increased or reduced since their deployment to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The armoured vehicles deployed with the 7 Armoured Brigade underwent a programme of modification to improve their performance in harsh desert conditions. We are satisfied with the resultant operational availability.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to improve the operational availability of armoured vehicles deployed with the 4 Armoured Brigade once they have been moved to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The armoured vehicles that will deploy with 4 Brigade will be modified on arrival in the Gulf to ensure that operational availability is maintained in the harsh desert environment.

British Army of the Rhine

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the operational availability of those forces deployed with the British Army of the Rhine which will not be deployed to the Gulf has declined or increased since 16 September.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The decision to increase our ground forces in the Gulf to divisional strength will have some adverse effect upon the availability of the remaining forces in Germany. Our NATO allies are aware of the planned deployments.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present number of (a) infantry battalions, (b) armoured regiments and (c) artillery regiments deployed with the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
(a) Infantry Battalions	10
(b) Armoured Regiments	11
(c) Artillery Regiments	9

These figures exclude units that have already deployed to the Gulf or are earmarked to do so.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the supply of spare parts for Challenger tanks and Warrior vehicles currently deployed with the British Army of the Rhine has altered as a result of the deployment of the 7 Armoured Brigade to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The units deployed to the Gulf from BAOR took their vehicles and a full scale of spares with them. Additional spares have also been supplied as necessary, with some consequential effects on the spares position in BAOR.

The Gulf

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what approximate number of reservists will be required for the deployment of further troops in the Gulf announced on 22 November.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of reservists required as a consequence of deployments to the Gulf will depend on the results of detailed planning, which has yet to be completed.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the nature of the skills that will be required from reservists as a result of the deployment of further troops in the Gulf announced on 22 November.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence made clear when making his announcement on 22 November, we will particularly need members of the reserve with medical experience or training.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he anticipates sending further forces to the Gulf in addition to the deployment announced on 22 November.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The military situation in the Gulf is kept under constant review. The deployment of further British forces in due course is not ruled out.

Attack Helicopter

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has yet reached a decision on the choice of new attack helicopter for the Army.

Mr. Alan Clark: As previously announced, we have participated along with three other European nations in joint studies of the feasibility of developing a light attack helicopter (LAH) based on the Agusta A129 design.

Although these studies have demonstrated the feasibility of such a development, unfortunately, and despite the best efforts of all parties involved, it appears that development of a solution that would meet the requirements of all four nations would not be economic. Additionally, as a result of international developments since the studies were initiated, including the CFE agreement, the number of aircraft required by some nations has reduced below the level at which a collaborative A129-LAH would be economically viable, and the Governments concerned have decided not to proceed with a LAH development.

We are continuing to evaluate other options for meeting the British Army's requirement for a new attack helicopter, but it is likely to be some time before I am able to announce our conclusions.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Ibbs Report

Sir Geoffrey Howe: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the response of the Commission to the report by Sir Robin Ibbs on House of Commons services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Beith: On 21 May Sir Robin Ibbs was invited by the House of Commons Commission to undertake a review of the management and decision-taking structures of the House. The report of the team led by Sir Robin was presented to the Commission on 29 October and was further considered by the Commission last week. It was published today in full as House of Commons paper 38.

The Commission is grateful to Sir Robin and his colleagues for reporting so promptly on the complex issues referred to them and for their constructive recommendations. The Commission welcomes the proposals in the report as providing a coherent framework for the evolution of the management, financial control and decision-making structures of the House establishment of a single budget for House of services under the Commission's control.

Many detailed issues remain to be res Commission expects, however, to take steps next few months towards implementing the p the report, in co-operation with and subject to with the other bodies involved.

Meanwhile, the Commission will welcome from Members, the staff of the House and ot should be addressed in the first instance to the the Commission.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

"House of Cards"

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Lord Presi Council what facilities in the Palace of Westm made available to the makers of the drama se of Cards".

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 23 Novemb understand representatives from the drama se of Cards" were admitted to the Palace in orde impression of the interior with a view to c appropriate sets or obtaining locations elsewh

EMPLOYMENT

Action for Jobs

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary o Employment how much of the expenditure o advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) outdo ing, (d) regional campaigns, (e) exhibition m research and (g) presentations for action 1986-87 was spent through the Central Information.

Mr. Jackson: All the expenditure on press radio advertising, outdoor advertising and r action for jobs in 1986-87 was spent through Office of Information. Expenditure on actio presentations and exhibition material in 1986- placed through the Central Office of Informa was no expenditure on regional campaigns fo jobs in 1986-87.

Careers Service

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of Employment whether he has any plans to t whole or any part of the careers service to loca companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 27 November arrangements for careers guidance are cu subject of an internal review. The review te presenting its recommendations shortly. A situation for local enterprise companies, responsibility of my right hon. and learned Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to privatise the whole or parts of the careers service now provided by local education authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 27 November 1990]: As the hon. Member is aware, on 25 July this year, a feasibility study was announced to consider options for the future of the careers and occupational information centre (COIC), including options for transferring it to the private sector. The results of this study as well as that of the careers guidance review are due out soon.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Complaints

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints against the police in England and Wales, including the Metropolitan police, were completed, whether formally or informally, in each of the last four years for which figures are available; of those how many were substantiated and how many were unsubstantiated; how many were informally resolved and how many were withdrawn or not proceeded with; and of those complaints that were substantiated, how many resulted in criminal charges being brought, how many resulted in disciplinary charges being brought and how many resulted in advice being given.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information relating to the numbers of complaints completed, and how many of these were substantiated, unsubstantiated, informally resolved and withdrawn or not proceeded with, are given in the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary, for all forces in England and Wales other than the Metropolitan police. Figures are also given in the reports in relation to complaints which resulted in criminal charges, disciplinary charges, or were dealt with by other means.

The annual reports of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis show corresponding figures up to and including the year 1987. Information in relation to complaints substantiated, unsubstantiated, informally resolved and withdrawn or not proceeded with is not given in the Commissioner's reports for 1988 and 1989 owing to a change of format, and is as follows:

	1988	1989
Substantiated	184	103
Unsubstantiated	2,308	1,906
Informally resolved	1,121	1,207
Withdrawn or not proceeded with (including those where dispensations were granted by the Police Complaints Authority or which were trivial or ill-founded)	3,321	3,657
TOTAL	6,934	6,873

Copies of all these reports can be found in the Library.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list separately for each of the last four years for which figures are available the number of charges of which officers in England and Wales were convicted arising from (a) complaints and (b) other information in each of the offence groups (i) violence against the person, (ii) sexual offences, (iii) burglary, (iv) robbery, (v) theft and handling stolen goods, (vi) fraud and forgery, (vii) criminal damage, (viii) pe corruption, (x) other indictable offences, (xi) as other offences (not traffic) and (xiii) traffic offe

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information relating to th of officers convicted of criminal offences, to w investigation arose from a complaint or fr circumstances, and whether the charge was in r traffic offence or a non-traffic offence, is annually in the reports of Her Majesty's Chief In Constabulary, for all forces in England and W than the Metropolitan police, and of the Comm Police of the Metropolis. More detailed informa types of offences involved is not available.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of St Home Department if he will list for each year the number of complaints against the police co England and Wales in which racially disc behaviour was alleged; how many of th substantiated and how many were unsubstanti many were informally resolved; of those substantiated, how many resulted in a disciplin being preferred; what was the outcome of such c if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available informa follows:

Number of complaints

	1985	1986	1987	1
Recorded[1]	83	197	180
Formally investigated	57	142	131
Substantiated	0	4	4
Unsubstantiated	57	138	127

[1] Does not include complaints which were r subsequently withdrawn.

Information relating to any subsequent d proceedings or to the number of complaints resolved is not held centrally, and could be obt at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of St Home Department if he will list all those author maintain bodies of constables, other th authorities, which have concluded agreement Police Complaints Authority for the establi procedures corresponding to those established of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 he has approved, pursuant to section 96 of tha if he will list separately those authorities whic bodies of constables which have not concl agreements.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Agreements under section 1984 Act have been approved in respect of the Defence police, the British transport police, Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority police, t London Authority police and Port of Liverp There are 22 other private police forces of w aware which do not have such agreements.

The 22 forces—the list is not exhaustiv follows:

Port of Bristol Police
Dover Harbour Board Police
Falmouth Dock Police
Port of Felixstowe Police
Manchester Dock Police

Milford Docks Police
Tees and Hartlepool Port Authority Police
Great Yarmouth Port and Haven Commissions River Inspectorate
Royal Parks Constabulary
Royal Botanic Gardens Constabulary

Epping Forest Rangers

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year from 1985 the numbers of Metropolitan police officers who were charged with disciplinary offences following a successful civil action against the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for a wrongful act by an officer; and, in respect of each charge, whether the offence was proved and what punishment was imposed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This information is not kept nationally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list separately for each of the last four years for which figures are available the number of police officers in England and Wales who (a) resigned after criminal charges had been preferred against them but before such proceedings were completed, (b) resigned after disciplinary charges had been preferred against them but before such proceedings had been completed, (c) were under suspension at the time of their resignation and (d) resigned while under investigation for disciplinary matters.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information relating to the numbers of officers who resigned after disciplinary criminal charges had been preferred against them but before the proceedings had been completed, the numbers of officers who resigned while under investigation, and the number of officers who were permitted to resign while under suspension, are given in the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary, for all forces in England and Wales other than the Metropolitan police. Equivalent information in relation to Metropolitan police officers is contained in the annual reports of the Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis, except that figures relating to officers who resigned before criminal proceedings against them were completed, or while they were under investigation for criminal matters are available only up to and including the year 1987. The information for later years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 5 July, 7 September and 19 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Z. Saleem of 5 Argyle avenue, Manchester.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am sorry that the right hon. Member had not had a reply to his letter. Urgent inquiries are now being made of the entry clearance officer in Islamabad about Mr. Saleem's application. My right hon. Friend will write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 17 July, 7 September and 19 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Z. Mohammed of 2 Holstone close, Manchester.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the response has been delayed and my right hon. Friend will reply to the right hon. Member in the very near future.

Seals

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to provide continuing protection for seals under the Conservation of Seals Act 1970, following the expiry of the two orders laid under section 3(1) in 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have now laid before Parliament the Conservation of Seals (England) Order 1990 which provides permanent close-season protection for both common and grey seals for three years in an area stretching along the North sea coast from the border between England and Scotland to Newhaven on the south coast. This order will come into effect on 19 December, to coincide with the expiry of the orders laid in 1988.

My right hon. and learned Friend the former Secretary of State for Scotland has also laid the Conservation of Seals (Common Seals) (Shetland Islands Area) Order 1990 to provide similar protection for common seals in the Shetland Islands for one year while population surveys are carried out.

Both these orders have been laid following advice from the Natural Environment Research Council. The phocine distemper virus affected principally common seals in the southern part of the North sea. Because of the difficulties in identifying seals in the water, and to reduce the risk of a common seal being shot in mistake for a grey seal, the Conservation of Seals (England) Order 1990 extends to both common and grey seals.

PACE Codes of Practice

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has held, and from what bodies he has received representations, under section 69 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act or otherwise, in respect of new codes of practice A, B, C and D since those codes were originally published in July; and whether he intends to further modify the codes as a result of these additional consultations or representations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since the draft revised codes were laid before Parliament on 9 July, further representations have been received from the Association of Chief Police Officers, the Metropolitan police, the British Deaf Association, members of the Bar and several other individuals, with all of whom there had been discussions or correspondence since the original versions of the draft revised codes were published in August 1989.

In the light of these representations, additional amendments have been made to the text of the draft revised codes. They were re-laid before Parliament on 8 November and now await debate in both Houses.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the sexual offences, distinguishing between those committed by men and women, for which the Government propose longer custodial sentences; and what is his policy in respect of imposing longer custodial sentences for non-violent sex offences.

Mr. John Patten: The Government's policy, as set out in paragraph 3.13 of the White Paper "Crime Punishment and Protecting the Public" (Cm. 965 February 1990), is that the Crown court should have the power to give a sentence longer than that justified by the seriousness of the offence but within the maximum prescribed for that offence to a persistent and violent offender, if this is necessary to protect the public from serious harm.

Clause 25(1) of the Criminal Justice Bill defines the sexual offences for which it is proposed that this power should be available. Excluding offences triable only on indictment, which are not subject to the provisions of clause 3 regarding the length of sentence which may be imposed, the offences covered by clause 25(1) are as follows:

Sexual Offences Act 1956
- (1) Intercourse with a girl under 16 (section 6)
- (2) Indecency between men (section 13)
- (3) Indecent assault on a woman (section 14)
- (4) Indecent assault on a man (section 15)
- (5) Permitting a girl under 16 to use premises for intercourse (section 26)
- (6) Solicitation by a man (section 32)

Indecency with Children Act 1960
- (7) Indecent conduct towards young children (section 1)

Sexual Offences Act 1967
- (8) Procuring others to commit homosexual acts (section 4)
- (9) Living on the earnings of a male prostitute (section 5)

Criminal Law Act 1977
- (10) Inciting a girl under 16 to have incestuous sexual intercourse (section 54)

Protection of Children Act 1978
- (11) Offences concerning indecent photographs of children (section 1)

The offences under sections 6, 13 and 32 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956, under section 4 of the Sexual Offences Act 1967 and under section 54 of the Criminal Law Act 1977 may be committed only by a man; the remaining offences may be committed by a person of either sex.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

The Gulf

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of his most recent discussions with Saudi Arabia on the conditions for military intervention in Kuwait and Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: King Fahd reaffirmed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in September and to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence two weeks ago Saudi Arabia's commitment to achieving unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait and the return of the legitimate Government. United Kingdom forces were the subject of a statement to the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 22 November.

Mr. Sherrard Cowper-Coles

Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of a speech by Mr. Sherrard Cowper-Coles, first secretary at the British embassy in Washington, to the Boston investor responsibility research centre.

Mr. Hurd: The reports of the remarks by the British official at a seminar in Boston on 11 October have selected comments from a briefing which was being given to increase support in the United States for fair employment legislation in Northern Ireland. The official was not speaking from a text.

I regret the offence which has been caused by these remarks. They do not reflect the views of Her Majesty's Government.

Fish Stocks, South Atlantic

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has yet reached agreement with the Government of Argentina for the conservation of fish stocks in the South Atlantic.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Yes: a joint statement on the conservation of fisheries in the south Atlantic ocean was agreed with the Government of Argentina on 28 November and announced by both Governments on that day. Copies of the statement have been placed in the Library of the House.

The joint statement issued under the sovereignty umbrella provides for a temporary total ban on fishing from 26 December 1990 in an area defined in an annex to the statement. It also provides for co-operation between the two Governments in the conservation of fish stocks. We regard the joint statement as an important conservation measure and a welcome development in Anglo-Argentine co-operation.

ENERGY

British Gas

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many computer runs to detect multiple share applications for British Gas shares by fuzzy matching and other computerised techniques have been carried out in each year from 1986 to 1989 and in 1990 to date;

(2) what has been the estimated average cost of each computer run to detect multiple share applications for British Gas.

Mr. Wakeham: Work since 1987 has been carried out by the police, not by my department. Information in the form requested is not readily available.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what factors determined the price for shares in the regional electricity companies.

Mr. Wakeham: In determining the share price the key factor was the dividend yield to be applied to pro forma dividends disclosed in the prospectus. The offer was priced having regard both to current stock market circumstances and to the fact that the price has to be robust to movements in the stock market up till the start of dealings.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what consultations he had with the Association of District Councils or the Welsh Association of District Councils regarding profit-sharing arrangements for showrooms previously owned by municipal electricity undertakings and disposed of post-privatisation by the electricity distribution companies;

(2) what consultations he undertook with the Association of District Councils regarding the arrangements for clawback or profit-sharing on electricity distribution company properties, previously owned by municipal electricity undertakings and disposed of for other purposes post-privatisation;

(3) what representations he has received regarding clawback or profit-sharing arrangements with the appropriate local authorities for properties vested in electricity distribution companies, owned by municipal electricity companies before 1948, and disposed of for non-electricity related purposes post-privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: I have not received any such representations or held such consultations.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on what date he was first approached by MCA Merchandising regarding the requirement for a licence fee relating to copyright for the advertising campaign for the flotation of the electricity distribution companies.

Mr. Wakeham: Her Majesty's Government have never been approached by MCA Merchandising regarding a licence fee relating to copyright for the advertising for the flotation of the distribution companies. This is a matter between MCA Merchandising and WCRS, the advertising agency.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent discussions he has had with the chairmen of National Power and PowerGen regarding the proposed dates for stock market flotation.

Mr. Wakeham: The details of my discussions with the chairmen of National Power and PowerGen are confidential. I intend to float both generating companies next February, subject to market conditions.

Home Insulation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 22 November to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras, Official Report, column 178, if he will place in the Library a copy of the preliminary view of the Energy Action Grants Agency on the scale of insulation and advice which can be undertaken in each locality using grants under the home energy efficiency scheme.

Mr. Wakeham: The provision of information to organisations wishing to be registered as network installers under the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) is a matter for the Energy Action Grants Agency (EAGA). I have today placed in the Library copies of the information sent by EAGA to all those organisations applying for registration, including the preliminary view taken by EAGA on the broad scale of insulation and advice that network installers might be able to undertake using grants under HEES.

ENVIRONMENT

National Gypsy Council

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money his Department has allocated to the National Gypsy Council in each year from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Key: The National Gypsy Council has received funding towards its administration costs from my Department's small grants and special grants programmes since 1978. The amounts of grant have been as follows:

1978-79	6,300
1979-80	6,930
1980-81	7,600
1981-82	9,100
1982-83	12,000
1983-84	12,720
1984-85	13,300
1985-86	13,860
1986-87	14,300
1987-88	14,660
1988-89	14,953
1989-90	14,953

Grants under the special grants programme are given to assist voluntary organisations become established or to carry out specific projects. It is not the intention to provide permanent funding and grants are normally given for a maximum of three years. In the case of the National Gypsy Council, it was felt that their work was sufficiently valuable to warrant a longer period of support, but this is now being progressively withdrawn so that they have the stimulus to become more self-sufficient.

Empty Housing

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the most recent figure for local authority housing empty for over one year in England.

Mr. Key: Local authorities report the number of their dwellings which have been empty for over one year in their annual housing investment programme returns—HIP1. The estimated total of such dwellings in England at 1 April 1990 appears in column A188 of "1990 HIP1—Regional Grossing", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many private dwellings in England have remained empty for more than 12 months.

Mr. Key: A recent estimate is not available.

Diesel Smoke

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations control the emission of diesel smoke from equipment used on building and construction sites; which agency is responsible for enforcement; and what action has been taken to control such emissions.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Part III of the Public Health Act 1936, to be replaced on 1 January 1991 by the strengthened and improved provisions in part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, applies to emissions which could be prejudicial to the health of or a nuisance to people in the vicinity of such equipment. Section 1 of the Clean Air Act 1968 applies to dark smoke emissions from building or construction sites. Local authorities are responsible for taking action under both measures as the need arises. The Health and Safety at Work Act., etc. 1974 and Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations apply to emissions which may be hazardous to the health of workers on building or construction sites: the Health and Safety Executive is responsible for enforcement.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many circulars the Housing Corporation has issued between January and September 1990; and at what cost.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department does not hold the information requested. I have asked the Housing Corporation to write to my hon. Friend.

Community Charge (Exemption Certificates)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to review the guidelines issued to general practitioners who sign exemption certificates in respect of the poll tax to seek to achieve greater consistency in interpretation of the current rules.

Mr. Key: Advice was issued to general practitioners by the Department of Health and to local authorities by my Department on 2 July; there is no intention at present to issue any further advice.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list 20 per cent. of the community charge for each local authority;

(2) if he will list the numbers exempted from paying the community charge due to severe mental impairment by each local authority in England.

Mr. Key: I am arranging for the available information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many pensioners have (a) ceased to be eligible for exemption from community charge as a result of SI 1990 No. 462 or (b) had to wait for receipt of attendance allowance to fulfil the conditions for exemption from community charge.

Mr. Key: Information is held only on the numbers of people who fall within each exempt group. SI 1990/462 increased the scope of the exemption from the personal community charge for those who are severely mentally impaired by providing that the cause of that condition should be disregarded and amending the list of qualifying conditions. The inclusion of attendance allowance and constant attendance allowance for these purposes, for which entitlement continues beyond pensionable age, meant that the condition that a person should be of pensionable age was no longer required.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the reappointments of the members of the London residuary body.

Mr. Key: The following have been reappointed to the London residuary body for the period 1 January 1991 to 31 March 1993 or until the dissolution of the body, whichever is sooner:

Members:
Councillor Sir Peter Bowness, CBE, DL
J Esling
W Mackenzie, OBE
M C Roberts
J Wolkind, CBE

The London residuary body has completed the bulk of its ex-GLC tasks and has already distributed £486 million in capital receipts and £184 million in revenue balances for the benefit of London's chargepayers.

The reappointments reflect my right hon. Friend's confidence in the board's ability to discharge the new tasks which the residuary body assumed on 1 April 1990 on the abolition of ILEA.

Dispatch Services

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the outcome of the sale competition for the Crown Suppliers' vehicle hire business and the interdepartmental dispatch service.

Mr. Portillo: Discussions are continuing on the sale of the Crown Suppliers' vehicle hire and maintenance business. An announcement will be made as soon as possible. There are no acceptable bids for the interdepartmental dispatch service, which will, therefore, be retained in government.

Local Government Economic Development

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any representations about the Local Government (Promotion of Economic Development) Regulations 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Association of District Councils and a number of individual councils have argued that it would be sufficient if local authorities that are not education authorities consulted their local education authority about the programmes of education and training that they provide for economic development purposes. We have accepted this, and the Department is consulting the local authority associations on draft regulations to replace the current requirement to obtain the consent of the local education authority to those programmes with a requirement to consult the local education authority. The draft regulations also make it clear that the new economic development power is not intended to change the rules on the disposal of land at less than the best considered reasonably obtainable.

Council House Sales

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many dwellings each local authority has sold under the right to buy legislation, or voluntarily, in each year since 1979; and what percentage of the total local authority stock they represent.

Mr. Key: I have placed in the Library two tables giving available information on local authority sales up to June 1990. Table 1 shows year by year information for each authority during the years 1979-80 to 1985-86. Table 2 shows year by year information for each authority since 1985-86 together with cumulative figures since April 1979 and the proportion of their stock sold since April 1979.

Hostels

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money will be made available for the development of the two direct access hostels in Lambeth and Islington to meet long-term emergency housing needs in north and south London; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

The Resettlement Agency is committed to completing the Camberwell replacement programme including assisting with the funding of a further two direct access hostels. As there have been no viable proposals for these hostels, none of the agency's funding has been allocated for them. Should such proposals be received they will be considered by the chief executive who will weigh them alongside the rest of the agency's replacement priorities.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General how many vacancies there are currently in the Crown prosecution service for (a) solicitors or barristers and (b) other staff.

The Attorney-General: The Crown prosecution service currently has 377 vacancies for solicitors or barristers, with a total of 1,674 being in post. It has 21·5 vacancies for other staff, with 2,753·5 being in post.

TRANSPORT

A6, Higham Ferrers

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider the installation of a pedestrian crossing on the A6 at the market square, Higham Ferrers.

Mr. Chope: A request for a pelican crossing on the A6 has been received from Higham Ferrers town council and is being considered. A decision is expected by the end of the year.

Railway Electrification

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals British Rail has put to him for extending the electrification of the Hooton to Chester and Helsby railway line.

Mr. McLoughlin: British Rail, together with Cheshire county council and other local councils and the Merseyside passenger transport authority, has proposed that the lines from Hooton to Chester and to Ellesmere Port should be electrified. I am examining this proposal.

Cam Spirit

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department's inspectors are satisfied that the vessel Cam Spirit is suitable for use as a standby vessel for North sea operations.

Mr. McLoughlin: A standby vessel for North sea operations has to be surveyed annually if a certificate of inspection is to be issued to it under a code published by the Department. The Cam Spirit satisfied the requirements of this code when she was last surveyed by a marine surveyor in December 1989. The next survey is due in a few weeks.

THE ARTS

Sound Amplification

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will obtain for his office's library a copy of the recent report produced jointly by the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust and the Arts Council on provision for hard-of-hearing audiences, entitled, "Sound Off".

Mr. Renton: I have already done so. The report is a helpful survey of the provision of sound amplification equipment in London's theatres. It also explains how theatres, cinemas, museums, galleries, libraries and other arts venues can apply to the ADAPT fund. This fund is part funded by the Government and assists in making essential adaptations and providing facilities for people with disabilities.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to encourage increased provision for sound amplification equipment in theatres, concert halls and opera houses.

Mr. Renton: My aim is for the arts to be accessible to everyone. The Government have given £150,000 to the Carnegie Trust's ADAPT fund for the improvement of facilities for disabled people in arts venues. By use of challenge grants the fund aims to encourage additional and at least equal, financial contributions from local communities. Some of the fund has been used to assist with the installation of sound amplification equipment, and applications are invited for further projects.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Private Investors

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of United Kingdom share capital was held by private investors in each year since 1979.

Mr. Maude: Up-to-date information on the share capital held by private individuals is not yet available. Results from December 1989 survey of share registers conducted by the Central Statistical Office are due to be published in the near future.

Current estimates of the value of ordinary and preference shares held by the personal sector, which consists of individuals resident in the United Kingdom, unincorporated private businesses, sole trader and partnerships, non-profit making bodies serving persons and private trusts are as follows:

UK Ordinary and Preference Shares held by the Personal Sector

End Year	Market value of shares outstanding of which
	Total	Personal Sector	Personal Sector Percentage share
	(£ billion	(£ billion)
1979	83·5	29·8	35·8
1980	105·7	37·1	35·2
1981	115·6	36·7	31·7
1982	141·5	43·3	30·6
1983	178·3	52·3	29·4
1984	226·6	59·1	26·1
1985	267·2	66·5	24·9
1986	349·9	91·1	26·0
1987	395·8	117·9	29·8
1988	429·0	123·4	28·8
1989	550·0	145·9	26·5

These figures are consistent with those to be published in table 14.5 of the December issue of "Financial Statistics".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Prosecutions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will prosecute Charles Church Development, and Torday and Carlisle, Prowting under section 234(3) and (7) and paragraph 5 of schedule 3 to the Companies Act 1985 for failure to specify the recipients of political donations.

Mr. Redwood: In accordance with its usual practice in response to specific allegations of non-compliance with statutory disclosure requirements, my Department will look into this.

Scottish Electricity Industry

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he proposes to exlude from the application of United Kingdom restrictive trade practices legislation the contracts entered into between the successor companies to the Scottish electricity boards for the restructuring of the Scottish electricity industry prior to privatisation.

Mr. Redwood: Scottish Power plc and Scottish Hydro-Electric plc are required by the terms of their licences to enter into certain restructuring contracts, which are designed to give the companies access to a balanced portfolio of generating assets on a long-term basis and to govern the operation of their transmission assets. The Government intend that these contracts should, in view of their fundamental importance to the restructuring of the Scottish electricity supply industry for the purpose of privatisation, be excluded from the ambit of United Kingdom restrictive trade practices legislation. Yesterday, I therefore laid before the House an order made under section 100(2) of the Electricity Act 1989, exempting the contracts from the ambit of the Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976.

For the future, the Government are proposing to introduce new legislation on restrictive trade practices, in implementation of the proposals outlined in the White Paper "Opening Markets: New Policy on Restrictive Trade Practices"—CM 727—published in July 1989. It is our intention that the exemptions granted to the Scottish restructuring contracts under current restrictive trade practices legislation should be carried forward by means of an exclusion from the proposed prohibition on restrictive agreements. The proposed legislation will be introduced when parliamentary time permits.

Government Contracts

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the Government contracts preference schemes (GCPS).

Mr. Leigh: The Government contracts preference schemes, which apply in the development areas of Great Britain, and in Northern Ireland, have been little used in recent years. The schemes were introduced in the 1930s, and aim to give opportunities to businesses in those areas to secure public sector contracts if their bids are competitive. In Northern Ireland, though not in Great Britain, a price preference of 5 per cent. has been allowable for goods manufactured in the Province.

In the development of a more open framework of public sector procurement rules within the Community, and in the broader approach to the single market, the Government agree with the EC Commission and other member states that it is inappropriate for public sector procurement contracts to be reserved for businesses in particular areas, even the very limited provisions of the United Kingdom's schemes.

The Government have therefore decided that the contract preference schemes are to be terminated. Applications from businesses to be recorded as eligible under the schemes will not be accepted after close of business on 31 December 1990.

This arrangement provides a short period of notice of termination, and is intended to minimise the effect on businesses which may have prepared, or are preparing, bids and tenders in the expectation that the schemes would be in place. It means that for prospective contracts and invitations first issued by the schemes' participating purchasing organisations on or before 31 December 1990, eligible applicants may continue to use the scheme up to the stage of tender and final contract even when the contract-placing timetables go beyond that date. However, the schemes will not apply in any respect for new prospective contracts or invitations to tender issued after 31 December 1990.

Help for businesses to effectively compete for public procurement contracts is now being offered in a number of ways under European and national programmes. The EC Commission's initiative to help businesses in objective 1 regions prepare for the single market—PRISMA—will be available in Northern Ireland. The Commission is also examining the potential to use existing initiatives more effectively, such as the Euro info centre and business co-operation networks, and the tenders electronic daily system, as a means of disseminating information on public procurement contracts to smaller companies.

My Department's single market campaign stresses the importance of the European public procurement market and a "Guide to Public Procurement" booklet is being issued widely. Enterprise initiative consultancy support in marketing and other business disciplines will help improve the competitiveness of firms bidding for public contracts, and more widely. Our "Managing into the 90s" programme is also promoting good purchasing practice. In addition, regional and local government development agencies, chambers of commerce and other private sector bodies are increasingly encouraging their member businesses to pay close attention to the opportunities of the public procurement market.

New Businesses

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new businesses have been set up in Amber Valley since 1979.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Between the end of 1979 and the end of 1989, there were an estimated 3,400 new registrations for VAT in the Amber Valley local authority district. During the same period, there were an estimated 2,700 deregistrations, giving a net increase of 700, or 29 per cent.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Haberdashers' Aske's CTC

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all amendments and variations from the terms of the model funding agreement for city technology colleges deposited in the Library in 1989, which he now intends to include in the specific agreement to fund a Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to sign a funding agreement with the Haberdashers' Aske's Hatcham College Trust substantially the same in all respects as the revised model agreement placed in the Library on 31 October this year. This supersedes the version placed in the Library last Summer.

Natural Environment Research Council

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, whether he has received the annual report of the Natural Environment Research Council for 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The annual report of the Natural Environment Research Council has been submitted to my right hon. and learned Friend under the requirements of the Science and Technology Act 1965, and a copy is being laid before the House today.

In the year that the Government's White Paper on the environment, "This Common Inheritance" was published, I believe that the council's report amply demonstrates the way it has been able to focus multidisciplinary research on a range of important global, regional and local environmental issues, including:

(a) the uptake of carbon dioxide by the oceans through two studies the North sea project, from which results indic the physical uptake of carbon dioxide by the particular pollutants on key marine species, and the these species as "biological detectives" to monitor the of pollution for the ecosystem as whole;

EC Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether local authorities in Gwynedd, Dyfed and Powys have adequate matching resources to enable them to take up fully the funds available from the European Community under the IOP for those three counties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Expected receipts from the European Community are taken into account when setting the level of public expenditure, so that spending is higher than would otherwise be the case. Local authorities within the area of the Dyfed, Gwynedd and Powys national programme of community interest benefit from increased credit approvals and reduced borrowing requirements.

Roads

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many persons are currently employed in the roads division of the Welsh Office; and what was the corresponding number in 1979.

Sir Wyn Roberts: At 1 October 1990, a total of 160·5 staff—excluding central support services staff—were employed in the Welsh Office transport and highways divisions. At 30 September 1979 the equivalent figure was 156·5.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place a copy in the Library of his Department's policy guidelines in relation to the use of the Welsh language in Wales by his Department.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Current policy regarding the use of Welsh in the internal administration of the department is based on the guidelines set out in the Hughes Parry report on the status of the Welsh language. This policy is currently being reviewed in the light of the guidelines prepared by the Welsh Language Board. I will place a copy of any new guidelines in the Library of the House once they have been finalised.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the total Government expenditure on the promotion and development of the Welsh language in each year since 1985.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Since 1984-85, Government grants for the Welsh language made under section 21 of the Education Act 1980 and under section 26 of the Development of Rural Wales Act 1976 have been:

Year	Section 21 (local education authorities)	Section 21 (other bodies)	Section 26	Total

Care and Repair Schemes

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is undertaking any initiatives to extend the geographical availability of care and repair schemes in Wales.

Mr. Grist: We are currently considering the future funding of Care and Repair (Wales) which will have responsibility for the further development of new schemes in Wales.

Waste Disposal Sites

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set up an independent environmental audit of all licensed waste disposal sites in Wales.

Mr. Grist: No. My right hon. Friend will receive from Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution regular reports of audits of each of the waste regulation authorities' operations.

Medical Negligence Claims

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department holds on successful medical negligence claims made against health authorities in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The legal division of the Welsh Office acts for district health authorities in Wales in relation to medical negligence claims and therefore holds relevant files. Information held by that division is subject to the usual rules of solicitor-client confidentiality. The Department also holds financial information relating to the settlement of any individual claims in excess of £30,000.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report, for the latest available date, the number of schools that have applied for grant-maintained status in Wales, separately distinguishing primary and secondary schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Two schools in Wales have applied for grant-maintained status. Both are secondary schools.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what statutory responsibilities health authorities in Wales have for dealing with an outbreak of food-related disease in the human population.

Mr. Grist: The specific statutory responsibilities duties and powers which are significant in the handling of a food poisoning outbreak are placed upon local auth However, Welsh Office guidance to local authori district councils to ensure that they appoint, as officer for the discharge of functions relating to the of outbreaks of food poisoning, a consult communicable disease control of the district authority.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of S Wales if he will give the truancy figures for each of education authorities in Wales for each year sin

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested collected centrally.

Nursery Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of S Wales if he proposes to increase local education a funding to enable local education authority cuts in school provision to be restored.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The responsibility for nurser provision lies with local education authorities. Th determine the level of provision in line wi assessment of priorities within the education serv

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of S Wales how many city technology colleges ther Wales; how many are proposed; and if he will statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None. I am ready to consider any proposals put forward to establish a college.

Historic Buildings

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the total Government expenditure on the upkeep, care and protection of historic buildings and monuments in Wales in each year since 1980.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Expenditure by the Government on historic buildings and monuments in Wales, excluding presentation activities and departmental running costs for Cadw and its predecessors during the years 1980-81 to 1989-90 was as follows.

1980-81	1,711
1981-82	2,119
1982-83	2,052
1983-84	2,663
1984-85	3,501
1985-86	3,557
1986-87	3,621
1987-88	4,075
1988-89	4,043

Pembrokeshire Health Authority

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what body will be responsible for procuring health services in Pembrokeshire in the event that he approves the reconstitution of the Pembrokeshire health authority as a national health service trust.

Mr. Grist: This matter will be considered in the light of my right hon. Friend's decision on any formal application for NHS trust status that might be forthcoming.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs in manufacturing in Wales have been lost since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 28 November 1990.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he is making for informing Welsh local authorities of their standard spending assessments.

Mr. David Hunt: My officials have today written to Welsh authorities, advising them of their provisional SSAs. I am placing copies of that letter in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House. Final figures will be contained in the distribution report which will be laid before the House shortly.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Farm Wages

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the increase in the national farm wages bill if the requirement to provide income for workers who are sick is shifted from the state to employers.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Under the proposals in the Statutory Sick Pay Bill, which received its Third Reading on 28 November, the amount of statutory sick pay—SSP—which employers can recover from their remittances of national insurance contributions will be set at 80 per cent. instead of 100 per cent. Also, the additional amount—currently 7 per cent.—which employers can get back as compensation for the national insurance contributions payable on SSP itself will end. Subject to parliamentary approval, these changes will operate from 6 April 1991.

My right hon. Friend has also announced reductions in national insurance contributions worth some £250 million to employers to operate from the same date. Although the reductions will apply over the whole range of employers' contributions, they have been particularly weighted towards those employers whose employees are not highly paid.

From April 1991 all the lower rates of contribution payable by employers in respect of employees earning up to £185 per week will be reduced by 0·4 per cent. This will be of particular help to employers of agricultural workers, many of whom earn less than £185 per week.

The precise effect of the combined SSP-national insurance contributions package on the national farm wages bill will depend on the sickness experience and pay levels of the work force, but the contributions reductions that I outlined will go a long way towards reducing any extra costs for employers on SSP and in some cases will completely offset this.

Bearing in mind the contribution reductions explained above and the fact that most spells of SSP are over very quickly—the average spell is three weeks and 90 per cent. are over within eight weeks—the extra costs for employers, particularly small employers, are not expected to be significant.

Tax Benefit Tables

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish the 1990 edition of the tax benefit model tables.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Copies will be placed in the Library today.

Residential and Nursing Care

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the statement made by the Lord President of the Council concerning expenditure on residential and nursing care, Official Report, 22 November, column 510, if he will tabulate the total expenditure in this field for the years 1979 and 1989, respectively, together with the breakdown into principal categories of cost, separating capital and revenue expenditure, and distinguishing moneys actually received by sponsoring bodies and other Government expenditure.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The available information is shown in the table:

Numbers and Expenditure—All income support claimants in Residential Care and Nursing Homes

Date	Numbers of claimants (thousands)	Annual equivalent expenditure[1] (nearest £ million)
December 1979	12	10
December 1980	13	18
December 1981	13	23

Date	Numbers of claimants (thousands)	Annual equivalent expenditure[1] (nearest £ million)
December 1982	16	39
December 1983	26	104
December 1984	42	200
December 1985	70	348
February 1986	90	459
May 1987	117	671
May 1988	147	878
May 1989	176	1,105
May 1990	189	1,270

[1]Total weekly expenditure of supplementary benefit/income support expressed as an annual figure.

Lone Parents

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security further to his oral answer of 19 November, Official Report, column 5, about the percentage of mothers who voluntarily give information about the father, whether this refers to lone parents or single mothers who are lone parents and whether he was referring to general information which would enable his Department to pursue an absent father for maintenance.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The figure—about 75 per cent.—is based on information currently available from local offices about income support cases where the child's parents have never been married to each other. Obtaining the name of the father is the first step in pursuing maintenance in these cases.

Community Charge Benefit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many hospital patients are (a) exempted from community charge or (b) receiving community charge benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimated numbers of hospital patients exempt from community charge in England and Wales are in the table.

	England	Wales
Persons whose sole or main residence is an NHS hospital or NHS nursing home	42,000	3,800
Persons whose sole or main residence is a Residential care home Nursing home Mental nursing home Private hospital Hostel providing a substantial level of care, and also being treated or cared for in such an institution.	321,000	23,800

The information for Scotland is not available.

Information on the number of hospital patients receiving community charge benefit is not available.

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the cost to Mid-Devon district council of administering community charge benefit will be reimbursed in 1990-91; and what proportion of that cost will be reimbursed in his Department's plans for 1991-92 and each of the ensuing three years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department directly reimburses 50 per cent. of local authorities' estimated administrative needs through a cash-limited sp the remaining 50 per cent. is taken into accoun authority finance settlements. The specifi distributed between authorities according to agreed with local authority representatives. Mid-Devon's share of the specific grant was £ includes the additional money for the work the capital limit changes announced in Although next year's overall totals have been the distributional formula has yet to be d arrangements for future years will be kept u

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of Stat Security what is his policy on the deduction c income support at source.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Criminal Just before the House includes provision for repayr by weekly deduction from income support cases. The regulations, which are intended to detailed conditions, would maintain the existin overall limit on the amount that can be deduct including fines. This provides a safeguard many deductions being made from benefit.

Spending Power

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of Stat Security if he will publish tables using the used in his answer to the hon. Member fo South-East (Mr. Nellist) on 19 February, Off columns 560-64, but using expenditure and be appropriate for families in Great Britain, tog column showing the extent of the differenc from the April 1988 social security changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The tax-benefit m which show the financial position of hypot authority tenants with the head in full-tim unemployed in April and October 1990 are ava Library.

The passage of time, and subsequent cha benefit system, have rendered increasingly any attempt to make hypothetical comparis what people get now and what they might ha a system which was almost universally recogni riddled with anomalies and failing to target h With this in mind, the Government no lon tables making such comparisons.

HEALTH

Addenbrooke's Hospital

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of Stat what representations he has received con provision of staff cover at Addenbrooke Cambridge, on the afternoon of Thursday, 29 when 150 resident nurses and student nurse appear at Cambridge city magistrates court.

Mr. Dorrell: None.

Adoption

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information he has on the prices charged to prospective adoptive couples for home studies by (a) Surrey social services and (b) Suffolk social services, in respect of inter-country adoptions;

(2) what advice has been issued by his Department to social services departments on pricing policies for charges for home study visits in respect of inter-country adoptions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The level of such charges is a matter for local authorities.

Ear Implants

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to his statement of 4 January, if he will now make a statement about the wider use of the titanium implant technique to prosthesis ears.

Mr. Dorrell: I announced central funding for a cochlear implant programme on 25 June including additional funds for Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham to assist with a programme of NHS provision of bone implanted hearing aids using titanium screws. The pace at which wider use is made of titanium implant techniques is a matter for health authorities to determine in the light of their assessment of local needs, priorities and resources.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will be able to make a statement further to that which he made on 4 January, regarding the establishment of a central fund to finance a cochlear implant programme.

Mr. Dorrell: I announced the names of the six hospitals selected to receive central funding for their cochlear implant programmes on 25 June. They are:

Region and Unit	Funding 1990-91 £
North East Thames
University College/Royal Ear Hospitals	200,000
Northern
North Riding Infirmary, Middlesbrough	150,000
North Western
Manchester Royal Infirmary	160,000
Trent
Nottingham General Hospital	160,000
Wessex
South Hants Hospital, Southampton	150,000
West Midlands
Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham	150,000

Air Ambulance Services

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects his Department will complete its evaluation of air ambulance services; and when he expects the report will be published.

Mr. Dorrell: The evaluation of the Royal London helicopter emergency medical service and the Cornwall first air ambulance service is due to begin early in 1991. The report is expected in autumn 1994.

High-voltage Power Lines

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department gives to health authorities on patients suffering from headache, depression, miscarriage, cancer or leukaemia, who are living in the close proximity of high-voltage power lines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The National Radiological Protection Board has a statutory duty to advise Government and others on possible hazards to health from all forms of radiation, including non-ionising radiation. Its most recent advice is contained in "Guidance on Exposure to Time-Varying Electromagnetic Fields"—(NRPB-GS11, 1989)—a copy of which is in the Library. This does not advocate any special precautions for people living close to high-voltage power lines. The board has recently undertaken an extensive review of the evidence on possible health consequences of exposure to electromagnetic fields. This will be published shortly and will form the basis of any revision to the guidance.

Health Authority Reports

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the titles, together with a note summarising their purpose, of the reports which his Department receives on a monthly, quarterly and annual basis from both district and general health authorities.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 14 November 1990]: The Department receives around 100 different regular statistical returns from district and regional health authorities, mostly at the district level. A list of the statistical and financial returns required for 1987-88 and 1988-89 is available in the Library. I will arrange for an updated list for 1989-90 to be placed in the Library shortly.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will update the information in his reply of 24 July 1989, Official Report, columns 481-82, concerning the change in civilian employment since 1979 in the United Kingdom and European Community Twelve.

Mr. Jackson: Employment estimates are not yet available for many EC countries after 1988. The changes in total civilian employment for the United Kingdom and the EC as a whole between 1979 and 1988 are shown in the table.

Changes in Civilian Employment: 1979 to 1988

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will arrange for the hon. Member for Oldham, West to receive copies of all the answers to parliamentary questions given by the chief executive of the Employment Agency on matters related to the unemployment benefit service.

Mr. Jackson: The arrangements in the Employment Service executive agency for answering parliamentary questions and Members' correspondence are intended to ensure that, following "next steps" principles, hon. and right hon. Members receive replies from the person who is best placed to respond promptly and effectively. If the reply is from the chief executive, it is sent direct to the Member and is copied to the Library of the House and to its Public Information Office. The reply will thus be in the public domain and is available on request.

European Social Fund

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he is now in a position to make proposals about allocations from the European social fund for 1990.

Mr. Forth: My Department indicated in May this year the overall amounts of money likely to be available to the main groups of organisations involved in the European social fund in 1990. The individual organisations subsequently submitted project applications requesting more precise allocations of ESF assistance for 1990. These applications are currently being examined by my Department for approval. Some actual payments have already been made, and it is hoped to complete this process by January.

Work-related Further Education

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the amount allocated by his Department to training and enterprise councils for work-related further education for the coming year and the current year; what was the equivalent for each of the past five years; what steps he has taken to ensure that in future this money will be ring-fenced; and whether such ring fencing will continue for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Jackson: As announced, training and enterprise councils will assume responsibility from 1 April 1991 for payment of funds under my Department's work-related further education programme. A total of £105 million will be allocated to TECs for this in 1991-92. This money is earmarked for the local education authority further education service. In 1991-92 each LEA will receive the same amount of WRFE money as it would have done if my Department had continued to operate the arrangements.

The total expenditure year by year on the work-related further education programme by the Employment Department is as follows:

	£ million
1986-87	110
1987-88	106
1988-89	110
1989-90	102
1990-91	103

Arrangements for the funding of WRFE in future years will be the subject of agreement between the Secretary of State for Education and Science, the Secretary of State for Wales and myself.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mr. Gerard Slane

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State Ireland when he expects the investigation int of Mr. Gerard Slane to be concluded; and if a statement.

Mr. Cope: This is a matter for the Chief the RUC. However, I understand that pol tions are continuing into the murder of Mr.

Civil Defence

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary Northern Ireland how many civil servants employed (a) full time and (b) part Department on civil defence; what the t employing staff on civil defence duties wer what the total costs of employing staff on duties are expected to be in 1990-91; and wh any plans for these staff to be transferred to v duties.

Mr. Cope: The information requested is Full-time staff employed on 16 November 1990

Part-time staff employed on 16 November 1990
Total cost 1989-90
Estimated total cost 1990-91

My right hon. and learned Friend the Ho announced on 16 October that he had initiat the options for the future of civil defence arr England and Wales in the light of east-w When the outcome of that review is implications for Northern Ireland, inclu levels, will be considered.

Kilroot Power Station

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State Ireland if Kilroot II power station is to be c if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Final decisions have yet t the form in which Kilroot II will be comple

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State Ireland what assessment he has made of the consequences to the existing and future employed directly in the power generatio Northern Ireland at Kilroot II if (a) it is co other forms of generation are used; and if h statement.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State Ireland what assessment he has made of the II power station will have on transport jobs Ireland if it is not coal fired; and if he statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The main objective in pl capacity is to secure the most economic and e of supply and this will be the primary consideration influencing decisions on the form of Kilroot II. Employment levels at the station will be taken into account in that context. The type of fuel to be used is unlikely to have any implications for jobs in the transport industry in Northern Ireland.

DEFENCE

The Gulf

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of casualties in the event of war in the Gulf; and what medical treatment arrangements have been made.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of casualties which might result from any military action could vary considerably depending on a wide range of factors. Contingency plans for the treatment and evacuation of casualties in the event of hostilities continue to be developed. Two field hospitals and other support facilities have already been deployed to the Gulf, and further facilities will be deployed with 1st armoured division.

RAF Macrihanish

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current operational role of RAF Macrihanish; and how many aircraft are customarily based there on permanent and temporary duty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: RAF Macrihanish is established to support United States navy maritime patrol operations in war. No aircraft are based there permanently in peacetime, although United States navy United Kingdom, and the occasional Royal Netherlands navy aircraft exercise there from time to time.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on nuclear weapons testing.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For the foreseeable future, the United Kingdom's security will depend on deterrence based in part on the possession of nuclear weapons. That will mean a continuing requirement to conduct underground nuclear tests to ensure that our nuclear weapons remain effective and up to date.

RAF Feltwell

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of construction of the proposed deep space tracing station at RAF Feltwell.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Construction of the deep space tracking station at RAF Feltwell is due to be completed in late 1991.

MoD Property, Trowbridge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what property is owned, leased or controlled by his Department in and around Trowbridge, Wiltshire.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Department's property holdings in Trowbridge consist of three cadet training huts, a garage block and an indoor rifle range. In addition, there are 11 married quarters and a small building plot currently in the process of being sold.

INF Treaty

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the timetable for further withdrawals of treaty-limited items from the United Kingdom under the intermediate nuclear forces treaty;

(2) how many of each category of treaty limited items were at (i) RAF Greenham Common and (ii) RAF Molesworth on each reporting date by the intermediate nuclear forces treaty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The numbers of ground-launched cruise missiles (GLCM) and transporter erector launcher (TEL) vehicles, including spares, at RAF Molesworth and RAF Greenham Common on each reporting date required by the INF treaty are as follows:

	RAF Molesworth		RAF Greenham Common
	Ground-launched cruise missiles	Transporter erector launcher	Ground-launched cruise missiles	Transporter erector launcher
1 June 1988	18	6	100	29
1 December 1988	0	0	100	29
1 June 1989	0	0	100	29
1 December 1989	0	0	52	17
1 June 1990	0	0	52	17

The remaining treaty-limited items at RAF Greenham Common will be withdrawn by 31 May 1991.

Special Safety Course

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the nature and purpose of the RAF special safety study course.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The RAF special safety study period enables participants to study the implications of a nuclear weapon accident and the procedure for responding to this extremely unlikely eventuality.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Ministry of Defence personnel have attended the RAF special safety study course in each of the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Records are not held centrally but the following numbers of MDP personnel appear to have attended the RAF special safety study period i each of the last five years:

1986	0
1987	5
1988	1
1989	0
1990	0

Over-the-horizon Radar

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department will reconsider its plans for the proposed over-the-horizon radar at St. David's and Blakehill if no appropriated funds are available for construction from the United States Government.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: We have at present no reason too believe that the United States Government will not secure appropriated funds for their share of the proposed joint UK-US trial of an over-the-horizon radar in the United Kingdom. The question is therefore hypothetical.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how often units from the Ulster Defence Regiment make use of training facilities in the mainland United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Ulster Defence Regiment permanent cadre companies carry out about one week's training in Great Britain two years out of three. The part-time element of each UDR battalion carries out about a week's training in Great Britain annually.

Flypasts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flypasts by aircraft of the armed services have been carried out in each of the last five years for events not organised by the armed services; what has been the total cost of such flypasts for each year; and from which subheads of which votes funds for these activities are taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No central records are held of the number of flypasts conducted by service aircraft during the last five years over events not organised by the armed services, and the information requested could only be provided at disproportionate cost and effort. Flypasts by service aircraft are authorised only if they can be undertaken from within allotted training hours. Any additional non-operational costs arising from a flypast are recovered from the event organiser.

RAF Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list indicating how many of each type of Royal Air Force aircraft have been delivered to his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The following list details the total deliveries achieved against RAF front line and support aircraft, by type, since 1979 to the end of November 1990.

	Number
Tornado IDS	212
Tornado ADV	138
Harrier GR5/7	67
Phantom	15
Tristar	9
VC10 Tankers	9
BAe 146	2
HS125	6
Hawk	87
Tucano	48
Chinook	41
Puma	8
Sea King	7
Gazelle	13

Cruise Missiles

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many exercises to simulate the dispersal of ground-launched cruise missiles from (i) RAF Greenham Common and (ii) RAF Molesworth were carried out between 1984 and the present date.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Sixty-one such exercises were carried out from RAF Greenham Common and none from RAF Molesworth.

Royal Scots Dragoon Guards

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his most recent visit to the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend met members of the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards during his recent visit to the Gulf. They are continuing to uphold the fine traditions of the regiment which will, I am sure, be familiar to the hon. Member.

Chemical Weapons Convention

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on exercises carried out by his Department into the verification of the proposed chemical weapons convention.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence, in co-operation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, has recently completed a two-year programme of six practice challenge inspections at Government-owned facilities. The objectives of the practice challenge inspections programme were to test our ability to demonstrate compliance with a chemical weapons convention while at the same time protecting our legitimate national security interests, particularly at sensitive sites, and to draw any useful lessons on challenge inspection for the chemical weapons convention negotiations in Geneva. A paper describing the outcome of the practice challenge inspections programme was tabled at the conference on disarmament in Geneva last July by my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, and copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

The paper has been widely welcomed as a further positive United Kingdom contribution to the negotiations. The United Kingdom was the first country to embark on practical work on challenge inspection and we are encouraged that others have since followed our example.

SCOTLAND

Gaelic

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the total Government expenditure on the promotion and development of the Gaelic language in each year since 1985.

Mr. Lang: Government expenditure consists of grant aid, under the National Heritage (Scotland) Act 1985, to bodies which support the Gaelic language and culture and a scheme of specific grants to local authorities for Gaelic education.

The breakdown of expenditure by financial year is as follows:

	Gaelic Bodies	Specific Grants for Gaelic Education
1985-86	121,000	Nil
1986-87	131,000	250,000
1987-88	179,123	300,000
1988-89	208,000	500,000
1989-90	298,000	850,000
1990-91	305,000	1,200,000

Unit Fines

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he will take to introduce day or unit fines in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The possibility of introducing unit fines in Scotland is being considered by my right hon. Friend as a further contribution to our programme of measures to reduce the unacceptably high level of imprisonment for fine default, but it is too early to announce firm proposals.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from health boards about problems being experienced in recruiting speech therapists.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No representations have been received from health boards about this matter, but I am aware that there are some localised recruitment problems.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conclusions he has drawn about the availability of speech therapists following the staffing survey of professions allied to medicine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A comparison of the manpower planning advisory group's survey of the professions allied to medicine for 31 March 1990 with the same period in 1989 shows that the funded establishment for speech therapists has increased from 386 whole-time equivalents to 400 whole-time equivalents although the staff in post has remained the same. The manpower planning advisory group is to produce a report on speech therapy in the near future and I will give attention to its recommendations.

Roodlands Hospital, Haddington

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what instructions have been given to the Scottish ambulance service about the availability of casualty facilities at Roodlands hospital in Haddington; and if he will make a further statement on the arrangements being made by Lothian health board for accident and emergency services in the Haddington area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 November 1990]: Lothian health board has asked the chief area ambulance officer for Lothian, Fife and the Borders to operate a policy that ambulances carrying trauma cases in East Lothian are directed to Edinburgh royal infirmary. The board recommends that this should apply to any patient requiring an overnight stay and/or operative intervention.

The health board intends to introduce a treatment service to ensure that minor injuries can continue to be dealt with locally. The board is actively exploring the ways in which this can be achieved.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Surpluses

14. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to continue discussions with his fellow European Community Ministers on Community food surpluses and subsidies.

Mr. Gummer: The problems of overproduction will dominate in my discussions with Community colleagues in the coming months.

Common Agricultural Policy

15. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the costs of the common agricultural policy for 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Gummer: Total agricultural expenditure for 1990 is well within budget. Expenditure will increase in 1991.

Productivity

16. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what comparable figures he has for the productivity of farms in Britain, France and Germany.

Mr. Curry: Comprehensive comparisons of productivity are not available. As a broad guide, however, Eurostat figures for 1987 to 1989 suggest that gross value added per labour unit averaged some £12,200 in the United Kingdom compared with £10,700 in France and £10,600 in Germany.

GATT

18. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress of the GATT negotiations as they relate to agriculture.

Mr. Gummer: I refer to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) earlier today.

Horticulture

19. Mr. Hind: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current levels of Government support for research and development in horticulture.

Mr. Curry: This year the Department will be spending some £13 million on horticulture R and D. A similar sum is planned for 1991-92.

Horses (Exports)

20. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding the live export of horses and ponies.

Mr. Maclean: We have received a great many letters and petitions from concerned members of the public and from welfare organisations who fear a resumption of exports of horses for slaughter. We intend to reflect this very real depth of public feeling in our negotiations on new Community legislation on the protection of animals during transport.

Farm Incomes

21. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will next meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss farm incomes.

Mr. Gummer: I meet the president of the National Farmers union frequently to discuss a wide range of issues.

Uplands Farms

22. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he will make to the European Council of Agriculture Ministers to secure the incomes of family farmers in the hills and uplands of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he proposes to take to assist livestock producers in upland areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson).

Animal Transport

24. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he proposes to review the legislation relating to the transport of casualty animals; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: We have accepted recommendations made by the Farm Animal Welfare Council for changes in the legislation on casualty animals to provide additional welfare protection. The necessary order will be made as soon as possible. We are also reviewing the controls on disposal of unfit meat to see whether any changes are needed.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to improve conditions for the transport of animals for slaughter.

Mr. Maclean: There are European Community proposals for a Council regulation on the protection of animals during transport. In the negotiations we shall be pressing for the adoption of comprehensive Community rules setting high welfare standards for animals during all stages of transport.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the transportation for export of horses, ponies and other live animals.

Mr. Maclean: There have been no recent discussions i the Community on the Commission proposals for regulation on the protection of animals during transpor The Government will press for the adoption comprehensive Community rules setting high welfa standards during all stages of transport, and for th retention of controls to prevent the export of horses an ponies for slaughter.

Farm Subsidies

25. Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agricultur Fisheries and Food what representations he will be makin to the European Community External Relatio Commissioner to uphold the recent agreement on far subsidy reductions at December's GATT talks.

Mr. Gummer: I made my support for the Community offer very clear in the recent Council meetings which Vi President Andriessen attended. I and my right hon. Frien the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will b attending the ministerial meeting in Brussels next wee which should bring the round to a conclusion, and we wi keep in close contact with Mr. Andriessen.

Clingfilm

26. Mr. Stern: To ask the Minister of Agricultur Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on th recommended uses of clingfilm.

Mr. Maclean: A detailed statement was issued in th Food Safety Directorate's information bulletin of 2 November, a copy of which is in the Library of the Hous

Sludge Dumping

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agricultur Fisheries and Food what has been the annual tonnage sludge dumping in Liverpool bay and the Bristol chann for each year since 1979.

Mr. Curry: The amounts of sewage sludge deposite each year from 1979 in Liverpool bay and the Brist channel were as follows:

Thousand tonnes (wet weigh

	Liverpool Bay	Bristol Channel
1979	1,654	358
1980	1,760	393
1981	1,693	328

Tyrrell Committee

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agricultur Fisheries and Food when the Tyrrell committee last me and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Maclean: The committee last met on 1 Novemb when, among other things, it considered the progress research and slaughterhouse practices.

Farmed Salmon

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will announce an alternative to the use of Aquaguard in the marine salmon farming industry.

Mr. Maclean: A number of alternative methods for controlling sea lice infestations of farmed salmon are currently being investigated through Government and industry-sponsored research into chemical substitutes for dichlorvos; into vaccines; and into the use of biological controls for sea lice such as the predator species wrasse. These studies are not yet complete.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Manpower

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest figures for police manpower and expenditure in each police force in Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the local authorities concerned that police strength and the expected current expenditure in 1990-91, excluding loan charges, are as set out in the table:

Force	Police strength[1]	Estimated expenditure 1990-91 (£ thousands)
Dyfed-Powys	935	31,296
Gwent	1,000	33,003
North Wales	1,335	46,196
South Wales	3,124	108,968

[1] As at 31 August 1990.

Registered Homes

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions and how many convictions there have been under the Registered Homes Act for each year since 1986; and if he will list the sentence for each conviction.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is given in the table:

Number of prosecutions and convictions under the Registered Homes Act 1984 England and Wales

Year	Total proceeded against	Total convicted	Sentence
			Absolute discharge	Conditional discharge	Fine
1986	—	—	—	—	—
1987	6	4	1	—	3
1988	9	7	—	1	6
1989	9	5	—	2	3

Young Offenders

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average period of time spent at Cardiff prison by young people aged (a) 15 years and (b) 16 years who were remanded in custody in each of the last three years;

(2) what was the average period of time spent at Swansea prison by young people aged (a) 15 years and (b) 16 years who were remanded in custody in each of the last three years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Coroners Court

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of coroners courts under his responsibility, with the list of vacancies at each court for members of staff.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Coroners courts are not one of the local authority-based services for which the Home Office provides specific grant contribution. Local authorities are responsible for appointing coroners, paying their salaries and meeting any expenses they incur in carrying out their duties, including staff costs. The information requested is not available centrally.

Ministerial Visit (Leicester)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of the visit by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary to Leicester on 23 November.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There was no cost to the Exchequer.

Immigration and Nationality Department

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the income received by the immigration and nationality department for (a) naturalisation and (b) registration for the last 10 years, including 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Naturalisation fees and registration fees are recorded together. The readily available information, showing receipts net of refunds to unsuccessful applicants, relates to financial years and is as follows:

Financial year	Receipts (£)
1980-81	1,184,000
1981-82	1,981,000
1982-83	10,854,000
1983-84	4,795,000
1984-85	2,845,000
1985-86	3,269,000
1986-87	4,241,000
1987-88	14,437,000
1988-89	5,987,000
1989-90	2,573,000
[1]1990	1,127,000

[1] April to October.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken, pursuant to the evidence given by the Director of Public Prosecutions to the Home Affairs Select Committee, concerning the number of police officers obstructing the work of the Crown prosecution service.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Government's response to the report of the Home Affairs Committee's inquiry into the Crown prosecution service, published on 17 July (Cmnd. No. 1145), suggested that the recently established working group on pre-trial issues would in due course make proposals for reducing the areas of friction between the police and the Crown prosecution service. The working party has just completed its report and I shall give priority to examining its recommendations, in conjunction with my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor and my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General.

Hillsborough Disaster (Report)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consideration was given to including in the Criminal Justice Bill the legislation implementing recommendations contained in Lord Justice Taylor's final report into the Hillsborough disaster, announced by him on 12 November, Official Report, column 355;

(2) on what date the decision was taken to implement the recommendations contained in Lord Justice Taylor's final report into the Hillsborough disaster, announced by him on 12 November, Official Report, column 355.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Criminal Justice Bill is concerned with the treatment of offenders and the administration of justice rather than the creation of new offences. We decided in October to legislate along the lines which Lord Justice Taylor recommended. We are now considering how the offences should be formulated and will introduce legislative proposals as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Sports Grounds (Safety)

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to publish a revised edition of the "Guide to Safety at Sports Grounds."

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have today published a revised edition of a "Guide to Safety at Sports Grounds" which reflects the recommendations of the Hillsborough inquiry.

I have arranged for copies of the guide, and the Home Office covering circular to local authorities, to be placed in the Library.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Governors

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received about the responsibilities of governors under the local management of schools.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend continues to receive representations from governing bodies, head teachers, parents and others about the responsibilities of governing bodies under the local management of schools. My right hon. and learned Friend and I are determined to ensure that more resources get down to the school level. It will then be for governors to decide how best to use them. I believe that governors will enjoy the freedom to make their own decisions.

Nursery Education

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the figures for 1990 for the percentage of under-fives in nursery schools, nursery classes and infant classes by local education authority in England, in rank order.

Mr. Eggar: The information for 1990 is not available.

TRANSPORT

Public Service Vehicles

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State Transport what information his Department holds on number of public service vehicles that fail an roadworthiness tests.

Mr. Freeman: The failure rates of PSVs at annual have been placed in the Library.

The extract is from the vehicle inspectorate execu agency's annual report 1989-90 and shows that:

(a) The average initial failure rate over the last five y is 38·9 per cent.

(b) The average final failure rate over the last five yea 20·7 per cent.

Rayleigh Weir Underpass

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State Transport what are the reasons for delay on construction of the Rayleigh Weir underpass on the A when the work will now be completed; what steps being taken to minimise the inconvenience caused to l residents; and what steps are being taken to inform advance those most affected of any changes arrangements for access to their homes.

Mr. Chope: Work on the new grade separated junc at Rayleigh Weir began on 4 December 1989 with original proposed completion date of 1 December 1 British Telecom underestimated the time it required divert its cables which has led to a significant delay. new completion date is 9 February 1992.

A liaison officer has been appointed to help co-ordi the statutory undertakers' works and to deal complaints. To keep residents informed, the contra sends out advance notice of works and the liaison of issues letters about statutory undertakers' works.

The situation for residents has been improved by construction of a new service road, the closure of entrance to the industrial estate, the laying of a footpath for access to houses and the provision of a parking area by the main contractor.

Vehicle Clamping

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State Transport if he will make a statement on the steps taking to enforce section 105 of the Road Tr Regulation Act 1984.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The responsibility for the enforcement of road tr law is a matter for individual chief officers of police.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Angola

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for For and Commonwealth Affairs what further measures planned by Her Majesty's Government to assist the U Nations special relief programme for Angola to help the basic survival needs of those most at risk from fam

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase aid to Angola; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Members to the answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 27 November at column 356.

French Guiana

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Directorate General VIII of the EC is planning to provide aid funds for building roads in French Guiana; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: As it is a French overseas department and not an ACP country French Guiana is not eligible for aid funds from Directorate General VIII.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what environmental guidelines exist for the Commonwealth Development Corporation in deciding which projects to support.

Mrs. Chalker: The CDC operates in accordance with environmental policies and procedures which, among other things, require it to:

a. encourage the efficient and sustainable use of environmental resources;
b. seek investment opportunities where sound economic development is coupled with the protection and improvement of environmental resources; and
c. seek ways of safeguarding the welfare of local communities affected by the development projects.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Court of Appeal

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Attorney-General what is the average length of time elapsing between reference of a case to the Court of Appeal and the hearing of that case; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Since sections 35 and 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 were brought into force on 1 February 1989, I have sought leave to refer 32 cases to the Court of Appeal where I believed the original sentence to be unduly lenient, although I subsequently withdrew eight applications on receipt of further information. To date, 18 of the remaining 24 cases have been determined with an average waiting time of 12·2 weeks. In the same period, I have sought the opinion of the court on a point of law under section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1972 in one case which has yet to be determined. The reference was made on 12 September 1990.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General for what reason the appeal of Mr. Danny McNamee was postponed from 12 November to 18 December.

The Attorney-General: The listing of cases in the Court of Appeal criminal division is a matter entirely for the court. I understand, however, that Mr. McNamee's application for leave to appeal against conviction which was listed to be heard by the court on 12 November has been relisted for 17 December as the court was not satisfied that the parties would be fully prepared, following an extension of Mr. McNamee's legal aid to include solicitors, a change in junior counsel, and difficulties in gathering evidence to support the application. Subsequently, those representing Mr. McNamee requested that a further transcript from a related trial be ordered from the court reporting contractor concerned.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General if he will ask the Director of Public Prosecutions to take over the case of Dr. Malde Modhwadia of Leicester recently referred to the Court of Appeal by the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

The Attorney-General: The Director of Public Prosecutions will be represented at the hearing in the Court of Appeal of Dr. Modhwadia's case. Counsel will be instructed to advise the Director concerning the prospects of the appeal succeeding.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits System

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when each of the research projects mentioned in his answer to the hon. Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack), on 14 November, Official Report, column 180, is due to be completed.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The table sets out the expected completion date for each project:

Project	Expected completion date
1. Effect of the "Actively Seeking Work" provisions	End 1990
2. Survey of incomes in and out of work	End 1992[1]
3. The effect of severe hardship payments for 16 and 17-year-olds	Early 1991
4. Survey of retirement and retirement plans	Late 1991
5. Methods of payment of benefit	Spring 1991
6. The Operation of the Social Fund	Late 1991

[1] This project is partially completed. Results are published in: Survey of Incomes In and Out of Work: Erens, B and Hedges, B (SCPR, 1990) and Garman, A and Redmond, G: The changing characteristics of unemployed men, Employment Gazette, September 1990.

Income Support

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the percentage fall over the period since the end of April 1987 in the real value of the income of a person then receiving supplementary benefit and now receiving income support with a transitional addition of £1 per week, assuming no disregarded income and no changes in the transitional addition except those due to the annual benefit upratings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The level of income support in payment depends upon the individual's circumstances, changes in which may affect benefit entitlement, though not the transitional addition. Any hypothetical calculation of the kind requested could not reflect the varying positions of the very small number of people who still have transitional protection. Such people remain better off than those in similar circumstances who have claimed income support since April 1988.

Cancer and Leukaemia

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many military personnel and civilians, respectively, have been acknowledged by his Department to have developed various forms of cancer or leukaemia as a consequence of their employment in (a) Britain's nuclear test programme, (b) Her Majesty's submarines, (c) the atomic energy research programme, (d) nuclear power generation and (e) any other field.

Mr. Scott: The benefit of reasonable doubt has to be given to ex-service men who participated in Britain's nuclear test programme and who have contracted leukaemia (other than chronic lymphatic leukaemia) or multiple myeloma. Sixteen war pensions have been awarded as a result. There has also been one award of war pension for myeloid leukaemia to an ex-service man who served on one of Her Majesty's submarines. The information relating to civilian employees is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Grain Exports

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the availability of Export Credits Guarantee Department support for grain exports to the Soviet Union.

Mr. Sainsbury: Several applications for cover on sales of grain to the USSR are being considered at present by ECGD. Decisions will be reached as soon as possible.

TAURUS

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of delays by his Department in changing the Companies Act on companies that wish to register for TAURUS and that have a December year end; and what estimate has been made of the costs involved for such companies;

(2) what are the reasons for the delay in publishing the necessary changes for the implementation of TAURUS;

(3) when his Department first established that there would need to be a change in section 207 of the Companies Act to permit companies to register for TAURUS.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 23 November 1990]: No changes to section 207 of the Companies Act 1989 are proposed or necessary. The DTI was aware of plans for TAURUS when it drafted section 207: it had to take a general power because TAURUS was not then fully defined. The DTI has been out to consultation on the current TAURUS scheme and is now considering the replies. Regulations using the section 207 power will be put, as planned, to the House for affirmation next year. The regulations will include provisions allowing companies to pass simply drafted resolutions in order to join TAURUS, making it easier, for those who are ready, to do so early in the two-year build-up planned by the international stock exchange. We are working closely with the stock exchange to ensure the regulations are in time for the new system. Recent press reports tha causing delay have been inaccurate.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Oil Imports

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for N Ireland what is the effect on the balance of paymen import of foreign oil into Northern Ireland; and i make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The balance of payments re trade between the United Kingdom as a whole and of the world. No information is available on the the balance of payments of the import of foreign Northern Ireland.

Nuclear Casualties

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of S Northern Ireland if he will list all the hospitals in N Ireland that have been designated to accept contaminated casualties; and if he will show in hi those hospitals that have expressed an interest in health service trust status.

Dr. Mawhinney: In Northern Ireland the Victoria hospital, Grosvenor road, Belfast is the on hospital designated for the reception of contaminated casualties. The royal group of hospi of management has expressed an interest in trust which the Royal Victoria hospital is a part.

Coal Imports

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for N Ireland what is the present level of coal impo Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statemen

Dr. Mawhinney: In 1989 2,081,000 tonn imported.

Beta-agonists

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of S Northern Ireland if he has any information rel adverse effects on human health resulting from th use of beta-agonists.

Dr. Mawhinney: I am not aware of any adver on human health in this country resulting from th use of beta-agonists. However, I understand national epidemiology centre, Madrid has invest possible link between outbreaks of food poiso Spain and the illicit use of clenbuterol in cattle f

Speech Therapy

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for N Ireland what provision exists or is planned to pro equip a school for special speech therapy for living in Northern Ireland who are unable to spe

Dr. Mawhinney: The following special school a attached to ordinary schools specifically cater for t of children with speech and language problems:

Thornfield Special School—Newtownabbey
Enniskillen Model Primary School—Unit

Gibson Primary School, Omagh—Unit
Killard House Special School, Newtownards—Unit
St. Joseph's Primary School, Bessbrook—Unit

However, any child with such difficulties, placed in any special school or unit because other problems are predominant, will also receive speech therapy.

Provision for pupils with special educational needs is a matter for education and library boards in the first instance. I am not aware of any proposals for further provision.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of bovine tuberculosis have been notified in the last 12 months in each agricultural office in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: The number of cattle found to be infected with bovine TB during the period 1 November 1989 to 31 October 1990 are as set out in the table for each divisional veterinary office area.

Divisonal veterinary offices:	Number of reactor animals
Armagh	408
Ballymena	269
Coleraine	94
Dungannon	139
Enniskillen	191
Larne	466
Londonderry	59

Total	3,249

Glor na Gael

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will reinstate the grant to the Irish language group, Glor na Gael; and if he will make a statement on his reasons for terminating the grant.

Mr. Cope: This matter is now before the courts on an application for judicial review which must be allowed to take its course.

Structural Funds

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has received from the European Commission that the Equal Opportunities Commission and the Fair Employment Commission should be represented on the committee monitoring the bids for structural funds in Northern Ireland; and what reply he has sent.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 28 November 1990]: Recognising that it is for the member state to decide, the European Commission had suggested that the Fair Employment Commission (FEC) and the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) could be represented on committees which monitor the administration of the structural funds in Northern Ireland. We explained that, since monitoring committees are concerned with operational considerations, rather than wider policies such as fair employment, it would not be appropriate for these bodies to be represented. The Commission has accepted this explanation and we have now arranged that it should receive the annual reports of the FEC and EOC.

Irish Language

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the total Government expenditure on the promotion and development of the Irish language in each year since 1985.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 29 November 1990]: Total Government spending on the Irish language in each of those years was as follows:

	1985-86 £	1986-87 £	1987-88 £	1988-89 £	1989-90 £
Prison Education	22,294	34,618	29,400	31,582	37,044
Action for Community Employment Programme	64,002	140,830	187,274	290,855	315,175
Belfast Action Team Initiative	—	—	1,000	2,219	89,204
Arts Council for Northern Ireland	2,000	4,000	5,000	5,000	19,000
Central Community Relations Unit	—	—	—	—	88,065
Origin of Placenames Project	—	—	47,230	100,000	121,000
Total	88,296	179,448	269,904	429,656	669,488

It is not possible to disaggregate the cost of provision for the teaching of Irish in schools and colleges of further education in Northern Ireland. Irish-medium education is provided in Bunscoil Phobal Feirste in Belfast and Steelstown primary school in Londonderry. In 1989-90 the running costs for such Irish-medium education were approximately £367,000. Figures for earlier years are not readily available. Capital grants have also been made in the past to the Bunscoil amounting to £443,000. A further allocation of £20,000 has been made available to Bunscoil Phobal Feirste to assist in the development and production of curriculum materials in the Irish language.

Historic Buildings

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the total Government expenditure on the upkeep, care and protection of historic buildings and monuments in Northern Ireland in each year since 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 29 November 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

	£ thousands
1985-86	2,376
1986-87	2,865
1987-88	2,714

	£ thousands

1989-90	2,772

ENVIRONMENT

Opencast Mines

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will postpone all consideration of opencast coal mining applications until the research recommendations of Roy Waller Associates have been published.

Mr. Atkins: No. Planning applications must be treated on their individual merits and with regard to all material considerations. Mineral planning guidance note 3 on opencast coal mining already recommends that local planning authorities have regard to the environmental, nature conservation, agricultural, landscape, traffic and other effects of a proposal that are relevant to the planning decision. Local authorities are well placed to consider applications and it would be inappropriate to postpone their consideration because of continuing research.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend the terms of reference given to Roy Waller Associates to cover the deterimental effects of opencast coal mining on the entire area affected by those operations, including the route used by wagons entering or leaving the site.

Mr. Atkins: No. As I explained in my answer of Friday 16 November, this is a broad-based project which is looking at all the environmental impacts of surface mineral extraction, including the effects of traffic. If information is sparse on any particular issue, the final report of this project will recommend that further detailed research is undertaken.

Football Grounds

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which grounds used by clubs in the English football league are, according to the information available to him, owned by local authorities.

Mr. Atkins: There is no comprehensive information available. I understand, however, that Halifax Town, Hartlepool United, Leeds United, Preston North End and Wolverhampton Wanderers are owned by local authorities.

Local Authority Boundaries

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters of complaint his Department has received concerning the abolition of the county of Middlesex.

Mr. Key: Since the beginning of 1987 a total of 77 letters about this matter, 49 of them stereotyped, have been received by the Department.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the report of the local authority boundary commission on Humberside.

Mr. Key: I understand that the commissi issued its draft proposal on Humberside. It pr the districts of Cleethorpes, Glanford, Great G Scunthorpe, should be returned to Lincoln commission also points out that it would be power of the council of the county of Hun change the name to East Yorkshire.

Victoria Tower

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary the Environment what was (a) the cost and (b of scaffolding recently erected on the Westminster's Victoria Tower; and if he w statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A total of £1·5 milli tonnes, respectively.

Southend Council (External Suppo

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of S Environment what was the total of external the Southend-on-Sea district council in 1990- the proposed level of such support in 1991-92; the percentage increase.

Mr. Key: Total external support, consisting support grant, net of contribution to the saf receipts from the non-domestic rate pool, fo on-Sea is £51·5 million in 1990-91. The provis for 1991-92 is £67·4 million, which represents of 31 per cent.

Rents to Mortgages

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of interest tenants in Basildon have shown in the proposal for a rents-to-mortgages scheme; and whether he has any plans to extend it to other new towns.

Mr. Key: I have been delighted by the initial response to the pilot scheme in Basildon. Over 900 inquiries from tenants have been received by the New Towns Commission since the announcement of details of the scheme on 23 October. It is now proposed to extend the pilot scheme to Milton Keynes.

Milton Keynes development corporation is in the process of winding up, and is making arrangements to transfer its stock to other landlords. Discussions will therefore begin immediately with Milton Keynes development corporation and the three principal housing associations involved in preparations for the forthcoming ballot on the transfer of the corporation's stock. These are Aldwyck housing association, Jephson Homes housing association and Milton Keynes housing association.

Local Government Finance

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the non-domestic rate poundage increases in Camden between 1979-80 and 1989-90; and if he will show these figures indexed to the retail prices index with 1979-80 = 100.

Mr. Portillo: The information is given in the table:

Camden: Non-domestic rates

	Non-domestic rate poundage[1] pence	Increase on previous year per cent.	Index relative to the RPI 1979-80 = 100[2]

[1] Camden were rate capped in each year from 1985-86 to 1989-90.
[2] Non-domestic rate poundage divided by the Retail Prices Index and indexed to 1979-80 = 100.

Sports Review

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give a full list of those bodies or individuals invited to contribute towards the review of sport; on what date he expects the review to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My letter of 10 September to the chairman of the Sports Council invited comments from the council, the Sports Council for Wales, the chairmen of the regional councils for sport and recreation, the governing bodies of sport, the British Olympic Association and the Central Council of Physical Recreation. Comments have also been invited by my Department and the Welsh Office from other bodies where an interest has been indicated as listed. We aim to publish a statement of the Government's policies and priorities for sport next summer.

Water Authorities

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names and occupations of all members of water authorities' customer services committees region by region for the last three years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Before privatisation the former regional water authorities set up consumer consultative committees on an area basis within their territories and were responsible for all appointments, details of which are not available. Under the Water Act 1989 the Director General of Water Services has established 10 customer service committees (CSCs) to represent the interests of customers and potential customers of the 39 appointed companies. The CSC areas correspond broadly with those of the former water authorities. The director general announced on 27 February this year the appointment of chairmen of the CSCs after consultation with the Secretaries of State for Trade and Industry and for Wales as appropriate, and with my Department; and he subsequently appointed a number of members to each committee. Their names were given in the director general's annual report, which was laid before the House on 19 June and a copy of which is in the Library.

For further personal details I refer the hon. Member to the director general.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which Government guidelines or recommendations preclude industrial consumers from membership of any of the customer services committees connected with the water authorities.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the criteria applied for membership of customer services committees of regional water authorities.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Under the terms of the Water Act the Director General of Water Services appoints the chairmen of customer service committees after consultation with the Secretary of State, and not fewer than 10 or more than 20 other members to each committee at his discretion. The only criteria laid down are that the director shall have regard to the desirability of persons appointed having experience and capability in some matter relevant to the functions of a water or sewerage undertaker in the committee's area and the inclusion of one or more persons with experience of the needs of the disabled or who may themselves be disabled persons.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the number of meetings held by each water authority customer services committee for each of the last three years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Particulars are not available for the consumer consultative committees which were set up by the former regional water authorities. The operation of the customer service committees established under the provisions of the Water Act 1989 is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the consultation draft of the revised code of guidance to the homelessness legislation will be issued.

Mr. Key: Copies of a revised draft of the code of guidance have today been sent to the local authority associations in England and other groups interested in homelessness, for consultation. Copies have been placed in the Library. A parallel consultation is being undertaken by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. Responses have been invited by 31 January 1991.

PRIME MINISTER

Security Service Commissioner

Mr. Allason: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to publish in full the annual report of the Security Service Commissioner under the terms of the Security Service Act 1989.

The Prime Minister: Subsections 4(6) and 4(7) of the Security Service Act 1989 require me to lay the Security Service Commissioner's annual report b subject to the proviso that any matter wh me, after consultation with the Commis prejudicial to the continued discharge of the service may be excluded.

In Northern Ireland district councils have no housing responsibilities; the Northern Ireland Housing Executive is the sole public housing authority.

Concessionary TV Licences

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if the Government will reconsider their policy of opposition to the concessionary television licence being applied to a larger group of pensioners.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Single European Language

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the promotion by the European Community of an officially approved single language throughout Europe.

The Prime Minister: The Government are not aware of any such proposal in the Community. The official languages of the Community (Danish, Dutch, English, French, German, Greek, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish) have equal status under the treaty.

Policy Advisers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the official policy advisers employed in his office.

The Prime Minister: Those currently employed in my policy unit are Miss C. Sinclair and Mr. J. Mills, both serving civil servants.

Strategic Nuclear Deterrent

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it the policy of Her Majesty's Government to publish an indicative list of circumstances in which Her Majesty's Government would authorise the use of the strategic nuclear deterrent.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish a copy of the letter sent by the right hon. Member for Finchley (Mrs. Thatcher) to the Roman Catholic archbishop of Baghdad in September.

The Prime Minister: It is not my normal practice to do so.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his practice to place in the Library copies of any official correspondence sent to him by any religious leaders.

The Prime Minister: No.

Question Time

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will bring forward proposals to extend the period of Prime Minister's Question Time to that of the other major Departments of state.

The Prime Minister: The present arrangements were agreed by the House on 18 July 1971. I have no plans to change the period of Prime Minister's Question Time, and any such proposals would best be examined in the first instance by the Procedure Committee.

10 Downing Street

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make arrangements for hon. Members to visit No. 10 Downing street.

The Prime Minister: No.

Community Charge

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what changes the Government are proposing to table over the poll tax.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to start the review of the community charge.

The Prime Minister: Some of the changes announced by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for the Environment on 31 October have still to come through. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will shortly start a careful review of the community charge.

Taxes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to introduce no new taxes before the next election.

The Prime Minister: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement, but since 1979 five major taxes have been abolished, and in my 1990 Budget statement I announced that two more—composite rate tax and stamp duty on securities—will be abolished.

Clockwork Orange

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will institute a full review of project Clockwork Orange.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Charles Powell

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if he intends to retain Mr. Charles Powell in the same position that he has hitherto occupied in the Prime Minister's office; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Mr. Powell is a civil servant and decisions about his future will be taken in due course in the normal way.

Child Abuse

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on current progress of the inter departmental group on child sexual abuse.

The Prime Minister: Since May 1989 the inter-departmental group on child abuse has met five times. It has made good progress in addressing a wide range of issues in relation to child care, including research and the co-ordination of Government guidance.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Tax and Social Security Fraud

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money Her Majesty's Government estimate has been lost in the latest year for which comparable figures are available as a result of fraudulent tax claims and fraudulent social security claims; and how many persons have been successfully prosecuted in England and Wales.

Mr. Maude: Reliable estimates are not available of the cost of fraudulent tax or social security claims.

The number of persons successfully prosecuted by the Inland Revenue in respect of false accounts or returns and false claims to personal allowances, deductions for expenses and repayments, in England and Wales in the year 1989-90, is 11.

The number of persons successfully prosecuted by the Department of Social Security for social security fraud in England and Wales in the year 1989-90 is 7,212.

THE ARTS

Blind People (Library Facilities)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister for the Arts what types of public library facilities are available to the blind; and what types of resources are available in Braille, large print and tape.

Mr. Renton: A wide range of public library facilities and resources is available to the blind including fiction books, newspapers and magazines in Braille and Moon; fiction and popular non-fiction books in large print; talking books and newspapers; local history and music cassettes, and guides to services and community information. Cassette players are available for loan or use in many libraries, and Kurzweil reading machines in some. Many library authorities also act as agents for the services provided by national and local organisations. Under the public library development incentive scheme, we are supporting the development of a national daily talking newspaper service by Gateshead Libraries and Arts.

HEALTH

Stillbirth

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will review the definition of stillbirth in the light of current professional thinking.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The matter is being given careful consideration.

Product Licences

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assurance was given to the court on behalf of his Department during the hearing in June of an application for a judicial review filed by the Natural Medicines Group and the British Herbal Medicines Association, in respect of a review of the new system of fees for product licences; when the review will be completed; and if he will undertake not to increase such fees further until such a review has been completed.

Mr. Dorrell: The court was assured that a full review of the fee structure was in progress, publication of the review proposals was expected shortly and any representations as to the fee structure would be fully considered in the course of the formal consultation following publication.

We now expect that the review will be completed by 1 April 1991.

As was explained in the consultation letter MLX 180 issued to all licence holders by the Medicines Control Agency on 13 September 1990, a copy of which is available in the Library, a further fee increase is considered necessary and is expected to come into operation during December 1990.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the timetable for the establishment of the first group of hospitals with self-governing trust status.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will announce the names of the first NHS trusts shortly. They will become fully operational on 1 April 1991.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Government intend to continue with self-governing hospital trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes.

Rampton Hospital

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what reasons underlie his proposals to change the conditions of service for nurses in the Prison Officers Association at Rampton hospital, Nottinghamshire; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement about the reasons for the breakdown of talks with the Prison Officers Association at Rampton hospital, Nottinghamshire; and what he intends to do to restore negotiations.

Mr. Dorrell: There are no current proposals to change the conditions of service for nurses at Rampton hospital though the Special Hospitals Service Authority is proposing to phase out the assisted travel scheme introduced on an ex-gratia basis in the early 1970s. The authority is currently in negotiation with the Prison Officers Association and other staff associations about this.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the senior management at Rampton special hospital, Nottinghamshire, will continue to receive company cars or car allowance following the new travel allowance proposals.

Mr. Dorrell: Like other health authorities, the Special Hospitals Service Authority operates a lease car scheme for those staff who undertake sufficient mileage on official duties. It is not restricted to senior managers and is in line with general practice throughout the national health service.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made for patients at Rampton special hospital, Nottinghamshire, to continue receiving visits from relatives during the Prison Officers Association dispute.

Mr. Dorrell: Industrial action initiated by the Prison Officers Association has, amongst other effects, restricted visiting to patients. Management are doing their best to enable visits to take place whenever practicable.

EMPLOYMENT

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement on his proposals for the provision of adequate resources for industrial tribunals in 1991.

Mr. Forth: The budget for 1991-92 has not yet been fixed.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will extend the jurisdiction of industrial tribunals to deal with wrongful dismissal and other breach of contract claims by dismissed employees.

Mr. Forth: On current plans, the necessary statutory instrument will be laid early next year.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the maximum and what was the average time between the making of a claim to an industrial tribunal and its hearing in the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989 and in the first six months of 1990; and what he expects the average of these to be in the second six months of 1990 and in the first six months of 1991.

Mr. Forth: I regret that the information is not available in the precise form requested. The table shows the percentage of applications coming to first hearing at an industrial tribunal within 12, 16, 20 and 26 weeks, respectively, of receipt of the application.

30 September 1990[1]	53	74	87	93

[1] For six months.

It is not our practice to give estimates of future performance of the industrial tribunals.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money was allocated to industrial tribunals during the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989 and in the first six months of 1990; and how much he expects the average to be in the second six months of 1990 and in the first six months of 1991.

Mr. Forth: The budget for industrial tribunals for 1991-92 has not yet been fixed. The allocations for the years 1986 to 1990 were as follows:

Year ended	(£)
31 March 1986	10,736,000
31 March 1987	11,288,000
31 March 1988	10,834,000
31 March 1989	10,151,000
31 March 1990	10,769,000
31 March 1991	12,223,000

The allocations to the tribunals exclude accommodation costs.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has made an estimate of the likely increase in the work of industrial tribunals when their jurisdiction is increased so as to include wrongful dismissal and other breach of contract claims by dismissed employees.

Mr. Forth: I do not expect the extension of jurisdiction to result in a significant increase in the work of industrial tribunals.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many cases were dealt with by industrial tribunals in the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989 and in the first six months of 1990; and how many he estimates will be heard by industrial tribunals in the last six months of 1990.

Mr. Forth: The number of cases in which tribunals promulgated decisions, for the years 1986 to 1989 and for the first six months of 1990, is as follows:

12 months ended	Number
31 March 1987	39,404
31 March 1988	34,233
31 March 1989	29,317

30 September 1990[1]	17,304

[1] For six months.

It is not our practice to give estimates of the number of cases to be heard by the industrial tribunals.

Redundancy Payments

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of all new European Community proposals on redundancy payments, with an indication of any timetable for implementation.

Mr. Forth: The Commission's social action programme contains three draft directives on part-time and temporary work, one of which would have the effect of reducing the period for which certain part-time employees have to work for their employers to qualify for the right to a redundancy payment. If adopted the draft directive would need to be implemented by 31 December 1992.

WALES

Surgery

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to establish a regional specialist centre for cataract eye surgery at Morriston hospital, Swansea.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has no such plans at present.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will specify the target date by which the University hospital of Wales will be performing 800 open heart operations per year.

Mr. Grist: South Glamorgan health authority is expected to complete as soon as practicable the developments which will enable 800 open heart operations to be performed yearly at the University hospital of Wales. Work is presently in hand to enhance cardiac catheter laboratories and intensive care facilities and progress is being regularly monitored.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to announce the location of the second cardiac surgery unit in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Consideration is currently being given to the most appropriate arrangements for a further cardiac facility and we hope to be able to reach a decision in the near future.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department holds on the number of patients from Wales who receive open heart surgery outside the Principality.

Mr. Grist: Comprehensive information on the number of patients from Wales who receive open heart surgery outside the Principality is not held centrally. However, central funds have been made available to South Glamorgan health authority, which manages the regional cardiac services in Wales, and to Clwyd health authority to enable them to secure additional open heart surgery for patients. I understand that between 1 April and 31 Oc this year 92 patients have been referred to centres ou Wales under these arrangements.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of Sta Wales if he will publish in the Official Report (a) the that an appeal was submitted to him against the cond of discharge imposed by the National Rivers Auth Welsh region on the marine fish farm in Milford H and (b) when he intends to announce the result o appeal.

Mr. Grist: An appeal was submitted on 19 Septe 1989. I have instructed our officials to complete urg the work necessary to enable us to determine the ap

[1] As at 15 November 1990. Includes persons registered for the personal community charge at the student rate.

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make a statement in respect of his policy towards the abolition or amendment of the poll tax.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation to abolish the poll tax in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: Important amendments to the community charge have already been announced and will take effect from April 1991. The Government will consider further ways in which the system can be improved.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each local authority the available information as to the numbers of people who (a) have or (b) have not begun paying the poll tax; the percentages of liable adults that represents; the number of people seriously in arrears; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) on 28 November.

Senile Dementia

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report, for each health authority for the latest available date, the number of people in Wales suffering from senile dementia, separately distinguishing the age groups (a) up to 65 years, (b) 65 to 75 years, (c) 75 to 80 years, (d) 80 to 85 years and (e) over 85 years.

Mr. Grist: The number of in-patient and day case deaths and discharges from NHS hospitals in Wales, by district health authority of treatment, with a principal diagnosis of senile and presenile organic psychotic conditions is shown in the following table for 1988.

Roads

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors led his Department to reject approaches by Gwynedd county council highways department for the construction of a roundabout on the junction at Bomtnewydd of the A487 and the Caeathro link road; and if he will reconsider this decision.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The junction is on a straight section of trunk road within a speed-restricted area and it has an additional central lane for right-turning traffic. There have been no reports of accidents in the past three years and the layout is considered to be appropriate and adequate for current and future traffic flows.

Meals on Wheels

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest figure for the number of meals on wheels provided in Wales; and how many were provided in 1979.

Mr. Grist: The information available for meals provided by local authorities and voluntary organisations is shown in the table:

Meals	1979	1990
At home	1,840,265	2,135,133
Elsewhere[1]	531,946	754,565
Total	2,372,211	2,889,698

[1] Meals served at day centres and clubs (including day centres at residential homes) where the main purpose of the visit to the centre is to receive a meal.

Local Income Tax

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wal he will estimate the rate at which a local income ta Wales would have to be set for the current financial in order to raise the same amount as the commu charge.

Mr. David Hunt: Data for any such estimate are available.

Buses

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for W what is the current number of passenger miles travell Wales on buses; what was the comparable figure in th year before deregulation; and if he will express the l figure as a percentage of the former.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information relating to passe miles travelled in Wales is not held centrally, information on vehicle kilometres and passenger jou for the years requested is given in the table.

Pembrokeshire Health Authority

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what form he has received an expression of interest from Pembrokeshire health authority in the whole authority becoming a national health service trust.

Mr. Grist: A draft submission and covering letter.

Welsh Water

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to take all steps available to him to persuade Welsh Water plc not to make any change in the water rate system until after the next general election;

(2) if he will make it his policy to take all steps available to him to dissuade Welsh Water plc from introducing a flat-rate charge to replace the water rates.

Mr. Grist: Chapter IV of part II of the Water Act 1989 allows water and sewerage undertakers to determine their methods of charging.

Hospitals (Unauthorised Advertising)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 193, regarding unauthorised advertising in hospitals if he has any knowledge of touting for business on any health authority property other than that at Wrexham by agents for residential and nursing homes.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has no knowledge of such incidents beyond that which recently occurred at Maelor hospital, Wrexham.

ENERGY

PowerGen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what restrictions apply in the case of Mr. Malpas, the ex-chairman of PowerGen, with regard to the acceptance by him of directorships in other electricity-related companies.

Mr. Baldry: There are no restrictions. Appointments to the boards of the electricity companies will be a matter for the companies once they have been floated.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what restrictions he applied on the number of staff and advisers to the Hanson Group plc who were to be given access to commercially confidential information in respect of PowerGen; and what measures have been taken to limit any subsequent use of such confidential information.

Mr. Baldry: Under a confidentiality agreement between Hanson plc and my right hon. Friend, access to commercially confidential information relating to PowerGen plc was restricted to named persons within Hanson plc and its advisers. The Government had the right to require that information provided by them or by PowerGen be returned or destroyed. This has now been done. Furthermore, the named persons are not permitted, at any time before 1 April 1993, directly or indirectly, to have any interest in any shares in the capital of PowerGen.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer on 20 November regarding the payment of a licence fee to MCA Merchandising for the use of the Herman Munster copyright in the Frank N. Stein advertising campaign, what proportion of payments by WCRS to MCA for breach of copyright will be passed on to the Department by way of mark-up, commission, contingency fees or other contractual arrangements with identical practical effect.

Mr. Baldry: The Government paid £6,000 as a contribution to the licence fee. No payments in excess of this figure will be paid to WCRS, in this respect, by any other means.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 21 November, what was the cost of indemnity insurance against any breach of copyright claims related to the Frank N. Stein advertising campaign for the flotation of the electricity distribution companies; which insurance company provided the cover; what was the excess agreed in the cover; and what part of the costs were charged to his Department by WCRS.

Mr. Baldry: Indemnity insurance is a matter for the advertising agency WCRS. Her Majesty's Government have not made and will not make any payments in respect of costs associated with indemnity insurance.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply of 20 November, Official Report, column 84, if he will place in the Library the supporting visual evidence adduced by MCA Merchandising in support of its claim for licence fees in respect of the electricity privatisation advertising campaign.

Mr. Baldry: The material sent to WCRS by MCA has been retained by WCRS.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 21 November, Official Report, column 147, what percentage of the licence fee paid to MCA Merchandising in respect of the electricity distribution company flotation campaign his Department's contribution represented.

Mr. Baldry: Her Majesty's Government paid £6,000 as a contribution to the licence fee. The terms of the arrangements between WCRS and MCA Merchandising are a matter for the parties concerned.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 21 November, what assurances he sought from Slaughter and May as to its expertise in the law of copyright.

Mr. Baldry: Her Majesty's Government consulted a specialist in Slaughter and May in the field of intellectual property rights.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any time limit applies to the personal indemnity clause applying to all future legal claims against him by new shareholders in the electricity distribution companies by virtue of the outbreak of war in the Gulf.

Mr. Baldry: No such personal indemnity clause exists.

Energy Efficiency Office

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 21 November, if he will give the full establishment figure of the Energy Efficiency Office; how many staff are directly employed in giving direct advice to the public on energy efficiency; and how many of these are principally concerned with the domestic sector.

Mr. Baldry: The EEO's staff complement is 76; all of these and of the similar number of non-EEO staff supporting EEO programmes principally in the energy technology and building research energy conservation support units, are engaged in work relating to the production and dissemination of advice on energy efficiency. Advice is made available to householders through the provision of literature and in response to inquiries, but there are no staff for whom giving advice direct to householders is the principal part of their duties.

Research and Development

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the recent decisions taken and matters reviewed at the energy research and development sub-committee of the European Communities scientific and technical research committee; which United Kingdom civil servants participate in the committee; and what matters concerning United Kingdom energy decisions are expected to be taken at future energy sub-committee meetings of CREST.

Mr. Moynihan: The energy sub-committee, on which my Department represents the United Kingdom, of the European Communities scientific and technical research committee (CREST) gives advice to CREST on the technical scope of the non-nuclear energy sub-programmes of the framework programmes. It has recently been reviewing the possible scope of the non-nuclear energy sub-programme under the third framework programme.

The work undertaken under the non-nuclear energy sub-programme of the third framework programme is anticipated to give rise to information which will better inform the United Kingdom's and other member states' understanding of the energy scene.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on United Kingdom participation on the non-nuclear energy management and co-ordination advisory committee of the European Communities; which British officials have participated in the committee since its inception; and what advice on wave power programmes has been given by United Kingdom representatives to the committee.

Mr. Moynihan: The committee of an advisory nature on the non-nuclear energies sub-programmes of the framework programmes advises on the implementation of these sub-programmes, not on their technical scope; the non-nuclear energy sub-programmes under the first and second (the current) framework programmes did not include wave power within their scope.

An energy sub-committee, on which my Department represents the United Kingdom, of the scientific and technical research committee (CREST) is currently advising upon the technical scope of the proposed non-nuclear energies sub-programme of the third framework programme. The United Kin informed the Commission of its current revi energy and has supported the view that wa should be eligible for consideration sub-programme.

Beta-agonists

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any information relating to the use of beta-agonists as growth promoters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Veterinary medicinal products cannot be placed on the market unless a product licence has been issued under the Medicines Act 1968. No such licences have been issued for the use of beta-agonists as growth promoters.

In Great Britain, members of the state veterinary service carry out a regular programme of surveillance at slaughterhouses and on farms for veterinary residues in animal products, including tests for the beta-agonists clenbuterol and salbutamol. These employ extremely sensitive procedures to detect residues of beta-agonists. No evidence of abuse has been detected.

We also have a monitoring programme on meat and offal for retail sale from all sources, as part of routine food safety surveillance. Under this programme testing for residues of beta-agonists in impo ensure that we guard against the alleged prob countries.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average time spent at low level in (a) sorties which contain low-flying elements and (b) all sorties.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The information requested is not readily available but it is estimated that the average time spent at low level during sorties using the United Kingdom low-flying system is some 40 minutes.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown, for each type of Royal Air Force aircraft, of the number of (a) hours and (b) sorties flown at low level in each year since 1979.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 26 July 1990 at column 527, and to my Department's evidence to the Defence Committee inquiry into low flying (HC 120, page 140), which give information on the number of low-level sorties carried out annually by Royal Air Force aircraft since 1979. I regret that central records do not provide information on the number of hours flown at low level by individual Royal Air Force aircraft types.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying sorties were carried out over the United Kingdom in the month of September.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The number of low-flying sorties flown in the United Kingdom during September were 11,361.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any decision has been made on the locations for Harrier GR7 night-time low-flying training.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed non-proliferation issues with his NATO counterparts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 30 October 1990 at column 503.

However, during 1985 and 1986 all officers serving in England and Wales underwent a minimum of three days' training, consequent on the introduction of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Since all recruitment training is also carried out at PTS where student accommodation is limited to 160 beds, during high levels of recruitment, such as the current year, the capacity available for refresher and other in-service training is cut.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current annual budget for each geographical division of the Ministry of Defence police; and what are equivalent figures for each year since reorganisation.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The geographical divisions of the MOD police do not have separate budgets.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of what is the current annual budget for s Defence police personnel on external co equivalent figures for each of the last fi which subheads of which votes these fi

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The annual b training fees for the MOD police fo previous five years have been:

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is the De strongly supported by Her Majesty constabulary, that the Ministry of De force of civilian police officers operati Act, should be brought into line whe Home Department police forces. In f policy, the uniforms and vehicles o Defence police are similar to but not i constabularies, differing only in the diff badges, buttons, logos, and so on.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of (1) if he will make a statement on

Netheravon for public order training by the Ministry of Defence police; whether there is any transfer of funds from the Ministry of Defence police to the Army Air Corps for use of this facility; and what other bases and facilities are used by the Ministry of Defence police for public order training;

(2) how many personnel from the Ministry of Defence police have undergone public order training in each of the last five years;

(3) if he will make a statement on the nature of public order training given to the Ministry of Defence police;

(4) what has been the cost of providing public order training for the Ministry of Defence police for each of the last five years; and from which subheads of which votes this money was taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Sainsbury) on 5 July 1988 at column 537.

In common with all other police forces in the country MOD police officers undergo public order training in accordance with standards laid down by ACPO.

All MDP officers receive three days' public o training during their recruit course; two days included until 1989 in the three-week long five-y refresher course for constables; and five-day course public order for ranks up to inspector are held from to time. All these courses take place at the MOD p training school at Medmenham.

Officers of ranks from sergeant to chief superinten attend specialist courses connected with public ord Home Department police schools, notably that o West Yorkshire constabulary; and chief officers a public order seminars held at the police staff co Bramshill.

In addition, during an MDP officer's se continuation training is given locally on an opport basis, or when required in anticipation of a parti event. Examples of the latter are the use of Quedgeley in conjunction with the Gloucester constabulary in 1986 and 1987; and of AAC Nether in 1988 and 1989 by officers standing by for the sur solstice activities at Stonehenge.

The numbers of MDP officers given public o training over the past five years are:

	At MOD PTS Medmenham			At Home Department Police Schools
	Constable		Constable to Inspector	Sergeant to Chief Superintendent
	Recruit course	Refresher course	Public Order course	Public Order course	Total numbers trained
1986	726	0	26	65	817
1987	548	142	94	31	815
1988	150	752	514	5	1,421
1989	113	0	359	14	486
1990	453	0	46	14	513

The variation in numbers undergoing such training at PTS will be noted. When the number of recruits passing through the school is small, its resources are more readily available for continuation and specialist training. However, the numbers which can be made available to attend such courses also depend on the levels of operational activity of the force, which since 1988 has been very heavily committed to meet the terrorist threat.

The numbers of officers given public order training locally varies from year to year.

The annual costs of all public order training undertaken at PTS (including that which is part of recruitment or refresher courses) based on student/days, and of external courses at Home Department schools is:

	PTS	HD police schools
1986	136,000	n/a
1987	137,000	n/a
1988	219,000	1,203
1989	156,000	3,238
1990	130,000	1,485

The costs of internal courses and training fall to the manpower and PTS elements of CCMDP's budget, and those for external courses to vote subhead 1L5. No specific costs were associated with the training undertaken at Netheravon and no funds were transferred to MOD (Army) in that connection.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for De how many copies of the Ministry of Defence police a report are printed each year.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Three hundred and fort copies of the chief constable of the Ministry of De police's annual report for 1989 were printed. Si numbers are printed each year.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defe he will place in the Library the latest edition o Ministry of Defence police discipline regulations, tog with any subsequent amendments.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Yes, I will make the nece arrangements.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for De (1) what is the total annual budget of the Minist Defence police; what are the equivalent figures for ea the last five years; and from which subheads of which these funds are taken;

(2) what is the annual budget for (a) personnel (b) vehicles and (c) equipment excluding vehicle Ministry of Defence police; what are the equivalent fi for each of the last five years; and from which subhea which votes these funds are taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: A separate budget coverin manpower, clothing and some support costs of the police was introduced on 1 April 1988. The vehicles by the force continue to be provided by the units or establishments at which MDP is stationed or by MOD(Army) if specialist vehicles are required. Prior to that date costs of the MOD police fell largely on the users of its services, and were not separately identified.

Figures for the annual budget since 1 April 1988 are as follows:

Financial year	Manpower £ million	Non-manpower £ million	Total £ million at current financial year prices
1988-89	95·603	0·652	96·255
1989-90	103·181	0·976	104·157
1990-91	113·301	0·757	114·058

These funds fall within vote subheads 1D2, 1E1, 1G1, 1G2 and 1L9.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual operating cost of running a separate radio system for the Ministry of Defence criminal investigation department; and from which budget these costs are taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The annual cost of maintaining the specialist radio equipments used by the CID, which are similar to those of Home Department police forces, is £1,300.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the operational support unit of the Ministry of Defence police.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The future composition and deployment of the operational support unit is under review. Like other police forces, there is a continuing case for CCMDP to have readily available a body of well-trained officers who can be deployed to back up stations whose resources are insufficient to meet current or temporary situations.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has been the number of complaint cases made against members of the Ministry of Defence police at RAF Greenham Common since the byelaws were declared invalid;

(2) how many complaint matters have been received against members of the Ministry of Defence police at RAF Greenham Common since the byelaws were declared invalid; and if he will list them in the 13 categories used by the Police Complaints Authority.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Between 12 July 1990, the date of the House of Lords judgment on the validity of byelaw 2(b), and 27 November 1990, 34 complaint cases against MOD police officers at RAF Greenham Common were recorded in accordance with section 85(1) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

These involved a total of 53 complaint matters. Details in the form requested are as follows:

(i)	Incivility	5
(ii)	Assault	16
(iii)	Irregularity in procedure	—
(iv)	Traffic irregularity	1
(v)	Neglect of duty	—
(vi)	Corrupt practice	—
(vii)	Mishandling of property	—
(viii)	Irregularity in relation to evidence/perjury	—
(ix)	Oppressive conduct or harassment	7
(x)	Irregular arrest	5
(xi)	Irregular stop/search	2
(xii)	Irregular search of premises	7
(xiii)	Other	10

All these complaints were made by a small number of women associated with protest activity at RAF Greenham Common.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of production of the Ministry of Defence police newspaper, "Talk Through"; and from which subheads of which votes these funds are taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: "Talk Through" is funded from MOD common services (reprographic services) within vote subhead 1L9, at a current annual cost of £15,000.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (1) the total procurement cost, and (2) the annual operating cost of the Courgarnet radio system operated by the Ministry of Defence police; and from which subheads of which votes these costs are taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The total procurement cost of Courgarnet to date has been £2·651 million; the annual running cost of spares and maintenance is £331,000. These costs fall to vote 2F2.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Ministry of Defence police are ever deployed to overseas bases.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: One superintendent is currently serving on loan with the sovereign base area police in Cyprus. Otherwise, MOD police officers are deployed overseas and on Her Majesty's ships at sea as and when required to carry out inquiries. There are no MOD police stations outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) men and (b) women are employed by the Ministry of Defence police; and at what ranks they are employed.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The number of male and female MOD police officers by rank on 1 November 1990 was:

	Male	Female	Total
Chief Constable	1	—	1
Deputy Chief Constable	1	—	1
Assistant Chief Constable	5	—	5
Chief Superintendent	13	—	13
Superintendent	27	—	27
Chief Inspector	56	2	58
Inspector	161	7	168
Sergeant	666	31	697
Constable	3,489	339	3,828
Total	4,419	379	4,798

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of reorganising the Ministry of Defence police into geographical divisions; and from which subheads of which votes this money was taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Reorganising the MOD police into geographical divisions took place on 1 October 1988 as part of a larger major reorganisation of headquarters and higher management, the costs of which, and compensating savings, fell across a number of subheads and cannot be separately identified.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what access the Ministry of Defence police have to the police national computer.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The MOD police do not have direct access to the police national computer. Should MDP require a PNC check, this is normally obtained through the Home Department police force in whose area the MDP station concerned is situated.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) male and (b) female personnel of the Ministry of Defence police are currently in (i) married quarters and (ii) single persons' accommodation provided by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The figures are as follows:

	Occupying married quarters	Occupying single accommodation
Male Officers	771	[1]107
Female Officers	15	[1]22

[1] Excludes those officers on initial training courses at the MOD police training school.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the policy of his Department regarding the acceptance by members of the Ministry of Defence police of awards given by (i) British and (ii) non-British organisations.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The policy on the granting and receiving of honours and awards to and by members of the Ministry of Defence police is the same as it is for all Crown servants. Rules relating to the acceptance and wearing by Crown servants of awards conferred by foreign states are laid down by the Foreign Office under the Foreign and Commonwealth Order, regulations A and B.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Ministry of Defence police are consulted during the drafting of new military lands byelaws.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Yes.

Tern Hill Barracks (Bombing)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement regarding the bill sent to West Mercia police for assistance rendered subsequent to the bombing of Tern Hill barracks, Shropshire; what is the sum of this bill; and to which subheads of which votes these funds will be allocated when the bill is paid.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A bill for approximately £79,500 has been presented to the West Mercia police for logistic support provided by the Ministry of Defence, in assisting the investigation of the explosion at Clive barracks, Tern Hill. This sum covered a number of items, including the provision of meals and temporary shelters, hire of cranes and skips, civil and military transport and contract labour. The bill has been raised in accordance with the normal arrangements for charging the police for logistic assistance from the services. The receipt would be charged to class I, vote 1 subhead LZ(9), which covers receipts for service assistance to civil authorities.

Greenham Common

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many arrests of members of the public have been made at RAF Greenham Common since the byelaws were declared invalid;

(2) how many people have been removed from the area enclosed by the perimeter fence at RAF Greenham Common in each month since the byelaws were declared invalid.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I remind the hon. Member that despite the House of Lords judgment given on 12 July, concerning byelaw 2(b), there is no right of access to Greenham Common for members of the general public. Details of trespassers removed from the base between that date and 23 November are as follows:

	Number
12 to 31 July	170
August	159
September	127
October	197
1 to 23 November	58
	711

However, many of the above cases involve a relatively small number of persistent trespassers.

Any person suspected of committing a criminal offence remains liable to be arrested and charged accordingly, and that position is not affected by the validity of the byelaws. Since 12 July, 55 arrests have been made at Greenham Common, mainly for causing criminal damage.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of policing RAF Greenham Common since the byelaws were declared invalid.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The cost of policing RAF Greenham Common since 12 July 1990 is of the order of £650,000.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what powers of arrest members of United States forces based at RAF Greenham Common have.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The hon. Member will recall from the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, North (Mr. Stewart) on 28 April 1988 at column 242 that the powers of arrest of United States military personnel in the United Kingdom are the same as those of an ordinary British citizen.

Salisbury Plain

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there have been any proposals to rewrite the Salisbury plain military lands byelaws in the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Air Defence Systems

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what real-time data links there are between the United Kingdom air defence ground environment system and the Iceland air defence system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is one such link.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether data gathered by the AN/FPS-117 radars at Bolafjall and Gunnolfsvikurfjall in Iceland are passed on for use as input data for the United Kingdom air defence ground environment system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Not at present.

Military Construction

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the NATO-funded military construction projects that will be in construction for United States forces at bases in the United Kingdom in the fiscal year 1991;

(2) if he will list the NATO-funded military construction projects that will be in construction for United States forces at bases in the United Kingdom in the fiscal year 1990.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the practice to publish information of this kind.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United States military construction projects in the United Kingdom for which funding was requested in fiscal years (a) 1988, (b) 1989 and (c) 1990 that (i) were given funding approval by the United States Congress, (ii) were approved for construction by Her Majesty's Government, (iii) have started construction and (iv) have had construction halted.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand that Congress has granted funding approval for the following United States military construction projects in the following fiscal years.

Those projects indicated thus (*) are known to have started construction. All projects under construction have been approved by Her Majesty's Government. Such approval is a matter for discussion between the Governments of the United States and the United Kingdom. In no cases where construction has started has it been halted.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United States military construction projects in the United Kingdom for which funding approval was given in fiscal year 1991, giving for each project its location, the nature of facilities to be constructed, and stating for each project whether Her Majesty's Government have given approval for that project being carried out.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The only United States military construction project which is listed against the United Kingdom, in those projects approved by Congress for fiscal year 1991, is for water storage at Menwith Hill.

Given that any necessary planning consents are received, Her Majesty's Government are content that the project go ahead.

United States Air Force

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of personnel of the United States air force office of special investigations who are currently stationed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are 73 people assigned to the United States air force office of special investigations in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what powers personnel of the United States air force office of special investigations stationed in the United Kingdom have to (i) question, and (ii) arrest British subjects.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The powers of questioning and arrest of United States military personnel in the United Kingdom are the same as those of an ordinary British citizen.

Electromagnetic Radiation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what research his Department has carried out into the hazards of electromagnetic radiation on ordnance in the last five years;

(2) what research his Department is currently carrying out into the hazards of electromagnetic radiation on ordnance.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Within the research programme, ordnance components are tested against the hazards of electromagnetic radiation for safety reasons. It is not our policy, however, to give specific details of current research.

Cruise Missiles

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of policing (a) dispersal exercises in support of the ground-launched cruise missile deployment to the United Kingdom, (ii) RAF Greenham Common and (iii) RAF Molesworth for each year since 1981.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The policing of these exercises and locations has involved varying numbers of MOD police, several Home Department constabularies, and service personnel. Costing information regarding the various employments of these different groups on such duties is not kept in a way which enables an answer to be given.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest assessment of the capability of the Soviet Union to safely destroy its stockpile of chemical weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We assess that the Soviet Union does not at present possess a capability for the large-scale safe destruction of chemical weapons. A draft Soviet state programme for CW destruction has recently been completed, apparently containing a number of alternative options for handling the destruction problem. A decision on the programme is awaited from the Supreme Soviet.

Lanyard Exercises

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all exercises in the Lanyard series for the last five years, giving the exercise location, the numbers and types of aircraft involved, and the numbers of personnel involved.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Details of battalion size airborne exercises over the last five years in the United Kingdom are as follows:

Desert Uniforms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all those countries to which former British Army desert uniforms have been exported in the last 10 years.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is not possible to identify separately sales of surplus desert uniforms over the last 10 years. However, a wide variety of surplus British Army clothing (with identifying insignia removed) has been sold to a number of countries during that period.

Checkered Flag Exercises

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days before the start of an exercise in the Checkered Flag series his Department is informed of the intention to hold such an exercise by United States authorities; and if he will list the exercises in the Checkered Flag series that have been held at bases in the United Kingdom in the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In June or July of each year, the United States air force seeks approval from the Ministry of Defence for Checkered Flag exercises planned to be held in the United Kingdom in the following United States fiscal year (which commences 1 October).

The following exercises in the Checkered Flag series have been held at bases in the United Kingdom in the last five years:

1985

Nuclear Accident Exercises

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the nuclear weapon accident exercises held by his Department in the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For each of the last five years, the number of nuclear weapon accident exercises held by the Ministry of Defence has been as follows:

	Number
1986	3
1987	3
1988	5
1989	3
[1]1990	3

[1] To date.

These figures do not include exercises arranged by units or establishments on a local basis.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defen under what conditions local government officials a Members of Parliament are allowed to observe nucle weapon accident exercises.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Exercises are conducted by t Ministry of Defence to test the effectiveness arrangements for response in the extremely unlikely eve of a nuclear weapons accident. Invitations to observers a limited to those directly involved in emergency respon planning.

Chemicals

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defen what has been his Department's annual consumption (a) 1.1.1 trichloroethane, (b) 1.1.2 trichlorotrifloroetha and (c) trichloroethylene for each of the last five yea what is the latest estimate for consumption of the compounds for the current year; to what purpose each these compounds is put; what substitutes for the compounds have been tested by his Department; and wh other similar chemicals are used by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There is no central record of pi consumption of (a) 1.1.1 trichloroethane, (b) 1.1 trichlorotrifloroethane or of past or current consumpti of (c) trichloroethylene and this information cannot provided without disproportionate time and effort. 1.1 trichloroethane, and 1.1.2 trichlorotrifloroethane a controlled substances under the Montreal protocol, a the usage of these substances is now being monitored. T current year's usage is estimated to be 120 and 570 tonn respectively. Trichloroethylene is not included in t Montreal protocol. Each of the substances is a chlorinat solvent and is used for cleaning electronic components a assemblies, cleaning and drying precision parts and me cleaning. The Department is currently investigating the u of aqueous and other solutions for these purposes. T only other similar chemical substance used by t Department is carbon tetrachloride which was added the Montreal protocol as a controlled substance in Ju 1990.

Naval Satellite Communications

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defer what is the nature and purpose of the naval satell communications project; what is the annual cost of t project; and from which subheads of which votes funds this project are taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The purpose of naval satell communications is to provide the Royal Navy with secure, reliable, long-distance communications facili The current annual cost to the Royal Navy of procuri and maintaining satellite communication equipment approximately £10 million. Equipment is procured a supported against votes 2E and 2F.

Service Personnel (Illegal Acts)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defer whether it can be any part of the duty of a member of H Majesty's armed forces to participate in an act that contrary to British criminal or civil law.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A member of Her Majest armed forces who disobeys a lawful command may charged with an offence under the Services Discipline Acts. To be lawful, a command must not be contrary to British or international law and must be related to military duty.

Nevada Test Site

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many representations his Department received on 14 November regarding the presence of British protesters at the Nevada test site;

(2) how long before the scheduled testing of a British nuclear weapon on 14 November his Department first received reports that there were British protesters at the test site.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence received a number of telephone calls on 14 November about the presence of British protesters at the Nevada test site. The United States authorities reported the presence of four protesters (three of whom were later confirmed to be British) at the site at about 17.45 GMT. The test was carried out at 19.17 GMT.

Multi-function Information Distribution System

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the multi-function information distribution system programme; what is the proposed financial cost to Her Majesty's Government for each year of proposed involvement in the programme; from which subheads of which votes funds for this project are to be taken; what is the proposed date for start of full-scale development of MIDS; and how many countries are involved in its development.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The United Kingdom is not participating in the multi-function information distribution system (MIDS) low-volume terminal (LVT) full-scale development programme. Five countries are involved in the MIDS LVT development; Germany, Italy, Spain, France and the United States. Full-scale development is due to start in January 1992.

AWACS

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the first United Kingdom AWACS aircraft is expected to become operational.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The first United Kingdom AWACS aircraft will enter service in 1991.

Submarines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the increased unit costs of the PWR2 following the reduced procurement of submarines under "Options for Change".

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is not our practice to comment on matters relating to the design of nuclear-powered submarines.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the project definition study contracts for an SSN integrated communications system.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Project definition studies for a follow-on class of SSN and its associated systems have been deferred pending a decision on the way ahead for the project following my right hon. Friend's 25 July statement on "Options for Change".

Ships (Acoustic Signatures)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research his Department has carried out in the last 10 years into reducing the acoustic signatures of surface ships operated by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: We have a continuing research effort in this area, but it is not our policy to provide details of specific research programmes.

Service Personnel (Deaths)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will allow relatives of service personnel who die in accidents to have access to the findings of the board of inquiry into the death.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is already the practice to provide the next of kin of service personnel who die in accidents which are the subject of a board of inquiry with an account of the board's findings.

RAF Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown, for each type of Royal Air Force aircraft, of the number of (a) hours and (b) sorties flown in each year since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of hours and sorties flown by in-service RAF aircraft, including display aircraft, in each year since 1979 is shown in the table. The figures for flying hours exclude operational flying during Operation Corporate.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it can be any part of the duty of a member of the United States armed forces based in the United Kingdom to participate in an act that is contrary to British criminal or civil law.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A member of the United States armed forces based in this country is subject to the requirements of British law in the same way as a member of Her Majesty's armed forces.

Training Committee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the membership of the Standing Committee on Force Training.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Standing Committee on Force Training (SCOFT) is an internal MOD police committee charged with the continuing review of all aspects of MOD police training. It is chaired by the deputy chief constable MDP, with the following members:

Assistant chief constable (Scotland)
Assistant chief constable (inspectorate/firearms)
Assistant chief constable (personnel and training)
Commandant, MOD police training school
Divisional commander, G division, MDP
Detective chief superintendent CID
Chief superintendent (personnel and training) MDPHQ
Superintendent (operations) MDPHQ
Superintendent (information technology/inf) MDPHQ
Senior police officer, MOD police, Farnborough
A representative of the Defence Police Federation

The Gulf

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the nature of the training assistance provided by the German Government in relation to the Gulf crisis.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Assistance provided by the German Government has included the greater use of training facilities and equipment training.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make it his policy to provide information to the House on the outcome of his discussions with other Governments regarding contributions to the cost of the deployment of British forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The extent to which this information can be made available depends on a number of factors, including the wishes of the Governments concerned and operational considerations.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he made use of the Baltic Exchange to charter merchant shipping for the transportation of military forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with which countries he is discussing the provision of assistance for the deployment of British forces to the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are continuing to discuss possible support for our deployments with our host nations in the Gulf, our allies in the Western European Union and a number of other countries.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Governments have provided training assistance for British forces deployed in the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: British forces deploying to the Gulf region have carried out extensive training alongside forces from other countries contributing to the multinational effort. Practical assistance has been provided in particular by Germany, from where the majority of units in 1st (British) armoured division have been drawn, and Saudi Arabia, where they are now based.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has regarding the costs incurred by foreign Governments of chartering merchant shipping for the transportation of military forces to the Gulf region.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have been given some information on a confidential basis about the costs incurred by the United States.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the response of British shipowners to the need for merchant shipping to transport British forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Two British lines have to date offered merchant shipping for this purpose.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he took to satisfy himself that the merchant shipping chartered for transporting British forces to the Gulf was hired at a rate commensurate with the specific requirements of such a task.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Merchant shipping is chartered for the Ministry of Defence by professional ship brokers who are contracted to obtain the best possible value for taxpayers' money.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what co-ordination has taken place with other Governments in chartering merchant shipping for the transportation of military forces to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None has been necessary.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many telephones are currently available for the use of British service men in the Gulf area; and if he has any plans to improve the availability of such communications to enable those service men to keep in contact with their families.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Service personnel in the Gulf have access to the local civilian telephone network. Proposals to establish a welfare telephone link between the Gulf and the United Kingdom and Germany, including the provision of dedicated phones for service use, are under urgent consideration.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to improve communications with British service men in the Gulf area by providing a broadcasting service for them.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) on 27 November 1990 at column 376.

Leukaemia

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what cause his Department attributes the condition of myeloid leukaemia developed by Mr. John Baird, a 27-year-old Royal Navy engineer.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: As no claim has been received from Mr. Baird by my Department, it is not possible to attribute a cause to his illness.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 181

SESSION 1990-91

19th November—30th November 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
